"A tremendously interesting and exciting motion picture. The facts themselves are wildly melodramatic. The German raid is a gripping and fearful sequence. The British raid over Kiel a suspenseful bit of film business."

Vol. 138, No. 5

WHY TRADE PRESS

FIRST American business paper, Merchant's Magazine and Commercial Review, just a hundred years ago, made its debut with a declaration of policy, observing:

¶ "Commerce is not only a business, but a science, extremely intricate in some of its developments, and calculated to elevate the mind, and enlarge the understanding, when pursued upon legitimate principles, and with high and honorable views.

¶ "The questions which arise in such extended intercourse with the world, are multifarious and diversified. The knowledge and information necessary to guide the adventures to a successful termination, is often complex and difficult of solution; The sources . . . are not always accessible. . . .

¶ "One of our prominent objects will be: to raise and elevate the commercial character—to point out the requisites necessary to form the thorough and accomplished merchant. An expensive education, and a long course of study, is necessary to form the statesman, the physician, or the common lawyer; but every clerk seems to think he can at once assume the practical merchant, and spring, ready armed and equipped, into the active business of life, like Minerva from the head of Jove; forgetful that as pretenders in one case soon sink into oblivion and disgrace, he cannot expect otherwise than loss and discomfiture, if wanting the elementary information necessary to success."

AND this dissertation on the business press long ago had just passed across the desk when came to hand the December issue of The Manager, organ of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, with a piece Mr. John Fitzgibbons addressed to his staff and discussing some box-office notions gleaned from an article in Motion Picture Herald. And he added:

"I suggest that you let your copy of Motion Picture Herald and the supplements circulate through the employees of your theatre. It keeps them up to date on their business, and, very often, somebody in your organization may spot an item of interest you have overlooked that can be used to your advantage. This is particularly true in your projection and maintenance departments."

PUBLICITY 1865

A DELICATE description of what publicity might be, with certain skill and discretion, is conveyed in some yellowed papers turned up the other day among archives of the Business Historical Society in Boston. It seems that Mr. Augustus Dickens of the Illinois Central railway's land department had heard of a possible promotion job with the Burlington which had a lot of land to sell. So, on March 22, 1865, he wrote in application:

"As a brother of Charles Dickens, the English Author, I have picked up a smattering of literary 'ability' that might be useful . . . and I might be able to 'guild the frame, without spoiling the picture'."

Mr. Dickens did not get the job, and the record does not so far disclose why. The next year he died, in Chicago, and is buried in a still unmarked grave in Graceland Cemetery.

Incidentally, the researches of Mr. Richard C. Overton of the Burlington remind us that in this period Charles and the younger Augustus were at odds because it appears that the author, somewhat oversold by publicity, had most unprofitably speculated in a southern Illinois swamp. Probably someone sold him only the well "guilded" frame, and threw in the picture free.

The collections of the Business Historical Society, Baker Library, Soldiers Field, Boston, is the most important and organized array of significant commercial documents in America, probably in all the world. In the files, available to research workers, is much motion picture material, including the records of the first five film companies in America, 1892–1896, presented to the editor by the late Norman C. Raff, and some ten years ago sent to the Society, along with many more recent documents.

SOAP IN HIS EYES

ENTIRELY without the cooperation of Mr. Jimmy Fidler we have at last come upon a transcript of his radio "editorial" in which he so bitterly takes to task "a film trade magazine", Motion Picture Herald, and indicts "major studios" because Miss Deanna Durbin was not listed among the ten topmost moneymakers in our annual poll of showmen.

The basic difficulty arises from the fact that when Mr. Fidler asked the editor of The Herald for exclusive pre-release of the poll the request was denied. Mr. Fidler is much pained when he is denied. He sells a shampoo on the air and lathers easily. Sometimes he gets soap in his eyes, while blowing his bubbles.

The transcript indicates that the printed word is not a familiar and ready form of communication to Master Jimmy. He charges that "the list is all wrong. It's not a fair test of box office value. True, the theatre managers vote—but who owns a large percentage of those theatres? Why, the major studios, of course, and obviously the operators of those houses would vote for stars of their own studios. . . . "

Now if James will get one of his clerks to read the Herald's poll to him, he will learn that it presented first, separately, the vote of the independent exhibitors, then the vote of the circuit exhibitors, then the combined result—and lastly he will discover that the circuits cast a stronger vote for Miss Deanna than did the independents.

What troubles Mr. Fidler is that when he went on the air a-guessing our poll results he made an error. His guess was not so bad, but since he is infallible, The Herald and all the nation's showmen must be wrong, or conniving.

Editorially, there is a question as to whether Jimmy-on-the-air rates this space.

Big Battle Brewing

A BLOW to the tentative 10 per cent wage increases given, most reluctantly, by Hollywood producers, last fall, to some 13,000-odd studio craftsmen, was dealt this week by a group of studious auditors, bookkeepers and accountants, who concluded that earnings do not permit of the tentative raises, and that they should be rescinded.

When the big-guns of organized production yielded, under strike threats, to the demands of William (Willie) Bioff, studio labor leader, for 10 per cent pay raises, in September and November, they pleaded that economic conditions brought on by narrowing markets growing out of the World War II, did not permit any such enlargement of craftsmen payrolls. Bioff told the producers that while he would not take a negative answer to his demands, the producers could submit their books to his unions on February 15th, and if the evidence therein warranted, the matter of rescinding the increases would become the order of business between a committee of producers and labor, assembled specially for the purpose, with arbiters taking up the case in the event of disagreement.

Individual reports of the eight large companies, covering operations for the 13 weeks ended December 1, last,—the first quarter of the war, were completed Wednesday and delivered to MPPDA headquarters, New York, to be forwarded at once to Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount studio head, in Hollywood. Mr. Freeman will serve as acting chairman of the Hollywood Motion Picture Producers Association negotiating committee, which will ask that the increase be rescinded.

The audited reports cover only results of operations from production and distribution, excluding box office theatre earnings of companies having theatre affiliates, since the wage increases concerned only studio employees.

Thus, even companies whose earnings for the three months period under consideration were on a par with or better than earnings for the corresponding period of 1938, were found by the auditors to be in a position in which the wage increases were described as unjustified after theatre earnings had been deducted. Such companies are reported to include Loew's, Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners.

On the basis of international trade conditions resulting from the war, particularly the "freezing" of 50 per cent of the distributors' British revenue and the unfavorable status of foreign exchange, all producer-distributors are held by the auditors to be in no position to grant the wage increases.

In some instances it was pointed out that the "freezing" of $1,500,000 to $4,000,000 or more of individual company revenues in Britain would be equivalent to, or would exceed, total earnings of some companies from production and distribution. In such cases, it was said, those companies still may show good profits as a result of theatre earn- the ability of production and distribution to ings which, however, have no bearing on bear the burden of the wage increases.

How far the auditors' reports will go toward influencing the studio unions to rescind the increases is not being stressed in the majors' home offices. Generally, the opinion seems to be that the IATSE may not voluntarily relinquish the raises, despite the evidence, and that the matter will end up in the hands of an arbitration board, in accordance with the November agreement.

It is believed in New York that the studio unions are less concerned with the ability of the large companies to meet the cost of the wage increases than they are with their admitted determination to obtain for studio workers a larger share of the production money being spent in Hollywood.

Those Markets

AMERICAN motion picture film exports for 1939 decreased 27,600,000 linear feet in positive and negative sound motion picture films to the foreign markets of the world as compared with 1938 exports, according to Nathan D. Golden, Chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce. This is a decrease of 14.7 per cent and reflects in part the effects of the international situation on Hollywood sales abroad.

A total of 160,582,315 linear feet of entertainment film, with a declared value of $3,400,657, was exported in 1939, compared with 188,237,129 linear feet valued at $4,268,818. (Valuation figures are based on linear footage and should not be confused with film remittances. Valuation is based upon raw stock film costs.)

The following table shows a breakdown of the above totals according to percentage change for the years 1939 and 1938 for sound positive and negative film.

Negative	Feet	Value	Percentage Change	Feet	Value
Sound	8,079,437	$ 339,602	— 4.9%	8,498,012	$ 300,351
Positive Sound	152,502,878	$3,061,055	—18.3%	186,739,117	$3,968,467

Brazil supplants the United Kingdom as the largest consumer of American films in footage, importing 14,119,038 linear feet of positive and negative with a value of $268,065. Argentina follows closely with 13,588,743 feet at $227,433. Mexico remains third with 8,785,001 feet at $245,252.

United Kingdom's imports from the United States in 1939 show more than a 50 per cent decrease, which reflects itself primarily in positive imports, since negative imports show an increase. There were 6,692,205 feet of positive at $149,838, contrasted with 14,359,042 at $380,040. Negative exports increased by 500,000 feet, totaling 1,923,884 of negative at $71,108, compared with 1,407,974 feet at $54,892 for 1938.

All types of motion picture equipment exports declined, Mr. Golden said.

Recording sound equipment exports amounted to $217,060 as compared with $283,139 in 1938. Sound reproducing equipment exports were $936,236 as against $1,340,438 in 1938.

Deadline Nears

WORKING somewhat feverishly to place their heaviest guns into line for battle, without any knowledge of the date when they will meet face-to-face in the open, opponents in the Neely block booking bill issue, will learn this week that the zero hour has been set for March, before full view of the entire committee of 24 members of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives in the nation's Capitol Building at Washington.

The House Committee on Tuesday agreed, 'though tentatively, to hold Neely bill hearings before its 15 Democrat members and nine Republicans, with Representative Clarence F. Lea, of California, committee chairman, presiding. The exact date will depend upon committee disposition of other legislation, a sub-committee embarking next week on hearings on a bill for Federal control of petroleum—(many opponents of the Neely bill view it as a form of Federal control of motion pictures).

Unofficially, some Interstate Commerce Committee members conceded that Neely proponents are bringing a great deal of pressure upon the committee to move the legislation quickly, so that there may be no chance of Congress adjourning before its disposition. Committee members, however, insist that the measure be taken up in its proper order.

Many a trade headline this week carried news of activity within and outside the industry on the anti-block booking legislation; opposing sides took their fight before Hollywood for the first time (see page 15); Felix Jenkins, counsel for 20th Century-Fox, said that Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied leader, had admitted that block booking does not force an exhibitor to play immoral pictures (also see page 15).

A Trend

THERE ARE SIGNS of a trend toward promotional aid for merchandising pictures outside of the regular home office publicity-exploitation staffs of majors, as witness moves in that direction by Columbia and Paramount.

This week Columbia and Wesley Ruggles announced that Russell Birdwell and Associates have been engaged to do special publicity and exploitation on "Too Many Husbands." The film, based on the Somerset Maugham story, stars Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas and is scheduled for release in the spring.

The Columbia publicity and advertising department will carry on as usual for this picture and the Birdwell group will do only special exploitation. The Birdwell group in addition to regular work on Selznick-International pictures has done special publicity on "Nurse Edith Cavell" for RKO and "Drums" for Alexander Korda.

Last week it was announced that Paramount executives had decided that "Dr. Cyclops," a picture of the "King Kong" type, needed special handling, so Tom Fizdale, an outside press agent, has been engaged to take care of exploitation, publicity and advertising on the picture. His agency will also negotiate special commercial licenses and tieups. The picture's cast is headed by Albert Dekker and Janice Logan, who are not wellknown at the box office.

Paramount executives considered that because of the unusual phases of the picture, publicity could be handled better on the outside. The regular Paramount advertising and exploitation staff will cooperate to some extent with Mr. Fizdale, but he will concentrate on the one job.

Rather than a general trend in this direction as reported this week on Broadway, the "outside" arrangement is for only one picture and does not indicate that the company plans to turn over advertising and publicity to an outside organization.

United Artists producers frequently use their own publicity staff as well as the distributor's. David O. Selznick introduced the practice, followed by other major companies, when he commissioned Russell Birdwell Associates to help on "Gone With the Wind."

It was reported that Paramount had approached the Birdwell company and also Steve Hannagan but both groups had other commitments. Mr. Hannagan was too busy publicizing the majors' defense against the Government's anti-trust suits, also Miami's beaches and bathing beauties, etc., etc. Russell Birdwell, in addition to "Wind" work, has his regular business on all Selznick productions.

Hail, Decency

A UNIQUE TRIBUTE, from the outside, came this week to the motion picture industry for its general adherence to standards of taste and decency, which it voluntarily adopted, under the Production Code, on July 1, 1934: The Motion Picture Review Digest, New York, discontinued publishing its guide rating the suitability of pictures for families, schools and general public, because "today the movies, if not blameless, at least observe reasonable standards of taste and decency, and, with increasing 'purity' on the part of the producers, the number of subscriptions to the Digest has tended to decrease."

The H. W. Wilson Company, one of the biggest publishers of reference books and guides to periodical literature, and publishers of the Motion Picture Review Digest, in its notice to subscribers announcing discontinuance of the Digest, explained that it turned to the motion picture service after libraries were "besieged by requests for information" "by parents who were concerned about the films that their children were to see," at a time when "the country was in the grip of strong agitation against what were felt to be violations by motion picture producers of ordinary standards of decency and morality." But, the new order has brought a growing lack of purpose, and, so, the publishers now say, "Hail and Farewell" to its Digest.

Showmanship

DIRECT-TO-THE-PUBLIC selling—the exhibitor's field of box office merchandising—was discussed, examined and given proper recognition as a jury of industry experts on Tuesday conned over outstanding examples of the art and craft of showmanship before selecting the winners of the Quigley Grand Awards for 1939. (Page 14.)

The Silver Plaque went to Ray Bell, director of publicity for Loew's theatres in Washington, D. C., and the Bronze Plaque was awarded to Lige Brien, manager of the Warner Prince theatre, Ambridge, Pa.

Uncle Sam, Competitor

GROWTH of the United States Government—New Deal alphabetical agencies as "big-time" film producers seems near an end. Certain of the public and of Congress started a long time ago to regard much of the motion picture activities as "boondoggling."

It was disclosed this week at a hearing before the House Appropriations Committee that "The Plough That Broke the Plains," which played hundreds of theatres, had been withdrawn from circulation, due to a lack of funds to bring the picture up to date, to show agriculture improved.

The same Congressional committee this week refused to approve funds for establishments set up by President Roosevelt, which would take in the Administration's plan for a federal film and radio service to act as a clearing house.

U. S. film and radio divisions were transferred to the Office of Education last July from the defunct National Emergency Council. These divisions are operating with funds carried in relief appropriation measures which were passed before the transfer and will be enabled to continue until next June 30th, at which time they will pass out of existence unless Congress now makes their establishment permanent.

Doubt Bioff

WILLIAM BIOFF, West Coast studio union leader, has not "rehabilitated" himself since his 1922 Chicago jail sentence, as he said he has, nor has he worked at any of the crafts he represents in Hollywood, the State of Illinois, through James Cunningham, assistant state's attorney, charged this week, in asking California Governor Culbert Olson for Bioff's extradition, to serve out the remainder of the Illinois sentence.

Bioff, chairman of the American Federation of Labor Conference of California Studio unions, is out on bail in Los Angeles on the Chicago re-arrest, and also on two counts of federal income tax evasion.

QUIGLEY GRAND AWARD WINNERS ARE CHOSEN BY BLUE RIBBON JURY

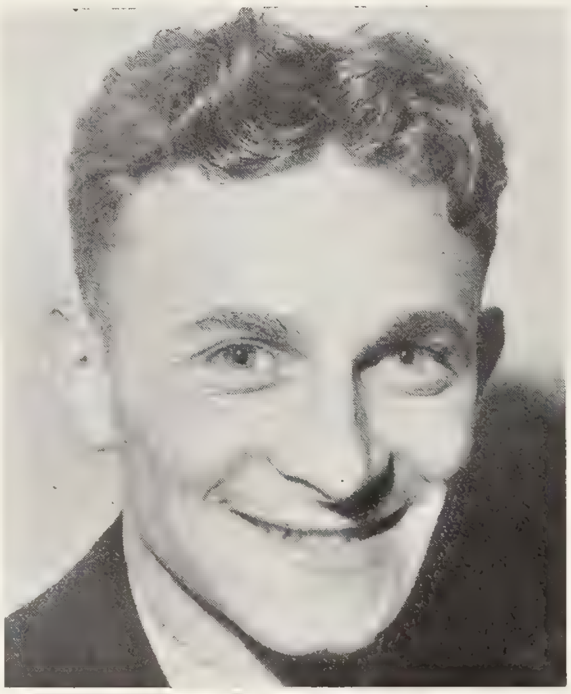
SHOWMANSHIP, the final and determining sales appeal staged by the exhibitor at the box office, again received its deserving recognition this week as a blue ribbon jury of distribution, advertising and circuit executives reviewed the entries in the sixth annual Quigley Awards competition and selected for the Silver and Bronze Plaques two showmen in widely varying situations, Ray Bell, publicity director for Loew's theatres in Washington, D. C., for the Silver, and Lige Brien, manager of Warner's Prince theatre in Ambridge, Pa., a third run house, for the Bronze.

The judging took place at the Hotel Astor in New York City where 34 executives, including several who had come from out of town especially to take part in the selection, examined the scrapbooks of campaigns submitted to the Managers' Round Table by exhibitors throughout the country.

Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief of Quigley Publications, and A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table, were hosts to the showmanship experts at the judging and at the luncheon which followed the balloting.

Quarterly Winners Eligible

The showmanship ideas and promotions admitted to the finals in the competition were those of managers who won places in the quarterly competitions during 1939. The Silver Plaque winner, Mr. Bell, won a Quarter-Master citation in the first quarter, a Quarter-Master medal in the second quarter and plaques in the third and fourth quarters. He has been a contributor to the Round Table for four years and has been one of its most active members. Although he has placed high in the finals each year he has never before received either of the top awards.



RAY BELL, Winner of Silver Plaque

LIGE BRIEN, Awarded Bronze Plaque

Mr. Brien won his Bronze Plaque after receiving Quarter-Master citations in the first and third quarters and a plaque in the fourth quarter. A new member of the Round Table, this is his first year of competition.

Circuit executives who came from out of town to accept invitations to partake in the judging included Alex Manta of the Indiana-Illinois circuit from Chicago; Vincent McFaul from Buffalo and Louis W. Schine from Gloversville.

Value of Showmanship Stressed

The Awards winners will be taken to Hollywood this Spring as the guests of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, where they will be presented with the Silver and Bronze Plaques at a luncheon to be attended by ranking studio executives and personnel. The trip will include visits to the studios and a week of entertainments.

Before introducing the speakers at the luncheon Mr. Quigley thanked the judges for attending. Outlining the importance of the competition, he said: "There are unfortunately those in one part of this industry who believe an attraction board is all that is necessary to sell a picture. Occasionally there is a picture that needs only an attraction board. Unless great effort is put behind the vast quantity of films which the theatres must play, it is impossible for the components of the industry to exist."

The first speaker, Mr. Schine, vice-president of Schine Theatres, praised the Awards and the encouragement they give managers.

"The best way for our own theatre managers to advertise themselves is to send in their work to the Round Table," he said. The first thing we see on going into a manager's office is the Round Table membership certificate."

He said that at first he did not fully

MYERS AND SCHAEFER TAKE FIGHT OVER NEELY BILL INTO HOLLYWOOD

Member High in Counsels of Screen Writers Guild Says Group Opposes Measure; Ballot Sent Personnel

Carrying the running fight over the Neely bill three thousand miles from their home bases of operation to the center of production of the motion picture, Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of the board of the Allied States Association, representing minority exhibition, and George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, representing major distribution-exhibition, laid their best arguments for and against the measure before Hollywood Monday night at an open meeting of members of the Screen Writers Guild.

[The House Interstate Commerce Committee in Washington on Tuesday tentatively agreed to hold hearings on the bill in March. See page 8.]

Mr. Schaefer pounded home his warning of a threat to the industry inherent in Government regulation, declared that the bill constitutes an attempt to impose an impossible and uncertain price regulation upon distribution, pointed out that every worthwhile picture is shown in 10,000 to 11,000 theatres, and challenged the proponents of the measure to show that exhibitors had taken advantage of the 10 per cent cancellation clause to discard pictures they considered of questionable moral content.

Mr. Myers emphasized that three elements of the bill are the settlement of a clearcut issue of right and wrong, an enlarged opportunity for creative talent, and a bowing to the inevitable decentralization movement already underway in the industry. Not only would operation under the provisions of the measure provide greater prestige for writers but it would open up the business to the competition of independent production, declared the Allied leader.

Censorship Seen

Following the debate the Guild held an open forum at which, on direct question as to real intent of the Neely bill synopsis clause, Mr. Myers admitted that, in effect, it would enforce censorship by enabling communities to suppress a picture which the synopsis disclosed was not to their liking.

Late this week ballots to be marked according to writers' preferences for or against the Neely bill will be mailed to members of the Screen Writers Guild and the results obtained therefrom will determine official attitude toward the proposed legislation.

Predicts Writers' Opposition

A high official of the Screen Writers Guild unofficially forecast that its members overwhelmingly would oppose the Neely bill. He based his prediction on the attitude of the writers toward the answer by Mr. Myers to questions interposed by Walter Wanger.

Approximately 200 writers and representatives of various organizations in Hollywood attended the session, held in the Florentine Room of Hollywood's Roosevelt Hotel. Among those present were: Donald Gledhill, executive secretary of the Academy; Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and officials of various independent guilds. Introduced by Sheridan Gibney, the president of the Screen Writers Guild who had charge of the meeting, Mr. Myers was the first speaker and gave an elaborate explanation of Allied's stand on the Neely Bill.

Dependent on Product

Mr. Myers said in part:

"We have no desire to impose legislation upon the motion picture industry that will hamstring producers in turning out an abundance of high class productions. This should be self evident since exhibitors are dependent upon the steady flow of such product for their livelihood; and, further, that our minds are open and we solicit expert help in devising measures which will give us the relief that we must have—I can certainly convince you of that—and at the same time impose as little inconvenience upon other branches as is possible. Allied's latchstring is out. If you find that we are trespassing on your domain, just let us see if we cannot work out a campaign in harmony. . . . It seems to me that there are three very sound reasons why writers should support the objectives of the Neely bill. They are as follows:

"First. Altruistically, because there is a clear cut issue of right and wrong at the bottom of this controversy as to which fair minded persons with knowledge of facts cannot remain neutral.

"Second. Selfishly, because legislation will enlarge the opportunities for creative work and will enable meritorious screen writing to receive recognition which is denied it under the present system.

"Third. As a bow to the inevitable, since the bill is part of a broad general movement toward decentralization in the motion picture industry that has already gained such momentum that it cannot now be arrested.

"Outlet for Bad Pictures"

"How can anyone not utterly blinded by self interest justify or condone a method of distribution which gives producers an assured outlet for their indifferent to bad pictures with no compelling incentive to improve the quality of any except those in the top bracket.

"Mr. Martin Quigley in an editorial in Motion Picture Herald (Dec. 17, 1938) has put it this way: 'The industry's greatest asset is the reputation of the motion picture. It should be cherished and preserved. This most decidedly is not done when pictures which are known to be below acceptable standards are forced upon the screens of thousand of theatres, not by any demand that exists for them—on part of either the public or the exhibitor—but rather by a system which automatically insures their distribution.'

"This method of distribution enables eight major companies which now distribute upwards of 80 per cent of acceptable product used in the United States effectively to monopolize playing time on the screens, thus preventing new producers wishing to enter the field from securing distribution otherwise than through facilities of and upon terms dictated by eight greater producer-distributors now in command of the field.

"It allows distributors to force a showing of bad and indifferent pictures but does not obligate them to deliver outstanding hit pictures. Smash hits either are sold separately as specials, or their delivery under outstanding

Cole Admits Block Booking Doesn't Force Immoral Films, Says Jenkins

One of the strongest arguments of the industry's minority for passage of the Neely anti-block booking measure was disavowed this week, by Colonel H. A. Cole, president of national Allied. Colonel Cole and Felix Jenkins, counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox, debated the Neely bill before the Montclair Motion Picture Council, at Montclair, N. J., Monday night. Mr. Jenkins returned to New York with the announcement that Allied's pro-Neely leader had admitted in the debate that block booking does not force immoral or obscene pictures on exhibitors, a contention which has long been used by Neely bill proponents as a basic reason to pass the bill. Mr. Jenkins' report to his home office in New York was followed by the corporation's issuance of the following statement to the press:

"In discussing the Neely Bill before the Montclair Motion Picture Council at its Monday night meeting in Montclair, New Jersey, Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied States Association, admitted that the block booking system did not force immoral or obscene pictures on exhibitors.

"Felix Jenkins, counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, who opposed Mr. Cole in the debate before the Council, stated that he was both 'pleased and surprised at Mr. Cole's admission as to the moral issue, since the Bill had been sold to women's organizations throughout the country almost entirely on the false moral issue'.

"Colonel Cole's chief argument for the Neely Bill was that under the existing distribution system the exhibitors did not have sufficient right of selectivity in order to obtain pictures which were best suitable to their patrons.

"Mr. Jenkins devoted most of his time to an attack on the synopsis and criminal provisions of the Bill."

BILL WOULD FREE INDUSTRY: MYERS

block contracts is avoided by such expedients as making them roadshows or delaying their general release until after the expiration of the contract period.

Procedures of Distribution

"How can anyone justify or condone a method of distribution which, as regards independent exhibitors, forces them to take all of the pictures, good, bad and indifferent, released by the few distributors with whom they can do business, making it impossible for them to do business with all for the simple reason that they cannot absorb eight full blocks of pictures; which prevents theatres from choosing the best pictures released by all distributors which, subject to conditions of run and clearance, should be the privilege and ideal of every exhibitor; which requires that exhibitors shall lease blindly the maximum number of unidentified pictures which are subject to allocation to different price brackets in the sole discretion of the distributor without assurance as to the precise pictures, or even number of pictures, that will be released under contract; which is enforced against independent exhibitors and not against affiliated theatres?

"How can anyone justify or condone a method of distribution which deprives community leaders of authentic knowledge concerning the nature and contents of films until they are actually placed on exhibition in the community; and since the local exhibitor himself has no right of selection but must take the block of unidentified pictures that is offered, makes it useless for community leaders to suggest to exhibitors the pictures or types of pictures they should exhibit or avoid exhibiting?"

Calls Affiliated Theatres Favored

Pointing out the importance which bloc groups assertedly attach to this aspect, Mr. Myers said, "They insist that under compulsory block booking and blind selling, communities are deprived of their rightful authority in such matters and that the Neely Bill has deeper purpose than appears on the surface, namely: a purpose to protect and perpetuate time-honored American principles of local self-government in all that pertains to environment, welfare and education of children and adolescents."

Continuing, he declared: "All articles that have been written and all investigations that have been made disclose that compulsory block booking and blind selling are not enforced against the 2,500-odd affiliated theatres. I mean that affiliated theatres are privileged to buy selectively from all distributors—a mutual back scratching arrangement that has permitted theatre operating producer-distributors to acquire a monopoly of first-run theatres in most of the large cities, and virtual monopoly of theatres of all classes in certain sections of the country. . . In other words, 2,500 affiliated theatres and several hundred more houses, operated by the three largest independent circuits, are privileged to buy from major producers such product as they need and want to play, and are further privileged to make their selections or rejections of pictures offered after they have been screened. This fact destroys the good faith of and renders invalid every defense that has been attempted of compulsory block booking and blind selling . . . an assured market evidently is not necessary to the production of pictures, since the producers themselves have voluntarily relinquished a large and valuable part of the assured market by conferring on their own and each other's theatres the right to select and reject pictures. No Neely Bill would ever have been drafted or introduced had the 'Big Eight' at any time been willing to yield to independent theatres, embracing most of the neighborhood and small town theatres, the same right to select and reject pictures that they accord to affiliate theatres. Abolishment of compulsory block booking and blind selling evidently will not wreck the industry, because affiliated theatres appear to have discovered what we have all along contended, namely, that greater returns can be realized by producers, distributors and exhibitors alike from giving the maximum amount of playing time to good pictures, and the minimum amount to poor pictures.

BILL WOULD "CRUCIFY" EXHIBITORS: O'DONNELL

"I am not fighting for my circuit alone—the Neely Bill is serious and would be a detriment to all theatre interests," Robert (Bob) O'Donnell, partner in the large Interstate Circuit, of Texas, said this week, while in New York for conferences with Paramount home office theatre officials. Mr. O'Donnell is campaigning personally against the Neely bill, believing that it was almost "inconceivable" that any exhibitor "having read the bill" could be in favor of it.

"I think the bill is crucifixion," he declared, "for any exhibitor. I think that any exhibitor who approves the bill, approves it through lack of knowledge. I believe that the trouble is, that they haven't really 'read' the bill."

He was questioned on the persistency of Allied in pressing the bill for passage through Congress, and replied, thus: "I feel that there are a great many who are against the bill, and they have had a voice, as far as voting independently. I know this much—that there are Allied members in Texas who are on record as being opposed to the bill.

"There are many misguided exhibitors. They should re-examine their own opinions—after reading the bill."

Sees Competitive Field Opened

"The only threat to major companies, and, consequently, to the industry, from enactment of the Neely Bill is one which those fighting the bill dare not mention. That is, the opening of the business to the competition of independent production. As matters stand, they can keep independent productions off their own screens by simply not booking them, and they pre-empt playing time on independent screens by compulsory block booking. With that practice abolished, the 'Big Eight' will have to sell their products on their merits. . . ."

Scoring the Screen Actors Guild for its stand in opposing the Neely measure, Mr. Myers said the chaos predicted was but a very wild guess.

"The bill should be," he averred, "very beneficial to those who write for the screen. The bill places emphasis on writing as distinguished from direction and action. The bill contemplates that, so far as possible, the story shall be completed, at least as to the general outlines and description of principal characters, before the picture goes into production. That material will form the basis of the synopsis which must be made available to exhibitors when the pictures are offered for lease. This should give the writers, or some of them, new standing and dignity. I am inclined to think that you writers have not put a proper estimate on your importance in this industry, and that's something to say of any group in the motion picture business. Exhibitors are unanimous in the view that the success of a picture depends mainly on its story. Under the Neely bill, pictures will be sold on the basis of story content; writers will become personalities and will be distinguished from cameramen, technicians, costumers and purveyors of boots and shoes in screen acknowledgments. Moreover, successful writers will attain to greater prestige and their goodwill will be of immense value to themselves and the companies bidding for their services."

Cites Decentralizing

Mr. Myers told of his observations of decentralization of theatre areas. Lack of parking space in downtown areas caused the growth of neighborhood houses, with a subsequent lowering of admission prices.

Big city, downtown houses are leading influences, he declared, and in his belief too many pictures are still being made for the de luxe big city theatres. He ridiculed prognostications that the industry would lose money under provisions of Section Three of proposed measure. "It not only," he said, "does not curtail production, but it leaves unaffected the amount of playing time on screens of the country. The 'Big Eight' and their subsidiaries supply 80 per cent of better feature pictures. These sources will continue to supply that playing time at least until new competition creeps in. Thus, loss from curtailment of playing time of poor pictures will be more than compensated for by increased playing time of good pictures.

"In some of the propaganda being circulated against the bill, the statement is made that, stripped of all its camouflage, Section Three provides for government price fixing. All of a sudden, great hatred of government meddling in such matters has sprung up. Some of Mr. Bioff's (William Bioff, Coast IATSE leader) associates in the labor movement, carrying out their part of some mysterious bargain, have become quite vocal about camouflaged price fixing. Under the bill, distributor and exhibitor will be free as they now are to negotiate and agree upon the rentals to be paid for films. The purpose of the bill is merely to prevent the distributor from saying to the exhibitor, 'Here is my full line. Take it or leave it; you cannot pick and choose.' If anyone still thinks that Section Three provides government price-fixing, I would be glad to take him aside sometime and demonstrate the difference between prices and differentials on the basis of ordinary commercial gross price list and discount sheet."

Citing the synopsis clause of the bill, Mr. Myers said that leeway has been given in the bill so as not to bind writers unreasonably in doing their work. He said, "If it becomes desirable, in the interest of making better pictures, for the producer to depart substantially from the very general synopsis he has supplied (to exhibitors), there is nothing to prevent him from offering to his exhibitor customers the option of cancelling or accepting the picture in its new or improved form. There is precedent for this." Here he cited the instance of MGM polling exhibitors concerning the substitution of new pictures for announced ones.

WOULD STIFLE BUSINESS: SCHAEFER

Schaefer's Argument

Mr. Schaefer, head of RKO, boiled down the question to four points, namely: "Shall this industry be hampered by Government regulation? Shall we have Government regulation of selling? Shall we have such regulation if it hampers production and retards and suppresses free expression? Shall we have Government regulation, unintelligent if you please, which favors the buyer and hobbles the producer and seller?"

Speaking as the representative of the major companies, the RKO president, in Hollywood for production conferences, declared:

"I believe it is sufficient unto itself to say that when you once permit Government to regulate this or any other business, it is just the beginning and one never knows where it leads to. If Governmnet can step in and regulate one phase of your business it is but a short step to further regulations in other directions.

"We have all had experience with Government bureaucracy. We know from experience that regulations once put through are amended and again amended until business is so hampered and hamstrung by regulations and amendments thereto that in many cases it is almost impossible to function without securing approval from the department and department heads which pile up one on top of the other as a result of regulations put into effect. Government interference by regulation in motion picture industry can ultimately, if not fairly and honestly considered and approved, have far more significance to the motion picture industry than to most any other industry."

Points to Differing Prices

Calling attention to the difference between first-run prices and those of neighborhood houses, he said, "Bear in mind that, unlike any other business, the theatre does not carry an inventory or stock of merchandise, or a stock of motion pictures on hand. It is interesting to note that, unlike most retail establishments which are compelled to carry substantial cash investment in merchandise in order to do business, the theatre has no such investment. The stock of shows necessary to carry on business is secured by merely signing a license agreement, with no investment on the part of the exhibitor. Pictures are delivered by the branch office and paid for one by one by the theatre, which in turn sells for cash to the public. Mr. Public purchases his ticket of admission without having the right to inspect the merchandise. Bear in mind that the average expenditure by the exhibitor for his film program amounts to approximately 28 per cent of the gross intake. Bear in mind also that percentage license agreements generally call for terms running from 20 per cent to 35 per cent of gross. The balance is left in the local community for payroll, rent, advertising and supplies, not to mention taxes. . . . Taking the population as a yardstick there are some 400 cities with a population of 20,000 or more. There are exhibited in these 400 cities an average of seven features weekly, and bearing in mind there are approximately seven features a week produced by all companies, it is apparent that with the entire output available to the public, they have a wide range from which to choose, and they do not have to see pictures they do not wish to see. . . . If Congress were to make an investigation, based on actual facts and not theory, they would find that every important and worthwhile picture has been shown in these 400 cities. These cities with their environs constitute 80 per cent of the American public. Furthermore, Congress would find that every important and worthwhile picture is eventually shown in some 10,000 or 11,000 theatres in the United States. The reason it is not shown in every theatre is due to competitive conditions.

Calls Industry Highly Competitive

"The motion picture business, like 'most every other business, is highly competitive. It has grown and developed under this system. Under any competitive system it is obvious that not all of the people engaged in the business can have exactly what they want at all times, because competition is likely to result in certain individual maladjustments. It is the concern of this industry, as it is of many others, to remedy the situation to the extent that such maladjustments are basic in character. However, certain individual disappointments or frustrations under the competitive system do not invalidate the economic or social justification for that system. This bill, however, attacks the fundamental, basic plan of selling and buying developed under a competitive system over a period of years.

"In recent years the distributors of motion pictures have granted the exhibitor a 10 per cent cancellation clause, of which the exhibitor can avail himself in the elimination of films that are offered for delivery by the distributors. Let the proponents of the bill submit evidence that the exhibitors took advantage of that privilege to cancel pictures of questionable moral content.

"No one will contend that the motion picture business or any other business, for that matter, is perfect; but no one can reasonably deny that its development has resulted in a greatly im-

Neely Proponents and Opponents Press Drives on Block Booking

The big battle over the Neely Bill (S. 280) rages on and on, within and outside the industry, as the fate of the Senate-approved document continues in the hands of a subcommittee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, in Washington.

The big pro-and-con argument of the week was a debate for the edification of Hollywood, in Hollywood, by George Schaefer, RKO president, speaking against the bill, in behalf of the organized industry, and Abram F. Myers, Allied States counsel, speaking for the bill, as a representative of the minority, which is being aided by the Motion Picture Research Council in supporting the measure in Congress. A report on the debate starts on page 15.

The Motion Picture Council, of Brooklyn, a non-sectarian organization of volunteers working for the betterment of films in that part of Greater New York, notified its members, and others, that, "this bill is damaging legislation, which has been surrounded by misrepresentations."

The Philadelphia Motion Picture Forum, meeting Monday at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, following a debate on the Neely bill decided to protest to Congress against passage, on the grounds that "the chief inspiration of the bill is the attempt of minority theatre owners to get a trading advantage by using force of the Government and public against their competitors." Issuing a warning against "minority dictatorship," the organization agreed that theatres would close and a wave of unemployment would follow the bill's passage. In opposition to the main group, Mrs. Harold Goodwin argued that "The independents ought to oppose the big producers," adding that the monopoly of the "Big Eight" was "un-American."

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, which has been campaigning for weeks against the bill, said this week, "The rising tide of sentiment against the Neely Bill by exhibitors all over the country is eloquent proof that the parties most interested in this business definitely do not want it."

Michigan exhibitors have split over the bill, Allied of Michigan favoring passage, and Cooperative Theatres, a buying-and-booking group of 100 houses, opposing.

At a special Allied of Connecticut luncheon-meeting Tuesday, at New Haven's Hotel Garde, independent exhibitors voted unanimous support of the Neely Bill, and instructed the executive secretary, Lawrence C. Caplan, to so advise the Connecticut representatives in Congress. The action followed a prolonged debate in which members of Connecticut MPTO, invited to attend, voiced their opposition to the bill. Frank Lydon, regional vice-president, and Arthur K. Howard, business agent of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of Boston, were the guest speakers. A. M. Schuman, Bridgeport, presided.

Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, addressed a New Rochelle, N. Y., group last week on the evils of the bill.

Harry Goldberg, Warner Circuit advertising-publicity director, will speak against it at a Philadelphia women's club group this month, with Allied's Sidney Samuelson on the opposite side of a debate.

proved form of entertainment values to the public at low cost. It should be apparent, however, that the industry itself has sought and will continue to seek self-improvement. That it has sought and will continue to seek improvement is best evidenced by the adoption of the moral code for production.

Warns of Price Regulation

"Most important of all, however, is the attempt to impose an impossible and uncertain price regulation of distributors. . . . This (section three) is hobbling free enterprise legally and commercially and without affecting any benefit to the public, but working a hardship on the industry. I point this out because we are asked to scrap the present mechanism for a new and untried one. . . . The company I represent is planning to make 48 pictures next season, involving an expenditure of approximately $20,000,000. This bill prohibits us from selling our product to the best of our ability, and, I believe, takes away our constitutional rights and hamstrings the American system of free enterprise. . . . To accomplish the purpose of this bill it is proposed severely to punish any method of reducing prices in order to influence the exhibitor to select more of the pictures offered than he would otherwise take or any other means that may be devised by the distributor to secure the lease or licensing of a larger quantity of films; in fact, it is compulsory instalment buying. The vague and uncertain nature of this provision makes it impossible for a manufacturer to know definitely whether any sort of discount or special price for quantity purchased would be definitely in violation of law, or at least not until such manufacturer is indicted and tried in court for such alleged violation as may be charged. . . .

"Will Not Increase Selection"

"It does not accomplish the stated purpose of the bill, to wit, 'to establish community freedom in selection of motion picture films,' in that it has not been shown and cannot be shown that the operations of this bill will increase such freedom of selection. It still maintains a necessary relation between the producer and exhibitor, with no new contact by either with the public. At the present time, under our competitive system, all of the films produced in this country are required for exhibition in various theatres throughout the country. The number of pictures that may be shown in a given period of time depends entirely on the operating policy of the theatre, which policy is controlled by the management. Hence, the public has the same freedom of choice as it would have if there were any change in the method of buying and selling as between manufacturer and exhibitor."

Calling the Neely proposal an untried theory, Mr. Schaefer declared that no magazine, following its reasoning, could sell a year's subscription without first delineating the contents of its issues for the 12-month period.

"Motion pictures are not made strictly to specifications, such as those to which drugs or food or bricks and mortar are made. They are creations which are an intangible blend of careful thinking, imagination, artistic sense and a combination of qualities generally referred to as showmanship. To follow the proponent's line of reasoning would be like asking an author to give a detailed summary of his entire treatment of story situations and character development before his book is written, which leaves out the factor of imagination, judgment as to changes, and inspiration as to character and situation development. I doubt if any successful motion picture has ever been made without substantial changes in either plot, dialogue, situations or character treatment.

EUROPE AND PROPAGANDA

A News of the Day newsreel showing the progress of the war in graphic form has been withdrawn from a leading Belgrade theatre after energetic protests by the German Legation. The film had already been approved by the official censor, who now has reversed his decision. It is understood that the principal ground for the complaint was the showing of a German loss of 12 Messerschmidt planes in combat with British Royal Air Force machines.

In an effort to whip up patriotism in its war with Finland, Russia's propaganda department has reissued Sergei Eisenstein's "Alexander Nevsky," after ordering deletions of all episodes in any way derogatory to the Nazi, but leaving in any that might offend the Fascists, because of Italy's aid to Finland.

Through the department of propaganda for foreign nations, the French Commissary General of Information has sent 15 selected French documentary films to Japan. The films are to be shown as a part of the regular programs in Japanese theatres, with part of the revenue being sent back to France.

"This all being true, no manufacturer under this bill could begin to market his product until the film is completed. Even then, it will be practically impossible to express on paper in synopsis form the various aspects of the story which will be received by the individual through the combination of vision and sound when the picture is actually shown. It must be obvious that an entirely different impression can be created on a single situation, depending upon the manner in which the line is spoken and the gestures accompanying it remade . . . I state to you very frankly that even after the picture is fully completed, edited and approved by the Motion Picture Production Code, it would be impossible for the producer to operate under this bill, no matter how earnest he may be in his efforts to do so, without great danger or severe penalties. Actually, under the provisions of this bill, even after the picture is completed and shown to the prospective customer, a contract could not be entered into unless a detailed synopsis is furnished, and yet the customer has seen the completed article."

The Neely bill also would prohibit the exhibitor from buying all the pictures of a single company voluntarily, Mr. Schaefer said. In rebuttal, Mr. Schaefer said, affiliated theatre men are given the same block booking terms as independents; and that term 'Big Eight' was just a slogan concocted by proponents of the bill to propagandize their campaign.

Mr. Wanger precipitated a storm by asking Mr. Myers how he could reconcile the statement that civic-minded groups and others would govern the exhibitors' choice of films, in view of the implied governmental censorship of motion pictures in the Neely bill.

Denying that censorship by the Government was intended in the proposed measure, Mr. Myers said that proponents of the bill were of the opinion that through greater exhibitor choice of programs, local influences would be brought to bear in order that patrons in the vicinity would obtain suitable film fare.

Recent Product Cited

Mr. Wanger then asked what Mr. Myers meant by the statement that exhibitors would aid "experimentation" by writers and producers in the field of new thematic endeavors, and asked also how such films as "Of Mice and Men," "The Grapes of Wrath," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" would be affected.

Mr. Myers replied: "Some of them are taken from books which are so filthy that they should not be allowed in American homes. The average teacher would be prejudiced against such books as 'Grapes' and 'Mice and Men' because of their filth. Through their influence and the influence of other such groups, exhibitors in certain locales would not show those pictures.

"And, Mr. Wanger, you would not have made 'Blockade' if the Neely bill were enacted. You wouldn't have gone through the headaches you did if you had known, as you would under the Neely bill, of the antagonism of Catholic communities to that film."

At the mention of "filthy books," Mr. Myers was hissed by the audience.

Mr. Schaefer, in response to a question from the audience, asked of Mr. Myers where "civic minded groups who under the Neely bill would promote good pictures" were when "Peter Pan" and "A Kiss for Cinderella," to name two, were made by Paramount.

One writer, as he left the meeting, was overheard discussing the Neely bill with a companion.

Queried he: "What happens if I should go to jail for furnishing an inaccurate synopsis for a picture? Will everything that I write while I'm in prison be the property of the studio?"

"PINOCCHIO", "OLD NEW YORK" AND "EDISON" ARE NEXT "BIG" ARRIVALS

Walt Disney Cartoon Feature Opening at New York's Center Theatre; Others at Miami Beach and Port Huron

Highlights on the long stream of motion pictures flowing from Hollywood to the screens of the country continue to receive special merchandising effort directed toward the fanfare of "world premiere" introduction.

Adding to the "Gone With the Wind," the "Blue Bird," "Grapes of Wrath" and half-a-dozen others of recent weeks, now come "Pinocchio," third feature cartoon in film history, under RKO auspices, and Twentieth Century-Fox's "Little Old New York," to be followed next week by Paramount's "Seventeen" and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Young Tom Edison," and, shortly after, Radio's "Swiss Family Robinson," and United Artists' "Rebecca," each receiving concentrated attention of the staffs of their sponsors from home office and field. (Showmen's Reviews of "Pinocchio" and "Swiss Family Robinson" appear on page 42.)

Republic Pictures this week joined the trend toward "big time," "big town" introductions to new product, taking a large gathering to a banquet in Greenwich Village to witness the first public showing of its "Village Barn Dance." (Reviewed on page 44.

RKO pushed ahead this week with its new "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," and MGM with its "Gone With the Wind."

Loew's circuit officials Wednesday estimated that "Gone with the Wind" will gross from $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 in the circuit's approximately 125 theatres.

"Pinocchio" Arrives

"Pinocchio," Walt Disney's first feature length cartoon since the record breaking "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" originated that form of screen entertainment, opens on next Wednesday night, February 7th, at the Center theatre in Radio City. Before the picture even opens Pinocchio and other characters in the picture are well known throughout the country on account of the space given to the picture in newspapers and magazines and through merchandise inspired by Disney characters.

The advance campaign on the picture has been going on for months and the record already achieved is notable in motion picture advertising and exploitation, even without considering the fact that the picture has not yet opened. Sixty-three national magazines, including 11 front covers, have carried material on the picture. A total of 93 national magazines have commitments to use material on "Pinocchio."

Sixty million American families have been reached through the King Features' comic strip on "Pinocchio." Two weeks preceding the first installment every newspaper carried large advertisements announcing the comic strip.

72 Department Stores Cooperate

A total of 72 department stores, all over the country, contracted to use life-like Walt Disney "Pinocchio" displays made by the Old King Cole, Inc., of Canton, O.

More than 200,000 chain stores have been handling "Pinocchio" volumes in the lower-price bracket, ranging form 10 to 25 cents.

Among the highlights in the "Pinocchio" advance campaign are the following: 20 pages in the October issue of Good Housekeeping; a double spread in This Week Magazine; spread in the magazine section of the New York Times; distribution of thousands of "Pinocchio" give-away books at Christmas through over 100 merchants in the country.

A total of 1,389 merchandise managers of department stores all over the country and other key men who are in a position to cooperate with theatre men on "Pinocchio" promotion have been sent announcements on the picture and its opening at the Center theatre.

A Pinocchio skating carnival was held last Thursday at the Rockefeller Plaza Skating Pond. Dorothy Lewis, star of the ice show at the Iridium Room of the St. Regis Hotel, headed the show.

Another Rockefeller Center activity in connection with the opening is a Pinocchio costume party to be held in the Rainbow Room immediately after the world premiere.

Special press offices have been established in the Center theatre to handle the "Pinocchio" run. Richard Condon is in charge of the exploitation and is assisted by John McGeehan. Douglas Whitney is handling the publicity and Toni Spitzer of the RKO office and Robert Baral, handling the trade coverage, assisted.

John K. Hyatt, managing director of the Center theatre has added 50 ushers, bringing the staff up to 75 and ten additional cashiers.

"Old New York" Premiere

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Little Old New York" had its world premiere at the Lincoln theatre in Miami Beach Wednesday night with all the accoutrements of a Broadway or a Hollywood opening.

The climax of the extensive advance publicity campaign was a contest sponsored by the Miami Daily News to elect the "Mayor" of "Little Old New York" from among the Manhattan figures in Miami Beach.

The Mayors of Miami and Miami Beach attended the premiere, flanked by other high-ranking city officials.

Notables in the fields of production, distribution and exhibition present included A. H. Blank, Nicholas M. Schenck, Major Albert Warner, N. L. Nathanson, Harry Brandt, William Brant, E. J. Sparks, Frank Rogers, Leo Spitz, Norman Moray, Herman Robbins, George Skouras, Ben Sherman, George Weeks, Harry

Warners Cite 21 "69th" Openings As Exceeding Its Last Top Grosser

Warner Brothers' home office Wednesday morning claimed that its new "Fighting 69th", which first opened in the field during the week, was running ahead of "Angels with Dirty Faces", its top grosser of last year, in 21 cities, in the first two to five days of playing. The company compares the opening grosses of both pictures as follows:

New York	Strand	3	$31,399	$29,288

Wednesday afternoon Warners predicted a house record for the "key" run at the Broadway Strand. Opening at 8:15 Monday morning, the picture played to eight shows that day, with six stage shows, a record in performances for a Monday. Backed by a heavy local campaign, which culminated with a banquet and showing at a reunion dinner by the regiment in New York's Waldorf Astoria, last Wednesday evening, and with similar "69th" reunion dinners in 39 cities, the picture this week opened in 365 spots.

"LINCOLN" UNIVERSITY ANNIVERSARY

Ross, Louis Frisch, M. B. Shanberg, Martin Mullin, Sam Pinanski, George J. Schaefer and Sidney Meyer and Mitchell Wolfson, operators of the Lincoln theatre and the Wometco circuit.

Roger Ferri, editor of "Dynamo," Twentieth Century-Fox publication, issued a special edition in Miami Beach. Assisting Sonny Shepherd, manager of the Lincoln, in the campaign were Carl Erbe, of the field exploitation staff, and Chisty Wilbert of the home office.

Following the opening of "Little Old New York" at the Lincoln theatre in Miami Beach on January 31st, the picture will play a number of pre-release engagements.

"Seventeen" Premiere

Seventeen 17-year-old girls from as many cities will journey to Hollywood for the February 14th premiere of Paramount's "Seventeen." Each girl will be accompanied by a chaperon. The girls and their escorts will be in Hollywood three days. They are to be chosen by newspaper editors and exhibitors in each city; they are to be the prettiest in each locality. Among the cities in which the newspaper polls are being held are Buffalo, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Little Rock, Memphis, Omaha, Minneapolis, and San Francisco.

Jackie Cooper and Betty Moran of the "Seventeen" cast, will be the Hollywood hosts.

"Edison" at Port Huron

MGM's "world premiere" of "Young Tom Edison" is to be held at Port Huron, Michigan, on February 11th.

Among the MGM personnel to be present will be Louis B. Mayer, Howard Strickling, Howard Dietz, Barret Kiesling, Mickey Rooney.

The historic "Edison Train" of the 1850's, owned by Henry Ford, will be on display in Port Huron, and will visit the various cities in the area. The train has an old wood-burning locomotive; its procession, with celebrities aboard, and through the various towns, and upon its arrivel in Port Huron, will be attended by celebrations peculiar to the picture's early Americana theme. Port Huron towns people are to join in the mood, wearing sideburns, and other facial adornments of the 1850's, and also to wear the clothing of the time.

"Swiss Family Robinson"

"Rebecca" in Miami

David O. Selznick's "Rebecca" opens on February 21st at the Lincoln theatre, Miami Beach, Florida.

"Village Barn Dance" Premiere

Republic's "Village Barn Dance," starring Richard Cromwell and Esther Dale, was given a world premiere last Friday evening at the Village Barn, Greenwich Village, New York, night club, with some 150 newspaper reviewers, fan magazine and trade paper writers, exhibitors, Republic personnel and stage and screen stars present.

Among the notables were H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries; Amon Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram; Gene Autry, Republic western star; Judy Canova, singer of folk music; New York Councilman Alfred E. Smith, Jr.; Robert Johnson, assistant publisher of the New York Daily Mirror; Marvin Schenck, of Loew's; Grover Schaefer, treasurer of Republic, and Joseph Bernhard, manager of the Warner theatre circuit.

THEATRE TICKETS INCLUDE BUS FARE

Starting February 1st, tickets for the Paramount theatre in Hamilton, Ohio, a Northio circuit house, will be sold on all city buses after 6:00 P.M. at the regular evening admission of 40 cents. The ticket will entitle the patron to free bus transportation to and from the theare.

"Lincoln" Southern Opening

The Southern States premiere of the RKO picture was held Saturday at Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, Tennessee. The screening was part of the fiftieth anniversay of the University. Governors of three states, legislators, educators, screen stars and representatives of the industry attended.

The opening was a special gala event with California notables and screen personalities attending. The price for the opening was $5.50.

The ceremonies began Friday night at a ball at which Governor Keen Johnson of Kentucky played host to Mary Howard, one of the featured players in the screen version of the Pulitzer Prize play.

A dinner was held Saturday night before the showing at the University. Robert E. Sherwood, Herman DeVry, Chicago motion picture pioneer, and Harry M. Goetz also were expected.

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" opened Thursday at the Four Star theatre in Los Angeles. Ticket scale for the pre-release engagement, on a two-a-day basis, all-reserved-seat basis, is 83 cents and $1.10 for the matinees and $1.10 and $1.65 for the evenings.

Fifteen hundred persons attended a special exhibitors' preview of "Abe Lincoln in Illnois" at the Hollywood theatre on Broadway Tuesday morning.

"Wind" Dates Total 249

Forty-two additional "Gone With the Wind" engagements were set this week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. This brings the total booking thus far scheduled for the Selznick International production to 249 in 230 cities. In 38 of the new situations the film will be shown twice daily on a reserved seat basis. The bookings are:

February 6, Paramount, Glens Falls, N. Y.; February 7, State, Fresno, Cal.; Mission, San Jose, Cal.; Febru- 8, Auburn, Auburn, Me.; Feb. 9, Mayfair, Asbury Park, N. J.; Victoria, Mahanoy City, Pa.; Rialto, Lewiston, Pa.; Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.; February 11, Lawton, Lawton, Okla.; February 12, Arcade, Salisbury, Md.; Carolina, Winston Salem, N. C.; Carolina, Durham, N. C.; National, Greensboro, N. C.; State, Raleigh, N. C.; February 14, Capitol, Yakima, Wash.;

February 15, Arcade, Waynesboro, Pa.; Auburn, Auburn, N. Y.; February 16, State, Columbia, Pa.; St. Mary's, St. Mary's, Pa.; Ohio, Sandusky, O.; Columbia, Portsmouth, O.; February 17, Grand, Terre Haute, Ind.; Lafayette, Lafayette, Ind.; February 18, Strand, Plattsburg, N. Y.; Avon, Watertown, N. Y.; Rialto, Amsterdam, N. Y.; February 22, Traco, Toms River, N. J.; Fox, Bakersfield, Cal.; February 23, Du Bois, Du Bois, Pa.; Drake, Oil City, Pa.; Regent, Springfield, O.; February 25, Fitchburg, Fitchburg, Mass.; Flynn, Burlington, Vt.; Century, Petersburg, Va.; State, Danville, Ky.; February 28, Kallet, Oneida, N. Y.; March 1, Lincoln, Washington, D. C.; March 3, Royal, Pauls Valley, Okla.

In the following four situations "Gone With the Wind" will be shown three times daily, with only the evening performance reserved: February 8, State, New Bedford, Mass.; February 9, Proctors, Schenectady, N. Y.; Victoria, Shamokin, Pa.; February 16, State, Uniontown, Pa.

"Gone With the Wind" opened in Chicago Friday at two theatres, the Oriental and Wood, to an advance sale of nearly $100,000 to break all Loop records.

The premiere of the picture in Portland, Ore., Thursday brought out long standing lines, in spite of semi-zero weather and a snow storm.

The longest line in the history of Loew's Midland in Kansas City stood in sub-zero temperatures Friday morning to buy 75-cent tickets

In Denver the film opened Thursday to a packed house and indications are that the entire first week will see a jammed house.

The advance sale at the Warner in Pittsburgh totalled $30,000 Friday, the opening night, with seats being sold for the first week in February. Two broadcasts, a preview over KDKA and a review over WSW ushered in the opening.

The film opened at the Fifth Avenue theatre in Seattle this week to capacity business. The advance ticket sale for evening performances for the first two weeks of the engagement is the largest in the history of any road show attraction in Seattle. The total gross for the first four days of the engagement, including the opening day, Thursday, through the weekend, was reported to be $22,500. A four-week run is anticipated.

Although more than 65,000 persons saw the film at the Olympia in Miami and the Sheridan in Miami Beach, in an eight day showing, so great is the demand for seats that the film is held for another week, moving to the Colony in Miami Beach and the Roxy in Miami.

Academy Lists Short Nominees

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced this week the nominations for the short subject awards and the nominations for the Award for Achievement in Film Editing, which are "Gone with the Wind," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "The Rains Came" and "Stagecoach."

In the short subject nominations a tie vote in the one reel classification caused the naming of four subjects: "Busy Little Bears," Paramount; "Information Please," RKO; "Profit Without Honor," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and "Swordfishing," Warner Brothers. Only three were to have been nominated.

The same situation existed in the cartoon division where four were named. They are "Detouring America," Warners; "Peace on Earth," MGM; "The Pointer," Walt Disney, and "The Ugly Duckling," Disney.

Two reelers named were: "Drunk Driving," MGM; "Five Times Five," RKO, and "Sons of Liberty," Warners.

Jules White of Columbia and Bert Gilroy, short subjects producer of RKO, unsuccessfully petitioned the Academy awards committee to make separate classifications for comedies in this event. Mr. White for years has been attempting to have Academy leaders make a greater range of Shorts awards. "I make pictures for theatres, not for projection rooms," he said this week.

MAJORS HIT PROPOSED COPYRIGHT BILL; SEND OBJECTIONS TO SENATE

Companies Protest Against Impression They Approved Shotwell Measure; Action This Session Is Doubted

The motion picture industry took steps this week to remove the impression that it approved the Shotwell copyright bill. A letter written by Edith E. Ware, executive secretary of the Committee for the Study of the Copyright, was introduced with the bill and interpreted to mean that the industry approved the measure. The copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, headed by Edwin P. Kilroe, this week mailed a letter to the Senate and House patent committees explaining their part in the Shotwell conferences and requesting a hearing to voice their objections to the proposed copyright bill.

Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney of the MPPDA, said, "the producers and distributors of motion pictures, in common with a number of other groups, are opposed to the bill as it now stands, and are insisting upon public hearings before the appropriate Congressional committees to express their views." The Shotwell bill, he pointed out, was not a compromise measure satisfactory to all the industries concerned with the single exception of the radio industry.

Conflicts Noted

When Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Dem., Utah) introduced the bill on January 8th he admitted there were "a great number of conflicts in regard to this very intricate matter," but asked for early consideration because he wished for action on the international copyright convention. Homer T. Bone, chairman of the Senate patents committee, who is particularly interested in these matters, is laid up with a broken hip and is not expected back in the Senate before March, when the measure may be considered.

The industry's stand on the copyright proposal is that while it cooperated with the Shotwell committee, it had been with the clear understanding that the final bill was not binding on the participants in the conference and was to be merely the independent proposal of the Committee for the Study of the Copyright. The letter introduced with the proposed bill had been taken by some to indicate that the measure was approved by those who participated in the conferences with the exception of the representatives of record manufacturers.

The MPPDA committee on copyright has exercised its right to object to provisions in the bill and has urged that producers and distributors of motion pictures, as well as any other industry or interest concerned with copyright, be given an opportunity to be heard at Congressional hearings on the Shotwell committee bill.

Dual Capacity

The motion picture industry is in the dual capacity of buyers and users of copyright, but seeks, according to the MPPDA copyright committee, no special legislation and does not back the proposed changes in the copyright law. The present regulation is over 30 years old but, to an extent, has been brought up to date by court decisions. It is generally conceded that the 1909 copyright law is not perfect, but attempts to change it have not met with success up to this point because the matter is so complicated Congress has hesitated to alter the law lest the new regulations have more imperfections.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL," AUSTRALIAN SLOGAN

Despite a drop in box office receipts in Australia due to the call of war service and training upon the youth of the Commonwealth, the theatres' managements are not disturbed but supporting their confidence in ultimate victory with the slogan "Business as Usual," writes Bill Craft, of Inland Theatres, Pty., Ltd., of Mildura, Victoria, in a letter to Motion Picture Herald.

"In my own district of 28,000," says Mr. Craft, "there are 780 young men away from the town; 280 enlisted for service overseas and 500 in training camps. Training camp periods vary from one month to three months, so you will see that this must have an adverse effect on business. These young fellows are all fond of entertainment and we miss them not only in the theatres but in all places of business.

"My most successful recent attractions have been "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "Dodge City," "Jesse James," "The Mikado" and "Jamaica Inn."

A number of the regulations in the proposed copyright law of 1940 are considered unsatisfactory to the motion picture industry. The basic definition of author (Section 8 of the proposed law) is not viewed with favor by the motion picture producers, radio broadcasters and music publishers who, according to the notes of the Shotwell committee, "insist upon the retention of Section 62 of the Act of 1909 or upon similar language." The question involved is who is the author of work produced under employment and what specific regulations are required in the contract to cover ownership of the copyright of material so produced.

One objection that the motion picture industry raised to this provision was that it would impose statutory restraints upon the freedom of one party to the contract of employment.

Recall "Lynton" Case

The film industry also wishes to avoid recurrence of "Letty Lynton" type cases and protests against part of the provisions of the new proposal covering damages. The MPPDA committee wishes that award of damages be limited to the part of the profits which can be justly attributed to the use of the work infringed. In the "Letty Lynton" case the court set a definite percentage of the profits as being justly attributable to the use of the work infringed and the award was not based on all the profits made. That decision recognized that other things contribute to the value of a motion picture beside the original work on which it is based.

Another objection is based on the number of courts to which copyright cases might be brought under the proposed law. At present unpublished works are protected under the common law of the respective states and by Federal law if they are copyrighted. The proposed law provides statutory copyright for unpublished works and also expressly preserves common law forums for unpublished works under the laws of the States.

The Copyright committee of the MPPDA includes Robert W. Perkins, general counsel and secretary of Warner Brothers; Edwin P. Kilroe, copyright adviser to Twentieth Century-Fox and Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the MPPDA.

Action This Year Doubted

Although the Shotwell committee's bill has been introduced in the Senate and referred to the patents committee and a like bill will probably be introduced in the House, action is not expected this year. Hearings may be held later in the year. But even though Edith E. Ware's letter accompanying the bill said "as this bill is the result of long discussions, at which all interests concerned presented their views, there would hardly be any desire on the part of the various groups concerned for extended hearings," hearings would last a long time, according to industry opinion. Other groups would be expected to wish a hearing before any legislation, as important as a new copyright law, was passed.

The broadcasting industry is understood to be opposed to many proposals in the Shotwell bill. Penalties under the new measure against broadcast networks for copyright infringement would run into great fortunes.

International Complications

The whole copyright situation is further complicated by its international aspect. For many years efforts have been made to have the United States subscribe to the international copyright agreement, called the Berne convention, which was made in 1886 and revised four times since. However, it is generally felt that the United States should not sign any international agreement until the domestic copyright law is brought up to date. Also members of the Berne convention feel it should be modified. A meeting of the Berne convention members has been scheduled at Brussels for each year for several years, but now is indefinitely postponed on account of the war.

Mr. Kilroe was sent to Europe last summer to check up on the international copyright situation in preparation for the scheduled Brussels meeting in 1940. However, Mr. Kilroe said that since the war started the whole situation with respect to copyright has changed. He believes that nothing can be determined in the way of international copyright regulations until the European boundaries become definite again.

Hearings Held in 1937

In April, 1937, hearings were held on the question of the international convention of the copyright union. At that time Mr. Kilroe presented the opposition of the motion picture industry to adherence to the international convention before domestic copyright legislation is brought up to date. It was indicated that the international copyright convention would supersede existing domestic copyright law.

Even though Senator Thomas of the foreign relations committee is sponsoring the international copyright treaty, and it is on the calender of the Senate, action is not expected at this Congress. Revision of the domestic copyright law, following the Shotwell committee proposed modification, would take many months and some experts feel that a bill altering the 1909 copyright law would not be brought to the floor of Congress before next year.

FIDLER WITHDRAWS CHALLENGE TO WANGER

Asks Producer to "Name Names" in "Chiseler" Charge, Then Refuses Broadcast Spot

Jimmy Fidler's challenge over the air to Hollywood producer Walter Wanger to "name names" after Mr. Wanger in a Liberty Magazine article had opened fire on a "radio chiseler," was accepted by the producer, but when the radio columnist read the Wanger script, he refused to allow Mr. Wanger on his Drene Shampoo CBS program—for the script named one name, Jimmy Fidler's.

Mr. Wanger's Liberty Magazine piece remarked, "Space and the postal laws about language forbid discussion of the chiseling radio columnist." On a subsequent Tuesday night broadcast-for-shampoo-sales, Mr. Fidler hurled his challenge to Wanger to name the person to whom reference had been made. The challenge accepted, the producer submitted his script to Fidler, as is customary in radio.

Urged Letters to Stars

Mr. Wanger's magazine article gave full recognition to those Hollywood film correspondents who possess ethics, training and sense of responsibilities, but urged the public to campaign against "radio columnist chiseling" by writing to stars who are victims of those aircasters' remarks and telling them that they would not use the products of the sponsors of such "gossipers."

The producer feels that it is an erroneous and most unhealthy radio trade practice for a radio commentator to run down the product and personalities of the film industry while attempting at the same time to sell another product for a commercial sponsor. Mr. Wanger added that he is expressing the views of many theatremen when he objects to such a commentator's damning an unreleased picture to 10,000,000 "listeners-in" on the basis of a single viewpoint.

There has been plenty of evidence that exhibitors view the practice with alarm, evidenced in the form of organized and individual exhibitor protests, the most recent, one of the strongest coming only last week from the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, whose secretary, Peter J. Wood, started issuing a weekly bulletin giving the "razzberries" to products of sponsors of these aircasters.

Quotes Churchill

In Mr. Wanger's script, which he proposed to read to listeners to Fidler's shampoo program, he quoted from a book called "We Saw It Happen," written by 13 correspondents of the reputable New York Times, in which Douglas Churchill, the newspaper's Hollywood correspondent, wrote: "Hollywood has produced an amazing brand of journalism ranging from the honest but inefficient to the most efficiently dishonest."

"Many of them," continued Mr. Churchill, "like to tell their readers that they dash across the road to Kay Francis's to borrow a cup of sugar, or that Louis B. Mayer insisted that they come to dinner to give advice on a story with which Metro is having trouble. That's bunk. Just plain bunk."

Getting more specific, Mr. Wanger turns to the Churchill remarks about "one radio commentator who conveys the impression at every broadcast that there are no celebrities in town whom he did not meet at the bus depot or the railway station when they were totally unknown."

Defines "Chiseler"

Mr. Wanger described a "chiseler" as "a person who tries to maintain a position of importance by hanging on the coat tails of people who do things," "who chisels for his news," and "who tries to impress his audience by taking chiseling angles on the news."

Continued the producer: "Chiseling becomes grave when it takes the form of distributing rumor and lies that defame individuals—I speak of actors and actresses —who depend on public favor for a livelihood." He chided commercial radio sponsors for being "ethically blind enough to pay (their air gossipers) as much for false rumor as many stars earn for honorably entertaining you."

He asks Mr. Fidler's air sponsor, Procter and Gamble, how they would like to see a motion picture in which a character makes a face at a bottle of their Drene Shampoo and throws it disgustedly out the window. "That compares, ethically, and as a fair business practice, with what their shampoo salesman does to picture product—and tries to do to human lives."

Quotes Testimony

Mr. Wanger's script, which Mr. Fidler refused to allow broadcast after the producer accepted the Fidler "challenge," quoted from sworn courtroom testimony to show how aircasters sometimes work. He told how a Hollywood star had sued Jimmy Fidler for reporting on the air an alleged incident of the star asking a hard-working assistant on a movie set to give up his chair—the only chair available—then using it to sit her cocker spaniel puppy.

Mr. Fidler had said on the air that he talked with the assistant—"I talked with the maddest man I've ever seen"—but under court examination, admitted that not only had he not talked with such person, but could not remember from whom he had gotten such information.

Hickey Joins National Screen

Duke Hickey, formerly exploitation, publicity and advertising manager for Universal Pictures Corporation Exchanges in Chicago and in New York, has been made promotional director and manager of the special service department of National Screen Corporation's Chicago office. Mr. Hickey will work with exhibitors on exploitation problems.

Continue Law Practice

The law firm of Garfield and Seligson having been dissolved, Gustav B. Garfield and Maurice V. Seligson will continue the general practice of law at 285 Madison Avenue.

BRANDT DEFENDS HIS "POISON" STATEMENT

An attack against Harry Brandt's "box office poison" statement made by Ed Sullivan last Thursday was answered immediately by Mr. Brandt. The columnist asserted that the statement on "box office poison stars" made May 3, 1938 was an attack against the various players mentioned. Mr. Brandt made his first defense of the listing of stars whom he considered no longer attractions at the box office in a long wire to Mr. Sullivan expressing the reasons for the statement made over a year and a half ago.

Mr. Brandt had said in part, "Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Joan Crawford, Edward Arnold, Mae West, Kay Francis, Katharine Hepburn are all fine actors and actresses and we are grateful to them for the fine pictures they have made. But the show must go on and those persons who can deliver box office pictures should make them." He pointed out that though stars had been listed as "box office poison" he did not say they were through or could not make a comeback. Exhibitors will play any star's pictures, Mr. Brandt said, if the public wants to see them.

SEC Reports More Film Stock Deals

Disposition of 7,080 shares of Loew's common stock by David Bernstein, executive, in November, in part payment of indebtedness, was reported this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly summary of transactions of corporation officers and directors in the stocks of their companies. Mr. Bernstein still held 22,220 shares of common.

Other film stock transactions reported by the SEC were for the most part small, other than the acquisition of 700 shares of Monogram Pictures common stock by Samuel Broidy, Boston, director, bringing his holdings to 1,600 shares held direct and 500 shares held through Monogram Pictures, Inc., together with 11,129 options for common.

A report on Columbia Pictures showed the acquisition of 100 common voting trust certificates by Abraham Schneider, New York, officer, giving him a total of 404 shares; for Keith Albee Orpheum, acquisition of 20 shares of seven per cent preferred was reported by Leon Goldberg, New York, officer, giving him 230 shares, and in Loew's Boston Theatres, acquisition of another 104 shares of common was reported for the parent, Loew's Inc., giving it 100,307 shares.

Nathanson Takes Option on Shares

N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has taken up the balance of his option on common shares of the company for 1939 at a price of $15 per share, the block of stock remaining under his agreement with Famous Players being 5,000 shares. Mr. Nathanson has 11,000 shares under option of purchase next July at $16 and a final block of 11,000 shares to be taken up in 1941 at $17.

WARNER'S NET INCREASES $538,324; UNIVERSAL'S INCOME RISES 32%

Warners and Subsidiaries Report $2,343,637 Net Profit for Quarter; Universal's Is Listed at $1,153,321

Warner Brothers Pictures and Universal this week gave tangible evidence of most favorable financial operations, Warners citing a $538,324 increase in net profits for the last quarter, earning $642,129 for the 13 weeks, as against $103,805 a year ago, while Universal listed $1,153,321 net for a year, compared with $591,178 for the year before.

13 Weeks Net $2,343,637

The Warner Brothers Pictures, and subsidiary companies' net profit from operations for the thirteen weeks ending November 25th before charges for amortization and depreciation of properties and federal income taxes was $2,343,637. The gross income for the period (after eliminating intercompany transactions) was $24,741,166. The comparable gross income for the quarter ending November 26, 1939, was $25,418,166. A net credit of $71,732 was made directly to earned surplus in the period.

The $642,129 earning is equivalent to $6.27 a share on 102,277 shares of preferred stock outstanding at November 25, 1939. Dividends in arrears as at December 1, 1939, amounted to $29.8375 per share. After allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred stock the earnings are equivalent to 14 cents per share on 3,701,090 shares of common stock outstanding.

The current assets total $25,963,746 against current liabilities of $16,941,756. The inventories totaled $17,039,156. The fixed assets, including land, buildings, equipment and leases, were valued at $129,897,394. Goodwill was listed at $8,331,792.

The total assets were $168,238.226. Funded and other long term debt amounted to $63,747,592.

The consolidated profit and loss and earned surplus statement for the 13 weeks showed an income of $24,741,166. Of that amount film rentals, admissions, sales and miscellaneous income accounted for $23,753,028. Rent from tenants and royalties was $988,138. In the same period cost of sales and expenses were $21,659,670. The largest item in this section was operating and general expenses at $14,463,493. Amortization of film costs was listed at $6,761,355. $300,000 was set aside as a provision for federal income taxes. The earned surplus carried to balance sheet was $2,325,908.

Universal Plans Simpler Structure

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of directors of Universal, said in the annual statement to stockholders that simplification of the company's corporate setup might permit more efficient and economical operations. It was pointed out that studies had been made with a view to consolidating Universal Corporation, the parent company, and Universal Pictures Company, Inc., the operating unit. A consolidation would involve a recapitalization. The stockholders were told that the management hopes to be able to submit a consolidation plan this year.

Universal's net profit for the year ended Oct. 28, 1939, amounted to $1,153,321. This figure includes depreciation, amortization of fixed assets and federal and foreign income taxes. In the preceding year the company lost $591,178.

The gross income in the last fiscal year was $23,878,868, over three and a half million higher than the preceding year and over five and a half million over 1937. In 1937 the company lost $1,084,998. A net loss of $1,030,488 in 1937 has been changed in two years into a net operating profit of $1,578,078, an improvement of $2,608,566.

Taxes in 1938 increased 26 per cent over 1937 and 94 per cent over 1937 in the last fiscal year. Taxes were $486,267 in 1937 and $943,158 in 1939. The company paid last year for every dollar of net profit 81.8 cents in taxes to various authorities.

The quarter's consolidated net earnings, before federal incomes taxes, was $366,325 against $161,929 for the corresponding period of 1938, although the war affected half of the 1939 period. The first quarter of the new fiscal year to December 23, 1939, showed an increase of $88,000 over the same period of 1938.

The foreign business of Universal was listed at $8,987,128 for the year. This amounted to nearly 38 per cent of the total business done by the company.

The consolidated balance sheet showed a net

DUTCH FILM FEDERATION ASSUMES CENSOR TASK

Responsibility for All Releases Delegated to Trade Organization by the Government

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

The Dutch Motion Picture Federation has guaranteed the Board of Censorship an objective compilation of foreign and domestic newsreels covering the war situation and has appointed a special committee which previews the reels before they are offered for censorship to the National Board. The Federation also has ordered that all newsreel titling, dialogue, commentating, etc., must be handled in Holland during the war. Distributors and the committee are cooperating closely and though the situation is rather difficult, the early measures taken by the Government of a general prohibition of all newsreels covering the war are now eliminated.

Federation Now in Charge

In the beginning of the war films like "The Maginot Line" were prohibited in some municipalities by decision of the mayor, this being the consequence of a circular letter of the Minister to all the Dutch municipalities. Protests from the Federation led to a general agreement under which the Federation banned pictures censored and admitted before September 1, 1939, which might cause trouble and confusion. These pictures like "The Maginot Line" and other films of this kind were taken from circulation. Further restrictive measures by the Government have been withheld by this agreement.

There is no shortage of pictures in Holland. Distributors of foreign product have a sufficient stock for a long period, even if the war lasts several years. Pictures produced now in the United States will be admitted here, and though it takes much more time than before the war for product to be brought, the shipping facilities are adequate. American pictures comprise 60 per cent of the total imports. Imports from France form about 15 per cent, and whereas German imports were 50 per cent before 1933, they now total about 15 per cent also. French and English film studios are still producing and in Italy measures have been taken to make use of the changed situation in order to compete with other countries.

The Federation has requested its members not to destroy old prints of pictures taken from circulation. This has not been because a lack of new pictures is feared, but because the higher price of celluloid has made it desirable to have a stock of old prints on hand.

Special Soldiers' Shows

All Dutch film theatres have special performances for the army regularly under the supervision of the Federation. Traveling film theatres give performances in places where there are no film houses. During a recent month 350 performances were given by such traveling cinemas for more than 75,000 soldiers.

A governmental publication has been issued giving several details about the development of the Dutch film trade. According to the bulletin, Holland had 350 film theatres in 1939, 17 more than in the preceding year. Seven municipalities with more than 100,000 citizens had 98 cinemas (Amsterdam 36, The Hague 23, Rotterdam 19, Utrecht 7, Harlem 7, Groningen 5 and Eindhoven 4). There is a theatre for every 24,500 inhabitants in Holland. Of the 350 theatres five are newsreel cinemas (Amsterdam 2, The Hague, Rotterdam and Venlo each 1).

In 1910 there were only 20 theatres in the country and the greatest building period was from 1931 to 1935 when 72 were opened. Since 1936 only 34 new houses have been constructed.

Together the 350 film theatres have 180,279 seats, or an average of 515.

The figures on attendance are as follows:

	Population	Admissions per year
Amsterdam	788,373	9,692,115
Rotterdam	605.733	5,374,235
The Hague	490,185	5,338,671
Utrecht	162,981	1,240,563
Harlem	135,356	1,203,753
Groningen	118,400	673,369
Eindhoven	108,504	734,900

The number of performances at each theatre is different: 101, or 29 per cent, have a maximum of four performances a week; 46, or 13 per cent have five to seven performances a week; 203, or 58 per cent, have a minimum of eight performances a week. The last mentioned group, the largest, are open every day.

Wisconsin ITPA Meets; Iowa ITO Elects

The ITPA of Wisconsin, in anticipation of any possible special session of the state legislature, has been holding regional meetings in the state to strengthen its organization. So far, meetings have been held in Marshfield, Ripon and Madison with another meeting scheduled in the near future for Menominee. The zone captains in the districts where meetings have already been held include J. P. Adler, Ben Marcus and Henry Ringling. Bert Nathan, of Milwaukee, is chairman of the organization's membership committee.

Meanwhile, Leo F. Wolcott was reelected president of the Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, Tuesday, W. B. Frank was reelected vice-president and Wayne B. Dutton, secretary. The directors elected to serve until Jan. 1, 1943, were: E. M. Garbett, Jr., W. A. Dutton and E. W. Mason.

At the annual convention held in Marshalltown, Iowa, which elected the new officers of the Iowa-Nebraska Allied Independent Theatre Owners, a resolution was made supporting an unconditional demand for cancellation privilege of at least 20 per cent. The group also opposed increased admission prices and higher taxes. Members were urged to oppose percentage deals and where such deals are made not to pay over 35 per cent. Unanimous support for the Neely bill was reaffirmed and MGM's percentage terms for "Gone with the Wind" were attacked. Those who feel that they were hurt by the "Pot of Gold" radio programs were urged to protest to the Federal Communications Commission.

Form Realfilm Productions

Realfilm Productions, Inc., has been formed to produce documentary, commercial and other films. Sidney Kaufman is president, John Ferno is in charge of production, and Leo Mittler is in charge of theatrical releases.

'U' Strengthens Capital Position

working capital of $5,512,194, an increase of $900,000 as compared with the corresponding date of 1938. The strengthening of the capital position, it was pointed out, has enabled the company to improve the quality of product to the point required for profitable operation. The net working capital, however, was not sufficient to meet the enlarged program and bank loans rose to $3,117,460, or $1,042,500 in the twelve months period.

Increased Production Indicated

The increase in production was indicated by comparison with the preceding year. Fifty features, or ten more than the preceding year were produced. The westerns were increased one to a total of seven. Serials remained at the same figure, four; as did the newsreel issues and one-reelers. Two-reelers were increased one to 14 and cartoons cut to 13 from 22.

As of January 20th, 42 features, westerns and serials of the current program had been completed or were before the cameras. A year ago at the same date only 28 had been completed or were before the cameras. A total of about $700,000 was spent in improving the studio during the past twelve months. This included cost of two new sound stages.

CBS Net Reported Up 25%

With program bookings bringing more revenue than in early 1939, the Columbia Broadcasting System is expected to earn about 25 per cent more in the first quarters of 1940 than it did in the corresponding period of 1939. The 1939 first quarter figure was $1,151,526.

On this basis net income would equal about 80 cents per share on the 1,709,723 shares of combined A and B stock. This would compare with the 1939 figure of 67 cents on 1,708,723 shares.

Wall Street expects the 1939 year net income to be approximately $5,000,000. Sales for the last part of the year were 26 per cent ahead of 1938. A five million profit would equal slightly less than $3 a capital share, comparing with $2.07 in 1938, when the profit was $3,541,741.

Because radio contracts are negotiated on a long term basis, earnings in the first part of 1940 are expected by CBS to be about the same as in the last period of 1939.

Included in the annual report for 1939 will be the Columbia Recording Corporation, formerly the American Record Company. This company was purchased by CBS in the first part of 1939.

Hays Addresses Men's Club

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, addressed a meeting of the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian Church of New Rochelle, New York, last week. He said that the public is justified in making constructive criticism of an industry which is as close to the people as the motion picture industry. As long as the public maintains an interest in motion pictures there will be a continuous increase in quality, Mr. Hays said.

Ricketson Heads Club

Frank H. Ricketson, Fox Intermountain Theatres head, has been named president of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club. Other officers are Earl Collins, first vice-president; Harry Graham, second vice-president; Henry A. Friedel, treasurer; Ross Bluck, secretary, and Albert J. Gould, Jr., counsel.

ALL SET FOR TELEVISION NETWORKS AS RELAY TESTS SUCCEED, SAYS RCA

Engineers Call It Feasible Now to Set Up Network Making Programs Available to 20,000,000; Licenses Awaited

Announcement was made Tuesday by RCA that a television radio relay has been developed to make networks possible, removing one of the largest barriers to television progress. Practicable television reception had seemed limited to about fifty miles and the cost of independent television stations servicing the whole country, it was agreed, would have been staggering. The possibility of television networks had been discussed, but many technical problems stood in the way. Now the Radio Corporation of America says that the technical difficulties have been entirely removed.

Await FCC Ruling

The development of the RCA relay system is called the go-ahead signal to television networks. The television industry awaits the decision of the Federal Communications Commission on commercial licensing. A favorable answer from the FCC might give great impetus to development in television, leaders said. Members of the FCC are making a tour this week of television laboratories, studying progress and standards.

RCA in its statement announced that a radio relay method of transmitting television signals between cities had been advanced to the point where it is technically ready for the first step of application to public service.

Inter-City Networks Seen

The new system is said to be a development different from any other method and to make possible the establishment of inter-city networks similar in effect to the wire networks of sound broadcasting. Before radio networks were established, broadcasting was not such competition for theatres. Networks made possible high quality programs that individual stations could not maintain.

Speculation immediately arose over the potentialities of television as a competitor for the theatre in its new network form. Television on a local basis was not considered a strong rival.

The RCA engineers said that it is feasible to set up a radio relay linking New York, for example, with Washington and Boston and intermediate cities. Such a television network could make programs available to approximately 20,000,000 persons or almost one-sixth of the nation's population. As in radio, programs could originate in any station on the network. Similar networks could be established in other sections.

Say "Television Is Here"

The radio relay system for television was hailed as another proof that "television is here", according to RCA executives. RCA engineers consider the system remarkable because of the success achieved in dealing with frequency channels of extreme width. It differs from other relay methods in that it makes use of specially designed relay stations operating on frequencies many times higher than those used by regular television broadcasting stations.

Before announcing the relay system an experimental network has been in operation on Long Island for nearly a year. The NBC Empire State station W2XBS has been linked with Riverhead, with relay stations at Hauppague, 45 miles from the Empire State Building, and at Rocky Point, 15 miles from Hauppague and an equal distance from Riverhead.

UNION TRUCE BRINGS JOINT JURISDICTION

Actors Equity, the American Federation of Radio Artists, the Screen Actors Guild and Chorus Equity made a six-month truce Tuesday in the television jurisdiction dispute. The unions will exercise a joint jurisdiction. The union negotiations continued for some time because Actors Equity claims exclusive jurisdiction over television.

Negotiations are expected within the next few weeks with NBC and CBS to reach an agreement on wage standards. It is reported that no written contract will be sought at this time. The American Federation of Radio Artists maintained that any contract signed under the present experimental status of television might have an adverse effect when the FCC licenses regular commercial programs. An attempt will be made to agree on wage standards but leave the way open for negotiations at a later date.

The present maximum television wage for a one-hour program is reported to be $50, with $20 nearer the average. The wage includes rehearsals as well as the performance. Unions would like to raise the wage standard and limit the number of rehearsals and make provisions for overtime preparation.

Each relay station is mounted on a 100-foot steel tower and uses antennae of the parabolic type necessary for the highly directional or beam-like transmission which the system uses. The power required for operation is 10 watts or less. The RCA engineers say the distance between relay points would vary in practical operation according to the terrain, with 30 miles the average distance.

No Crews at Relay Points

No operating crew is necessary at the relay points. The relay receiver automatically picks up the signal and delivers it to the companion transmitter. The frequency used in the relay is approximately 500,000 kilocycles. NBC's Empire State television signal starts out at 42,250 kilocycles and is stepped up at the first relay point, Hauppague, to 500,000 kilocycles. The terminal station changes the high frequency back to the lower broadcasting standard.

The new relay method operates in a part of the radio wave spectrum where RCA began experiments over ten years ago. Much lower frequency was not found satisfactory for television relay work. About seven years ago a relay system was set up between New York and Camden, N. J., with a relay at Mt. Arney, N. J., 64 miles from New York, where the signal was boosted for the 23 miles to Camden. The picture was of low definition. Four years ago a radio relay for transmitting telegraph, teletype and experimental facsimile was installed by RCA between New York and Philadelphia. This system operated in frequencies ranging from 85,000 to 105,000 and was not capable of carrying high-definition pictures. It was found that new type reception and transmission tubes were necessary for relaying high-definition television pictures. RCA worked on new tubes and then built the New York-Riverhead relay system. The RCA engineers claim that operation of that system for a year proved its effectiveness.

FCC on Inspection Tour

In order to learn more about the television relay system and other experimental work the FCC officials began an inspection tour Thursday. The group was scheduled to visit Albany and Schenectady to see the direct rebroadcast of New York television signals by General Electric; Poughkeepsie and Newburgh to see RCA home reception of Empire State station signals. The commissioners were to be in New York Friday and Saturday and in Philadelphia on Monday.

In New York the NBC and Cath-Ray Laboratories will be inspected. The DuMont Laboratories in New Jersey will demonstrate its flexible system of transmission. At Camden the RCA large-screen projection, designed for use in theatres, will be seen. Philco in Philadelphia will give another demonstration. This station has reported that the CBS television signals are causing interference.

Under certain conditions, engineers said, television pictures can be received over great distances, but what makes this possible is not yet known. At times RCA was receiving television signals sent from London. However, since the war stopped English television there is no experimental work in this connection.

The FCC members also were invited to Los Angeles to visit the Don Lee studio, but refused the invitation on account of the distance. A California inspector has been designated to view the Don Lee demonstration and report to the Commission.

Pathe Takes Over Cinema Laboratory

Pathe Laboratories, Inc., of California, new affiliate of Pathe Laboratories, has completed the purchase of all the assets of Cinema Laboratories, Inc., including the Hollywood plant. O. Henry Briggs, Pathe president, who completed the arrangements in Hollywood this week, will remain there to supervise expansion plans for the laboratory.

Officers of the California company are Mr. Briggs, president; T. P. Loach and C. Merwin Travis, vice-presidents, and R. E. Young, treasurer. Directors include the officers, with the exception of Mr. Young, and Trem Carr, Robert S. Benjamin, Arthur Miller and Russell H. Wilson.

Return to Foreign Posts

Robert L. Graham, assistant to A. L. Pratchett, Paramount general manager for Cuba, Mexico and Central America, is scheduled to arrive in Mexico City on Monday. Mr. Graham, former assistant manager in the Panama office, has been visiting his family in Nebraska.

John A. Ojerholm, head of Paramount's British technical staff, has left on the Manhattan to return to his post via Italy.

NEW RKO STARTS OPERATIONS, AS IRVING TRUST TURNS OVER ASSETS

Transfer of $95,000,000 Company to Schaefer Management Represented by Handing Over Bill of Sale

The new Radio-Keith-Orpheum company began to operate this week freed from the court supervision which had lasted through seven years of reorganization. The Irving Trust Company, trustee, turned over the assets to the new RKO corporation in a simple ceremony last Friday that took less than an hour and one-half.

RKO is planning 48 pictures for 1939-40, at an approximate cost of $20,000,000, George J. Schaefer, president, announced in Hollywood Monday night during a debate with Abram F. Myers over the Neely bill before the Screen Writers Guild (see page 15).

Christensen to Merrill

Andrew Christensen, vice-president of the Irving Trust Company which was trustee from Jan. 27, 1933, turned over the assets to W. G. Merrill, RKO vice-president. (Picture on page 10). Richard C. Patterson, chairman of the RKO board of directors, witnessed the act that concluded the company's reorganization. The transfer of the $95,000,000 company to the management headed by George J. Schaefer was represented by handing over a bill of sale dated Jan. 1, 1940.

Others present at the brief ceremony included: William Mallard, William H. Clark, O. R. McMahon, J. Miller Walker and G. E. Youngman for RKO and Hamilton C. Rickaby and Richard Jones 3rd, attorneys for RKO; J. P. Harrigan of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company; Stephen Millett of Larkin, Rathbone & Perry, attorneys for the bank; Harold Hunkele of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company and R. W. Hurry of Delafield, Marsh, Porter & Hope, attorneys for that trust company.

Two Statements

On Saturday, the first day of business of the new RKO, the company issued two statements. The first statement explains the reorganization and the financial and business status of the new company; the second is a formal statement to creditors and stockholders which points out that they can now obtain securities in the new corporation by surrendering present securities.

The first statement was as follows:

"After administering the business of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation for seven years, Irving Trust Company as trustee under appointment by the United States district court, transefrred the assets in its possession yesterday to a new company, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, formed in accordance with the plan of reorganization.

"The new management will be under the direction of Mr. George J. Schaefer, who has had over twenty-five years experience in the moving picture industry. With him will be a staff of able and experienced assistants. The board of directors of the new company is composed of men with extensive business experience, some of them being well acquainted with the moving picture business.

"During the seven years of administration under the supervision of the court, the fixed indebtedness of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and its subsidiaries was reduced by over $11,000,000. This was exclusive of the further reduction effected by the plan of reorganization. The consolidated cash position more than doubled without including the cash received from proceeds of the recent sale of new common stock. Gross income increased from approximately $44,000,000 in 1933 to approximately $52,000,000 in 1939.

TRIBUTE URGED FOR D. W. GRIFFITH, 60

Tribute of an official character to David Wark Griffith, one of the earliest of motion picture production leaders, was urged this week over Radio Station WNEW, in New York, by David Lowe, film news commentator, on the occasion of Mr. Griffith's 60th birthday, last Monday.

Dedicating the entire broadcast to Mr. Griffith, Station WNEW suggested that the producer should be made an advisor on films either to the organized industry or in the various film divisions of the United States Government.

"The new company has no outstanding indebtedness; its capital structure consists only of preferred and common stock. The Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation group of companies now has extensive working capital with over $8,000,000 cash in bank alone, which amounts to approximately twice the current liabilities. In addition, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation has a substantial book surplus.

"Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, one of the major film companies in the United States, produces motion pictures in Hollywood, distributes pictures throughout most of the countries of the world and operates approximately 100 motion picture theatres in the United States."

Schaefer's Statement

George J. Schaefer, president of the new corporation, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, issued the same day the statement to the creditors and stockholders of the old company bearing the same name but a Maryland corporation. The new RKO company is a Delaware corporation.

Mr. Schaefer's statement:

"The proceedings for the reorganization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation (a Maryland Corporation), debtor, in the United States district court for the Southern District of New York, are about to be concluded. The plan of reorganization, confirmed sometime ago, has been upheld, all appeals from the order of confirmation having been finally dismissed.

"Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, a new corporation recently incorporated under the laws of Delaware, has acquired the properties and assets of the debtor and has been provided additional cash through the sale of certain shares of its common stock, all as contemplated by the plan and approved by the district court. It is now in order to carry out the other provisions of the plan, including the delivery to the creditors and stockholders of the debtor of certificates for the 6% preferred stock and common stock and the option warrants representing the right to purchase common stock, as provided in the plan in exchange for the securities of and claims against the debtor.

"You are now entitled to receive the securities of the new corporation upon the surrender to the distributing agent of the securities of the debtor owned by you and upon the filing therewith of transmittal letters in the form provided for the purpose. Bankers Trust Company has been appointed the agent of the new corporation to make the distribution of the new securities. The securities of the debtor and accompanying transmittal letters should be sent to the office of such agent, No. 16 Wall Street, New York, N. Y. In order to assure prompt delivery to you of the new securities, it is requested that the enclosed Instructions and those appearing on the transmittal letters be carefully followed.

"The new corporation will shortly make application to have its preferred stock and common stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange and its option warrants listed on the New York Curb Exchange so as to permit trading in the new securities on the respective exchanges, and for that purpose will file the necessary data with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Describes New Setup

"The properties and assets acquired by the new corporation consist primarily of capital stocks and obligations of other corporations engaged principally in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures and in related activities. Accordingly, the new corporation now constitutes the parent holding company of the units which formerly were subsidiaries or affiliates of the debtor, and the new corporation will in general conduct the business heretofore carried on by the debtor prior to its receivership and thereafter by Irving Trust Company, as receiver and trustee. Such subsidiaries and affiliates include RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., which produces 'Radio Pictures' and, together with its subsidiaries, distributes motion pictures throughout most of the world; Pathe News, Inc., the producer of the 'RKO-Pathe News,' which since the early days of the industry has been outstanding in the field of news reels; and Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Orpheum Corporation, RKO Proctor Corporation and RKO Midwest Corporation. The latter corporations or their subsidiaries operate theatres located throughout the United States. The subsidiary and affiliated corporations described above were not parties to the reorganization proceedings of the debtor and, during the course of such proceedings, they have continued to conduct their respective businesses in association with the trustee of the debtor.

"As the result of the reorganization of your enterprise under the plan of reorganization, the new parent holding company has commenced business without funded debt. The management of the new corporation takes this opportunity to express to the creditors and stockholders of the debtor its recognition of their cooperation and its confidence in the future of the new corporation and its subsidiaries."

Fees To Be Settled

All that remains to complete the RKO reorganization is settlement of fees for attorneys and others for services rendered in the proceedings. Hearings will be held on these matters. In everything else RKO is free from the jurisdiction of the United States District Court. Federal Judge William Bondy has supervised the reorganization.

RKO is expected to make in the near future application for listing its preferred and common stock on the Stock Exchange and to list its option warrants on the Curb Exchange.

MAJORS SET PROPORTION WHICH EACH MAY WITHDRAW OF BRITISH INCOME

Represents One-Third of Fifty Million Dollar Annual Gross of U. S. Companies in Britain, Based on Business Done

The proportions which American film companies may receive of the $17,500,000 from "frozen" film rentals in Great Britain was determined, on Monday in New York, in a meeting of major company representatives.

The sum noted is that which the British Government will allow the Americans to withdraw, representing one-third of the approximate $50,000,000 annual gross income of American film companies in Britain, and about 50 per cent of the net rentals. The sum does not cover rentals from British-made pictures distributed in Britain by American companies.

The American companies' "formula" was to be transmitted to London this week. The amount to be withdrawn by each company is known only to that company.

Universal is not a party to the "formula"; a British company handles its product, on a special basis.

Based on Business Done

The withdrawal arrangement is based on the amount of business done in England by each company. Official figures were not revealed.

However, industry observers estimate that the total business done in Britain by American companies apportions itself in the following approximate percentages: Loew's, 25 per cent; Warner Brothers, 18; Twentieth Century-Fox, 17.5; Paramount, 15; United Artists, 10; Columbia, 8, and RKO, 6.5.

Using these approximate percentages as a basis for calculation the withdrawal share of each company would be about as follows: Loew's, $4,370,000; Warner Brothers-First National, $3,150,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, $3,062,500; Paramount, $2,625,000; United Artists, $1,750,000; Columbia, $1,400,000 and RKO, $1,137,500.

Subject to Government Sanction

The proposal is subject to the approval of the British Government. The amount to be withdrawn in the year ending Nov. 1, 1940, was computed on each company's share of the total business done in Britain in the last two years. American companies also had to agree that they will not restrict exports of film to England or raise film rentals there.

Other sections of the agreement cover the time for withdrawing the money and revenue derived from British films distributed in the United States by any of the seven companies. The agreement provides that the companies are permitted to withdraw up to 75 per cent of their allocations in the first six months ending May 1, 1940, and the balance in the following six months. The company distributing British films in the United States can remit or retain money equivalent to the domestic sales.

40 RUSSIAN THEATRES PLANNED FOR 1940

Forty new theatres are to open in Russia in 1940, according to the Daily Worker, New York, leading Communist daily newspaper in the United States. It was stated that 200 new theatres are part of the "Third Five-Year Plan." The planned theatres are as follows: six in the mining districts, 17 collective farm theatres, six drama theatres in cities, 2 opera houses, a children's theatre and seven puppet theatres. No indication is given as to which of the projected theatres, if any, will show motion pictures.

The Red newspaper said that four large, new theatre buildings are to be completed this year. These are listed as the Young Communist League Theatre in Leningrad, seating 1,600; a house of 1,500 seats for Smolensk; one of 1,900 at Ivanovo, a textile center, and one of 1,100 seats for Kirov.

Variety Club Meet is Set

The Dallas Variety Club, tent No. 17, will sponsor this year's arrangements for the national convention, April 18th to 20th, in Dallas. R. J. O'Donnell, vice-president and general manager of Interstate Theatres and Chief Barker of the Dallas Club is in charge of preparations. He expects over 1,000 motion picture people from all over the country to attend the convention.

Business Meeting April 18th

A business meeting of Variety Club executives is sheduled fo April 18th. On the evening of the 19th a party will be held at the Dallas Athletic Club. Two floors of the club will be taken over for the event: one floor will be decorated as a frontier town and the other in the spirit of old Mexico. A Wild West show will provide part of the entertainment.

On Saturday, the 20th, club golf champions will play at the Brook Hollow country club for the national Variety Club championship. The convention will close with a banquet at the Adolphus Hotel which will be the headquarters for the convention.

The three national networks are to carry part of the program. Bob Hope is scheduled to be master of ceremonies. Other special guests expected are: Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy," Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Bing Crosby, Darryl F. Zanuck and Edgar A. Guest.

Variety Club members will go to Dallas by special train, bus and auto. One train of 33 coaches is to start at Boston and pick up delegates on the way to Texas. Other special trains will start at Denver, Kansas City and other cities. Large delegations are expected from all the Variety Clubs.

C. Harry Schreiber, RKO city manager, was installed last week as chief barker of the Columbus Variety Club. Other officers who took over their posts at the dinner were: Virgil Jackson, first assistant chief barker; Lou Holleb, second assistant; P. J. Wood, property manager and Jacob Luft, treasurer. The crew consists of Max Stern, William S. Cunningham, Don Burrows, George Anagnost, M. J. Cullin, William C. Pullin, retiring chief barker, and the new officers.

Judge Arthur Day, of the Ohio Supreme Court, was toastmaster. Guest of honor included Governor John W. Bricker, Mayor Floyd Green and former Mayor Myron B. Gessman. Mayor Green and Don Powers, secretary to the Governor, were made members of the club. Mr. Wood was presented with a wrist watch and Mr. Luft a luggage set.

Chairmen Are Named

Nat L. Lefton, Republic franchise holder and chief barker of the Cleveland Variety Club, appointed only chairmen for the various committees. The chairman of each group is authorized to pick his committee members. The following chairmen were appointed: Frank D. Drew, MGM branch manager, house committee; Jack Shulman, independent theatre operator, membership; George W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, welfare; Al Gregg, Republic Pictures, publicity; Joe Leavitt, Independent Screen Room, shut-in entertainment; Duke Clark, Paramount branch manager, stag night chairman, and Bert Stearn, United Artists district manager, night jamboree chairman.

Morris Cohn will be installed as chief barker of the Omaha Variety Club at a ball on Sunday night. Other officers are: Evert Cummings, first assistant; Sam Epstein, second assistant; Meyer Stern, treasurer and Edward Shafton, secretary.

The Kansas City Variety Club has presented $1,150 to provide milk for undernourished school children at the local schools. The fund was raised at a recent bowling tournament sponsored by the club and the Kansas City Star. A check for $400 went to Kansas City, Kan., schools.

Kansas City Appointment

Jerry Zigmond, manager of the Newman theatre, has been appointed general chairman for the annual inaugural banquet of the Kansas City Variety Club, early in February. Other members of the committee are Don Woods, James McConnel, Douglas Desch and Barney Joffee.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club will stage a house-warming party the end of February to celebrate the opening of its new quarters at the William Penn Hotel. A new bulletin is being issued, with James M Totman, assistant publicity director of Warners Tri-State theatres as editor.

The Cincinnati Variety Club will produce a film showing the "Heart Activities" of the organization, to be exhibited at the national convention in Dallas.

Singerman with Maymon

Sydney Singerman, formerly program department manager and assistant western sales manager of Universal, has been made special representative for Maymon Films, Inc., distributors of Hebrew pictures.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

My Son, My Son!

(Edward Small - UA)

Fathers and Sons

This production from the Howard Spring novel, which was well up among the country's best-sellers from June to December of 1938, has in its name cast such personalities as Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne, Louis Hayward, Laraine Day, Henry Hull and Josephine Hutchinson.

Primarily a story about the relationships between two friends, one a writer, the other a creator of fine furniture, and their sons, it is as well a study in characterization.

Produced by Edward Small, whose latest picture was "The Man in the Iron Mask," the picture was directed by Charles Vidor, who has handled the same assignment on "Those High Grey Walls," "Blind Alley" and "Romance of the Redwoods." The screen play was written by Lenore Coffee, who, in collaboration, wrote the story basis of "Good Girls Go to Paris," and the screen play of "Four Daughters."

Release date: To be determined.

Primrose Path

(RKO Radio)

Romantic Drama

Bringing together Ginger Rogers and Joel McCrea in the leading roles for the first time in six years, "Primrose Path" relates the story of a girl's romance with a young man who runs a gas station and lunch counter, and of her difficulties, even after their marriage, because of her disreputable family.

Taken from the stage play by Robert Buckner and Walter Hart, the screen play was written by Allan Scott, who wrote "Fifth Avenue Girl," which also starred Miss Rogers and was produced and directed by Gregory LaCava, as was "Primrose Path."

Marjorie Rambeau, who recently appeared in "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence" and "The Rains Came," is cast here as the girl's mother, chief bread winner of the family by dint of her friendliness with the town's masculine element. Henry Travers, last seen in "Remember," appears as the boy's grandfather, while Miles Mander, Queenie Vassar and Vivienne Osborne are seen in supporting roles as well.

Release date: March 22, 1940.

Blondie on a Budget

(Columbia)

The Bumsteads

Financial troubles, involving a fur coat for "Blondie," membership in a Trout Club for "Dagwood," and a marital misunderstanding resulting from a cash prize won at a theatre, constitute the story in this latest film depicting the characters of Chic Young's comic strip.

Richard Flournoy, who, in collaboration, wrote the story and screen play of "Blondie Brings Up Baby," handled the screen play here, from a story by Charles Molyneux Brown. Produced by Robert Sparks, the picture was directed by Frank Strayer, as were "Blondie Brings Up Baby" and "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

The cast is maintained intact from that used in previous films of the series, with Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and "Daisy" constituting the family, while Rita Hayworth depicts one of "Dagwood's" former feminine friends.

Release date: Feb. 29, 1940.

Irene

(RKO Radio)

Cinderella, with Music

The combination of producer-director Herbert Wilcox and star Anna Neagle, previously associated with such films as "Nurse Edith Cavell," "Victoria the Great," "Peg of Old Drury" and "Nell Gwynn," here turns attention to a musical comedy.

"Irene" was a stage musical comedy, and the film version features among its melodies "Alice Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams" and "There's Something in the Air" in addition to others from the original show and a new number, "You've Got Me Out on a Limb," written by Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy, who composed the original songs. The "Alice Blue Gown" number is made the subject of a Technicolor sequence.

It is the story of a salesgirl lifted from obcurity to the heights of society, and the romantic concomitants of this social ascent. The screen play was written by Alice Duer Miller, and has in its cast Ray Milland, recently seen in "Everything Happens at Night," Roland Young, who lately appeared in "He Married His Wife," Billie Burke and Arthur Treacher.

Release date: March 29, 1940.

Hotel for Women No. 2

(Tentative Title)

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Melodrama, in Series

A continuation, as the tentative title indicates, of "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," released last year, this second version of events in a women's hotel in New York involves a murder as well as romance, and is without Miss Maxwell, who now is devoting her art to short subjects.

The first vehicle served as an introduction to Linda Darnell. In this appear Lynn Bari and Katherine Aldridge, also seen in the original, as well as Joan Davis, Joan Valerie, Robert Lowery, Henry Wilcoxon, Elise Knox and Mary Beth Hughes.

John Stone was associate producer, with Ricardo Cortez directing, as he did on "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence."

Release date: To be determined.

Dance with the Devil

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Melodrama

A cast composed of such names as Tyrone Power, second in the annual HERALD-FAME poll of money making stars, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan, Charley Grapewin, Lionel Atwill and Marc Lawrence appears in this story of a young man whose father is sent to jail as an embezzler, and himself gets mixed up in a criminal gang.

Harry Joe Brown was associate producer. Henry Hathaway, the director, handled "The Real Glory" and "Spawn of the North."

Release date: To be determined.

INDUSTRY LINES UP TO BACK MORE CHARITIES

Many Stars Attend President's Birthday Ball; 500 at Jewish Federations' Luncheon

The motion picture industry took further steps this week in its active cooperation with charitable drives. The most important occasion of the week was the President's Birthday Ball in Washington Tuesday night to raise money for the Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

Among film personalities there were Olivia deHavilland, Dorothy Lamour, Brenda Joyce, Ruth Terry, Elsa Lanchester, Ona Munson, Ginny Simms, Annabella, Tyrone Power, Mickey Rooney, James Cagney, Edward G. Robinson, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Jean, Kay Kyser, Gene Autry, Melvyn Douglas, Mary Martin, Bill Boyd, Edward Everett Horton, Franchot Tone, Frances Farmer, Phil Reagan, C. C. Pettijohn, Grace Bradley and Mary Howard.

Robinson was featured in a Columbia network tieup from Washington Tuesday night in one of his "Big Town" dramas. The program was entitled "The March of Dimes."

Towns in Mississippi which do not have Sunday shows held matinees on Sunday and the preceding Sunday, all revenue other than film rental being turned over to Mississippi's celebration of the President's Birthday charity drive.

Jewish Charity Drive

Climaxing the drive of the New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities' Amusement Division, of which David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner are co-chairmen, an overflow crowd of more than 500 film, stage and radio executives, attended a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, Friday. (Picture in Pictorial Section). A total of $85,000 in cash and pledges was contributed at the luncheon.

James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, who was the guest of honor, said he knew "no greater charitable agency than the New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities." George Jessel was toastmaster, and John Golden presided.

On the dais were Mr. Bernstein, Edwin S. Friendly, Joseph Proskauer, Barney Balaban, Will H. Hays, Maurice Silverstone, Jack Cohn, Herman Robbins, B. S. Moss, Molly Picon, Albert Goldman, New York Postmaster; Charles Silvers, Irving Berlin, Max Cohen and Paul Moss, New York License Commissioner.

Norr, Ole Olsen, Sidney H. Piermont, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rinzler, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rinzler, Budd Rogers, Charles A. Rogers, Max Rudnick, Eddie Rugoff, Marvin N. Schenck, Sam Shain, Lillian Shaw, Joseph Shaller, Nathaniel Shilkret, John Shubert, Noble Sissle, Bernard Sobel, Arthur Tracy, Al Trahan, Sam Yolem.

Also Morris Kinzler, A. Mike Vogel, Al Altman, Sidney Phillips, Leopold Friedman, C. C. Moskowitz, Harry Bernstein, Arthur Kelly, James Cunningham, Robert Newman, Jack Alicoate, Maurice Kann, Leonard Goldenson, Leon Goldberg, John O'Connor, Fred Meyers, Harry Mandel and Nate Spingold.

Cohn Names Committee

Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, who is chairman of the Motion Pictures and Entertainment Division of a dinner to be held February 25th at the Hotel Astor, New York, in honor of Paul Felix Warburg and benefiting the National Jewish Hospital at Denver, announced this week the names of the committee serving as vice-chairmen and sponsors for the event.

They are George J. Schaefer, David Bernstein, Martin Quigley, Leo Brecher, Jules E. Brulatour, Eddie Cantor, Donald Flamm, Will H. Hays, Marcus Heiman, Alfred J. McCosker, B. S. Moss, Paul Moss, William S. Paley, Walter Reade, Saul E. Rogers and Alex Yokel.

Louis Nizer is vice-chairman of the dinner and one of the original group who conceived plans for honoring Mr. Warburg and to benefit his favorite philanthropy.

Actors Back Finns

A poll of players in Broadway shows by the Theatre Authority revealed an overwhelming majority willing to give performances for the Finnish Relief Fund without pay. The poll followed an action by Actors Equity Association in voting that its members could appear in benefit performances under rules in force since 1935, requiring that the Theatre Authority, which supervises stage benefits, receive its customary 15 per cent of the gross for distribution to theatrical charities.

Among the companies whose members approved a benefit in the poll were "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Juno and the Paycock," "The Philadelphia Story," "DuBarry Was a Lady," "Margin for Error," "Skylark," "Too Many Girls," "Pins and Needles," "New Hellzapoppin" and "The Time of Your Life." Two shows, "See My Lawyer" and "Tobacco Road" vetoed benefits, according to the Authority.

Support of the Finnish Relief Fund was voted at a meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, last week of the Independent Theatre Owners Association. On "Help Finland Days," February 17-18, girls in Finnish costume will be stationed in lobbies for collections among patrons.

Theatremen at Wilmington, Del., have set aside February 17th as "Help Finland Day," when donations toward Delaware's Finnish Relief fund will be received of patrons. Delaware's contributions to war-torn Finland to date totals $17,651.45.

Arrange Fund Benefit

Edward Arnold, head of the Hollywood Local of the American Federation of Radio Artists and active in the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, has announced plans for a gigantic dinner and show at the Cocoanut Grove, Hollywood, February 22d, to raise funds to provide a home for the locals of actors' unions. Plans are to buy or lease a building.

Marke Forms Agency

Sid Marke, one-time associate of Moe Glanz in Pittsburgh and uncle of S. Sylvan Simon, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, has formed his own agency, the Marke Theatrical Exchange in Pittsburgh. Mr. Marke recently had been associated with Joe Hiller in the National Theatrical Exchange.

Named Chief Booker

George F. Law, Toronto exchange manager, starting with the General Film Company 25 years ago, has been appointed chief booker for Colonial Pictures, Ltd., Toronto, which recently obtained the Canadian releasing rights for the product of Alliance Films Corporation, which has 12 features scheduled.

Monthly Patrons Survey Started

A "motion picture patrons monthly voting ballot" has been circulated by Robert F. Dellinger of Los Angeles. Theatre-goers are asked to list their votes for the best picture, actor, actress and many other monthly selections. The voting ballot, though originated and carried out solely by Mr. Dellinger for "the advancement of greater and better motion pictures," is to be mailed to Will H. Hays at the Hollywood office of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America.

The MPPDA has nothing to do with the survey, it said, and its Coast office tried to get in touch with Mr. Dellinger to advise him against using the Hays office name, but he could not be reached.

Mr. Dellinger claimed that he had no intention of making money out of his plan and only wished to help motion pictures. He further said that no group or individuals were associated with him and that he was personally paying all expenses of printing and distributing the ballots.

On the voting ballot are twenty questions and a request for the name and address of two talented persons who should be given a screen test. Questions cover: the theatre that played the best picture, the picture, best actor and actresses, best supporting and juvenile players, and technical parts of motion picture making. Suggestions for improving pictures are requested. Other questions take up newspaper film news and fan magazines.

New Museum Trustees

The Museum of Modern Art, in New York City, has elected to its board of trustees, the following: Henry Robinson Luce, chairman of the board, of Time, Inc., Mrs. John S. Parkinson, Jr.; Alfred H. Barr, Jr.; and John E. Abbott, one of the organizers of the Museum's film library. Douglas L. Baxter, former Twentieth Century Fox art director, was named assistant to the museum's executive vice-president; and Alistair Cook, former film critic for the British Broadcasting Corporation, was named assistant to the museum film library's curator.

Taylor on Toronto Board

N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association and general manager of the Twentieth Century Theatres, in Toronto, has succeeded T. J. Bragg as chairman of the film section of the Toronto Board of Trade. Mr. Bragg is secretary-treasurer of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Americana

Varying aspects of American life ranging from Salvation Army to U. S. Senate are topics for pictures recently released or forthcoming shortly. More than 20 films fall into the category of American history and biography, or the delineation of purely American institutions.

Dealing with Washington and the national life from the point of view of the individuals concerned are the recently released "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Joe and Ethel Turp Call On the President."

"Gone With the Wind" leads the list of the Civil War stories. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming "Arouse and Beware" and Warner Brothers' "Virginia City" are both set against the same background of the war between the states.

The World War of 1914-1918 is represented by "The Fighting 69th," while "Northwest Passage" will deal with frontier days. "The Roaring 20's" handles that decade's history as its basic theme. The modern era, in certain of its aspects, is treated in the sociological "Grapes of Wrath," with a release set in April.

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Brigham Young," "Young Tom Edison" and "Lillian Russell" help complete the picture with their characterizations, coming, in order, from RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and, again, Twentieth Century-Fox. That company's "Swanee River," as well, dealt with the life of Stephen Foster, as its "Little Old New York" did with Robert Fulton. And Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will complete its story of the inventor with "Edison, the Man."

Institutionally, Paramount portrays college life in those "good old days" with "At Good Old Siwash"; while Twentieth Century-Fox has on its production schedule such assorted fare as "Down to the Sea in Ships," a story of the American whaling industry; "The End of the Trail," a story of the growth of Western stars in Hollywood, following up "Hollywood Cavalcade," and "Marching as to War," a story of the Salvation Army.

Brown Study

Indoors, two separate sets were devoted to the cause of realism as it applied to Thomas Edison, the man, second of the MGM films treating of the inventor, and interpreting him here through the person of Spencer Tracy, as the first had done with Mickey Rooney.

The sets comprised a scene in which Edison the inventor had turned into Edison the business man, having sold the rights to his stock ticker, and a reproduction of his laboratory. Clarence Brown was directing a take in which appeared Mr. Tracy, Gene Lockhart and Charles Coburn.

With time out for discussion of such phases of the production as the proper cut of a mustache, Mr. Brown described the chief problem of the picture as one of pace and treatment. Director of five annual box-office champions, and, additionally, seven monthly winners in the Herald-Fame annual polls. Mr. Brown evinced that same touch for appeal to an audience composed of the many: "We can't let this get too heavy; the love interest, with the character of Mrs. Edison, will receive due prominence."

PRODUCTION PACE IS MAINTAINED

Hollywood's studios maintained the accelerated pace this week as six pictures were finished, just one less than the week previous, and eight were started, against the nine of the week before. There were 27 shooting, compared to last week's 25.

Being prepared were 16, while 66 were being edited, against the 22 and 65 in the same categories last week.

Paramount completed two: "Down Went McGinty" and "Woman from Hell," while Columbia finished "Men Without Souls," Samuel Goldwyn "The Westerner," for which distribution arrangements had not yet been set. Monogram "Rhythm on the Rio Grande," and Universal "Black Friday."

Work was started on "Waterloo Bridge," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer; "Cheyenne Kid," Monogram; "Destiny," Paramount; "Our Town," Principal Productions, for United Artists release; "Curtain Call," RKO Radio; "Pioneers of the West," Republic; "Lillian Russell," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Alias the Deacon," Universal.

Shooting were two picture at Columbia, five at MGM, one at RKO, five at Twentieth-Fox, three at Universal and three at Warner Brothers.

An aviator during the World War, Mr. Brown today wears the insignia of the Quiet Birdmen, a flying organization, in his lapel.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Pinocchio

(RKO Radio)

Cartoon Feature in Color

Time was when the word that "Griffith has done it again," echoing out of Hollywood, meant to the exhibitors of the nation that the "Old Master" had produced another natural which would be available presently to reap the customary box-office reward for solid entertainment delivered in good order. Doubtlessly the best box-office news of the current Hollywood week is the word, not at all dissimilarly conditioned, that "Disney has done it again," and today, as in the case of D. W. Griffith two decades back, details are irrelevant.

"Pinocchio" is a better picture than "Snow White" was, for reasons which can be dug out and talked about by such as wish to, and the fact that it is a better picture seems to provide about as much exploitation material as any showman need have to work with.

The chief reason for the superiority of "Pinocchio" doubtlessly is the assurance with which Walt Disney proceeded in its manufacture. He knew, this time, that the market for the picture is surely there. He knew, too, that he had whetted a keen appetite, that the extreme measure of success which his first feature cartoon had experienced was at once a promise and a challenge. His second one couldn't be merely just as good. It had to be a very great deal better, in the nature of things, to get an even break.

The secondary reason for the superiority of "Pinocchio" is the strictly technological advancement made by Mr. Disney and his associates during the two years spent on producing it. This is repeatedly made manifest, spectacularly so in certain passages where simulation of perspective is artfully employed to produce both illusion and thrill. It is strikingly manifested again in the smoothness achieved with natural size human characters, a newly acquired proficiency even more notably exercised in the case of the whale centrally featured in the later portion of the film, while the animation throughout, in mass and in detail, is of a far higher order than had been accomplished prior to release of "Snow White."

The story of "Pinocchio" is composed of somewhat stouter stuff than that of "Snow White." It contains no boy-meets-girl romance, and it does contain cops and robbers melodrama. It does contain some witchery but no witch, and it makes villains of certain animals as well as human beings. It begets a more robust variety of laughter, and more of it, but no tears. It is a quite different type of subject and the preview audience's reaction to it was more demonstrative than the preview audience's reaction to "Snow White," the affirmative decision a good deal more positive.

If "Pinocchio" fails to surpass "Snow White" in any detectable particular it is on the music side. It contains five new songs and no man can say that one of them will not prove a bigger hit than "Hi Ho" was, for no man can predict popular reaction to the tinkle type of tunes Disney uses, but no one of the five was being hummed and whistled by the preview guests as they filed out. There never was a minute's doubt about "Hi Ho."

In every other department, and most magnificently in the matter of Technicolor, "Pinocchio" is a finer film than "Snow White." That would seem to be the keynote for exhibitor exploitation to strike and sustain throughout the advance campaign and engagement.

I Take This Woman

(MGM)

Doctor Drama

"I Take This Woman," as presented by MGM, has as its primary assets Spencer Tracy, Academy award winner and among the first ten Money Making Stars of the Motion Picture Herald and Fame exhibitor poll, and Hedy Lamarr, who ranks quite high in amount of newspaper space and fans' gossip. Supported by a cast headed by Verree Teasdale, Kent Taylor and Laraine Day, the pair, one as a doctor and the other as a would-be suicide whom he marries, struggle unhappily through an unhappy screenplay to reach fictional happiness.

The previous excellent directorial efforts of W. S. Van Dyke II far transcend this latest, the primary reason being perhaps the necessity of taking a production which about 18 months ago was shelved for various reasons and remaking it. James K. McGuinness adapted the original story of Charles MacArthur, which has the aroma of familiarity.

"Dr. Decker" weds "Georgi," who attempted to commit suicide because of unrequited love for another man, and attempts to win her. In an effort to give her everything she wants, he leaves his clinic on the East Side of New York and becomes physician to the wealthy. Thinking his experiment with "Georgi" has failed and that she still loves her old sweetheart, he, in the midst of a threatened scandal, throws away his partnership in the hospital and prepares to leave for China on a research expedition. His old East Side patients, aroused by "Georgi," influence him to return to the clinic.

Previewed to a spasmodically unenthusiastic audience at the Village Theatre, Westwood, Cal.—V.K.

Produced and distributed by MGM. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke II. Screen play by James Kevin McGuinness. Original story by Charles MacArthur. Musical score by Bronislau Kaper and Arthur Guttman. Art Director, Cedric Gibbons. Associate, Paul Groesse. Photographed by Harold Rosson. Film editor, George Boemler. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6000. Running time, when seen in Westwood, 95 minutes. Release date, Feb. 2, 1940. General audience classification.

Swiss Family Robinson

(RKO-Radio)

Adventure Story

Nearly everybody knows the Johann David Wyss story of the Swiss Family Robinson, and this picture tells it just about the way everybody knows it. It is a creditable start for Gene Towne and Graham Baker on their chosen career as producers, not a colossal triumph but a solid piece of wide appeal merchandise.

Thomas Mitchell gives his usual competent performance as the head of the family and Edna Best measures up adequately as the wife and mother. Freddie Bartholomew has somewhat the better of the dialogue and footage breaks, as concerns the support, but Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt, Jr., and Baby Bobby Quillan are given some excellent moments. Naturally, these six carry the complete burden during the island portion of the picture, which is practically all of it.

Messrs. Towne and Baker, with whom Walter Ferris is credited for the screen play, have done a bit of amplification fore and aft of the narrative proper. They have dated the time of the Robinson Family's departure from England to coincide with Napoleon's greatest military threat to that power, and have supplied dialogue which, while explaining that the objective is to escape a war-ridden Europe, can be interpreted as referring likewise to the present state of affairs on the Continent. The device adds some point to the story and does no damage to the picture.

No attempt to equip the Wyss adventure tale with new plot has been made. It is on film, as it was in print, primarily a tale of adventure with natural catastrophe the only villain in it. Effects of enforced hardship upon the characters of all concerned are clearly traced and there is a satisfactory degree of humorous content, much of this deriving from the activities of turtles, an ostrich and other wild life encountered upon the island.

The associate producer, Donald J. Ehlers, and the director, Edward Ludwig, acquitted themselves becomingly in their handling of the intricate processes by which the shipwrecked family fabricate their island dwelling, improvise utilities, ways and means. Fascinating material, they have managed to telescope a great amount of it into proportionately little footage, thus keeping the slender story moving steadily.

Doubtlessly the story is, as in the original, strongest in its appeal to the juvenile audience, although it seemed to make a good many of the adults attending the Hollywood preview juveniles again for the period of its screening. That could be because "The Swiss Family Robinson" is now, as when new, one of the two or three most completely escapist stories ever written.

Previewed at the RKO Hill Street theatre, Los Angeles, to a metropolitan matinee audience unaccustomed to previews and quite audibly responsive to the more adventurous passages in the picture.—W. R. W.

Young as You Feel

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Jones Family

The Jones Family, as portrayed in this particular stanza of their affairs, learn the value of work and the evils inherent in too much leisure, when the family drug store is sold and a trip made to New York. The plot is thus similar to that of "Handy Andy," Will Rogers picture made in 1935 and also based on the Lewis Beach play, "Merry Andrew."

The characters created by Katherine Kavanaugh are enacted again by Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Joan Valerie, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan. A fine performance as a bogus Russian singer is turned in by George Givot, and the family's youngest member is depicted by Gloria Ann White, here as full of personality, although tearful, as she was in more sunny mood in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady."

The comedy elements in the screen play by Joseph Hoffman and Stanley Rauh are used to full advantage. Malcolm St. Clair directed, with John Stone associate producer in the Sol Wurtzel unit.

Chasing Trouble

(Monogram)

Frankie Darro Melodrama

Monogram's juvenile star, Frankie Darro, has emerged as a different personality under the guiding hand of the producer, Grant Withers. He is as precocious as ever but somewhere along the line, starting with the Grant Withers association in "Irish Luck," Frankie has lost a great deal of the toughness of former portrayals, and carries on his exploits in a more appealing guise. And it may be added that Mr. Withers not so long ago was an actor who specialized in "heavy" roles.

"Chasing Trouble" is a most appropriate title for this film and the trouble chaser, Frankie, finds plenty of it in a fast moving story. Here again he fancies himself a sleuth. A bellhop in the former picture and a delivery boy for a florist shop in this one he has had in both an excellent foil in the person of Mantan Moreland, the colored comedian. Marjorie Reynolds, George Cleveland, Alex Callam, Lillian Elliott and Milburn Stone have the principal supporting roles. Howard Bretherton directed; he also handled "Irish Luck."

"Cupid," the delivery boy, fancies himself an expert on graphology, in choosing a man of good character and ability as a boy friend for "Susie." That the man turns out to be a rat doesn't penetrate until another volume shows the first was wrong. Meanwhile the damage has been done, in a swiftly paced plot of international spies and sabotage.

Village Barn Dance

(Republic)

Family Comedy-Drama

What might have been termed a "highly sophisticated" audience appeared to like this picture, at its premiere in a Greenwich Village (N. Y.) night club, the Village Barn. The producers, therefore, look to the heart-warming performances by such troupers as Esther Dale, George Barbier, and Richard Cromwell as a factor for interest to the public at large, for there is a homely quality to build patronage among the family trade. An abundance of exploitation pegs is manifest. For instance, the "Kidoodlers," who have a large part in the picture, are well known, through radio performances and recordings. "Vera Vague" (Barbara Jo Allen) is also well known, as are Don Wilson, the announcer, and Lulubelle and Scotty. The picture is, in good part, a variety show, featuring American in modern tempo, and good use was made of the variety artists who temper the routines of the featured players.

The story has Cromwell in the role of the unemployed boy who drifts into the small town of Lyndale, dominated by "Minerva Withers," Esther Dale, who is persuading her townsfolk to invest in "improvements" so that a wealthy manufacturer may bring in his factories. He falls in love with her granddaughter, "Betty," played by Doris Day. "Rutherford" will bring his factory only if she marries his son (Robert Baldwin). She elopes with him. The villagers, led by "Uncle Si," George Barbier, take possession of a radio station in a larger city and broadcast their "Village Barn Dance." "Betty" hears the programs, knows now that the villagers have enough money so that she doesn't have to marry young "Rutherford."

Previewed at the Village Barn night club, New York City, where a typically blase audience liked the songs and performances more than the plot.—FLOYD STONE.

Produced and distributed by Republic. Directed by Frank McDonald. Screen play by Dorrell and Stuart McGowan. Running time, when seen in New York, 74 minutes. Release date, January 30th, 1940. General audience classification. P.C.A. Certificate 5975.

(Paramount)

Paramount Paragraphic

The island of Barbados in the Caribbean Sea is the location for the latest in the Paragraphic series, which treats of the natives' ancient ways of working with wind for the main source of power, and the manufacturing of cane sugar and syrup. The Juanita Hall Singers offer the musical background of native songs. The subject should please most everyone.—Running time, 10 minutes.

partment has permitted genuine U. S. currency to be shown on the screen. Made in cooperation with the Department, "Know Your Money" recounts a true story of a gang of counterfeiters and how the ring was broken up by the Secret Service. It is told in the melodramatic and interesting fashion that is a trademark of all the subjects in the series. The cast includes Dennis Moore, Noel Madison, Adrian Morriss, John Wray, William Edmunds and Charles D. Brown. Joe Newman directed. Running time, 21 minutes.

Alfalfa's Double

(MGM)

Our Gang

"Alfalfa" Switzer seems to have wrested the leadership of "Our Gang" from even that experienced actor "Spanky" McFarland. Here "Alfalfa" displays his versatility in a dual role. "Alfalfa" and his "double," a rich boy, are both dissatisfied with their positions in the scheme of things. They decide to change clothes and personalities. The changing of clothes is simple but the changing of personalities is something else again. "Alfalfa" is ill at ease in the rich man's house and causes much anxiety while his "double" finds himself in hot water with the "Gang" when he promises sodas and finds he hasn't the wherewithal to pay. "Alfalfa" and his "double" are happy to revert to their own ways in life. Running time, 11 minutes.

Unusual Occupations, No. 3

(Paramount)

American At Work

Filmed in color, Paramount has captured in another of the Unusual Occupations series various odd methods persons have of making a living. There is a modern Noah who has devoted most of his life to constructing a second ark to bring him everlasting fame at the end of the world. A young woman makes elaborate and decorative gadgets out of the everyday sipping straw. The remainder of the coverage includes a man who appraises and sells fresh water pearls taken from the Mississippi River, a woman who has built a profitable business through the growing and carving of gourds. To wind up the issue the camera goes to Hollywood for a visit with a stunt pilot.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Navajo Land

Reelism

A United States Government Indian Reservation is the locale of this subject. A comparison is shown of how Indians of years ago roamed the plains and by improper farming and grazing ruined their land. Today, with the Government controlling the Reservation, the Indians have learned how to care for the land themselves besides getting a liberal education in many subjects and trades. The subject concludes with a fire dance.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Old South

(MGM)

King Cotton

This is the story of cotton in the South, the South of before and after but mostly of "Gone with the Wind." At first Southern farmers planted sugar and tobacco but the crops were never sufficient to sustain the farmers. Cotton was introduced from India and the South was on the road to prosperity. Eli Whitney invented his cotton gin and more slaves were transplanted from Africa. King Cotton was master of the South. The Civil War brought a dark period but cotton has done much to replace the battle scars. So runs the pictorial treatment. This subject is well told. Directed by Fred Zinnemann. Running time, 10 minutes.

PASSPORTS GRANTED 365 ACTORS IN YEAR

Foreign travel appealed to 365 actors last year, it was revealed Tuesday by the U. S. State Department in its annual report on the number of passports and passport renewals issued in 1938.

That number of travelers gave acting as their profession, together with 586 musicians and 1,033 writers, among the 89,850 persons who obtained travel papers last year. Because of the fact that the department's statistics gives occupations only along broad lines, there was no information available as to the number of film company officials among the 3,313 executives or the number of film technicians among the 433 technicians who also filed passport applications.

Approximately two-thirds of all the persons traveling abroad last year gave Western Europe as their destination, and this presumably included most of the actors and musicians.

A breakdown of the information to disclose the permanent residence of passport applicants showed that 18,424 were from New York City, and 10,525 from California, representing together 32.26 per cent of the total, and accounting probably for most of the talent which went abroad.

Bowling Skill

(Paramount)

Sportlight

One of the fastest growing sports is brought to the screen in Paramount's "Bowling Skill." The subject opens with a demonstration of lawn bowlers and follows with Earl Carroll's beauties from the Hollywood theatre bowling at one of the open air bowling alleys. The highlight rests in trick shots on one and two alleys by Gene Gagliardi. Slow motion camera sequences help demonstrate the cleverness of the former world champion. This subject should be interesting in general.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Matching Wits

"Information Please" continues to be an interesting and entertaining short subject revealing how the program is conducted on the radio by a beverage company. Clifton Fadiman, book critic for the New Yorker magazine, asks Frank P. Adams, John Kieran, Oscar Levant and guest Gene Tunney questions that seldom stump them.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Mad Maestro

(MGM)

Colored Cartoon

Some impudent and funny cartoon caricaturing of a symphony orchestra leader is made in this latest colored pen drawing from the MGM ink pots. Patrons may be able to detect in the burlesqued lines of the subject's "wacky" leader certain signatory mannerisms of various podium potentates. Whether the temperamental disposition of the maestro produces such dissonant riot in the orchestral rendition or the sour notes of his string and wind sections drive the leader mentally awry, the exhibition is fun to watch and hear anyway. There are snatches of some very fine music.—Running time, eight minutes.

Aquapoise

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope No. 6

The increasingly popular sport of aquaplaning is brought to the screen by Pathe in No. 6 of the Sportscope parade. Following in orderly continuity from the first instructions given the beginner on dry land to the more difficult feats on water skis and aquaplanes, the short holds plenty of thrills. The subject was produced by Fred Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Fishing Bear

(MGM)

Color Cartoon

A Rudolph Ising cartoon in color this tells the story of the bear who went fishing. This bear is a big fellow with mannerisms reminiscent of another big fellow, Wallace Beery. The fish are plentiful but the bear has his troubles, for in the first place the fish eat the bait right off the hook and in the second place a fun-loving duck catches the line and returns it. Finally an electric eel grabs it, causing a Fourth of July display and a black face for Mr. Bear.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Shakespearean Spinach

(Paramount)

Romeo and Juliet

Max Fleischer has placed Popeye and Olive in an entertaining burlesque of Romeo and Juliet, with the powerful Bluto as the jealous former suitor. The play opens to music set to the Shakespearean play. Bluto, in the wing, does his best to disrupt the acting but only helps make Romeo and Juliet more comical, to the delight of the audience. Popeye eats his spinach and disposes of the annoying Bluto, as usual. One of the better and more novel in the Popeye series of cartoons.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Land of Alaska Nellie

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Traveltalk

A bit different in that much of the footage is devoted to the quaintly named woman of the title is the newest edition of these superior sight seeing subjects. However, although the personal element is stressed, the compiler has achieved the customary exhibition of well photographed and colored countryside. "Nellie" is in real life Nellie Neal-Lawing, pioneer woman who operates a wellknown roadside establishment.—Running time, nine minutes.

Better and Better

Christopher Morley is guest guesser on the latest "Information Please," with Oscar Levant, Frank P. Adams and John Kieran also answering the questions of Clifton Fadiman. Only one question is missed and the Will Rogers Memorial Fund is $25 larger.—Running time, 11 minutes.

RKO Signs Three Circuits

RKO Radio has closed with three additional circuits for the season's product, the Goldberg circuit covering seven houses in Omaha, the Black Hills Amusement Company, which operates in Nebraska and South Dakota, and the Delft Theatres for first run in Escanaba and Marquette, Mich.

TWO TRUST SUITS SETTLED, TWO POSTPONED; ANOTHER CASE FILED

Indianapolis and Baltimore Theatres End Actions Against Majors; Philadelphia and Boston Actions Are Delayed

This week's score on the film trust suit front was two suits settled, the Linden action in Baltimore and the Indianapolis case; two postponed, the Admiral theatres action in Philadelphia and the Boston suit; one new case; at Fargo, N. D., and action continued on several other cases. Also, conferences were held on the key New York suit of the Government.

The Linden theatre action in Baltimore against eight majors companies and the Rome-Durkee circuit was settled out of court, likewise settlement was reached in the Indianapolis case. Damages totaling $40,000 were asked in the Fargo action against the Minnesota Amusement Company and the American Amusement Company. A "trick lease" was said to be the cause of the damages.

Baltimore Action Settled

Harry Shapiro, attorney for the Linden theatre in its suit against eight majors and the Rome-Durkee circuit, said that the settlement was "satisfactory" but no terms were announced. The decision was reached last Friday.

The plaintiff charged that the Linden theatre was not able to get product until after the pictures had played at theatres of the Rome-Durkee chain and that, because of clearance arrangements, good pictures could not be obtained until they were so old that they no longer were attractions at the box office. The owners of the Linden theatre also asked that the Rome-Durkee circuit be enjoined from adding theatres.

Indianapolis Case Ended

A settlement has been reached in the anti-trust case of the Indianapolis Amusement Company against large distributors. An order for dismissal of the case is to be filed in the Indianapolis Federal District Court within the next few days. This action will end the suit which began in 1931 without a trial.

Rorie R. Blair, the plaintiff, operating a small circuit in Indianapolis, brought action involving complaints arising out of the old arbitration clauses which are now outlawed. He operates a small circuit in Indianapolis. The agreement settling the trust suit was reached last week and involves payment to the plaintiff.

Philadelphia Suit Postponed

The anti-suit of the Admiral theatres against Warner Brothers, the large distributors, and Robert Lynch, Philadelphia MGM branch manager, was postponed indefinitely on Monday. The action was filed January 3rd and in it are sought triple damages under the Federal anti-trust laws. Damages asked amount to $225,000.

Another Philadelphia anti-trust suit is scheduled for a hearing in the Federal court on Monday. This case was filed by Harry Fried, suburban exhibitor, more than a year ago.

Extension Granted

Eight major distributors have been granted an extension until February 10th to file answers to the action brought in Boston by seven Eastern theatres. The plaintiffs charge violation of the anti-trust laws and ask $2,595,000. The defendants are Twentieth Century-Fox; Loew's, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Paramount Pictures Distributing Company; United Artists Corporation; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and Columbia Pictures, Inc.

CANADA SETS 1940 LICENSE FEES

Theatre license fees to the Canadian Performing Right Society for the current year are set as follows: 15 cents per seat for theatres of 1,600 seats and over; 12 cents for theatres having from 801 to 1,599 seats, and 10 cents per seat for all theatres with less than 800 seats. Theatres seating less than 800 and operating not more than three days a week are covered by a special provision and pay 5 cents per seat. A minimum fee of $10 has been established by the society for any license.

The Performing Right Society will sponsor for a third year a musical competition for Canadian composers. The purpose of the award is to encourage music in the Dominion. The first prize is a scholarship valued at $750. Seventy-five Canadian composers competed in the past two years for the society's award.

The action has been brought by the following theatre companies: Loew's Drive-in Theatre, Providence; Lynn Open Air Theatre, Inc., Lynn, Mass.; Winchester Theatre Company, Inc., Winchester, Mass.; E. M. Loew's, Inc., operating Winchester theatre under lease; Miami Drive-in-Theatre, Dade County, Florida; Gov. Ritchie Theatres, Inc., Glen Burnie, Md.; and the Mt. Vernon Theatre Corporation, Alexandria, Va.

Fargo Case Over Lease

The Minnesota Amusement Company and the American Amusement Company, operating three theatres in Fargo, N. D., are charged with arranging a "trick lease" which blocked the entrance of the only other suitable theatre in Fargo. The action was brought by Mrs. Minnie Hector Smith, owner of the Orpheum theatre.

It was stated that the Orpheum had been dark until leased to the Paramount affiliated theatre operating companies. The plaintiff charges that four days before the lease was to expire, Paramount leased two-foot strips of property on either side of Mrs. Smith's theatre and interfered with exits required by a city ordinance. It was further alleged that the Minnesota Amusement Company and the American Amusement Company then allowed the theatre lease to lapse.

Damages of $15,000 loss of income and failure to keep up the building, plus $25,000 goodwill, are asked. Under the anti-trust laws, which provided for triple damages in some cases, the charges could amount to $120,000.

Nashville Hearing February 2nd

The initial hearing in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville and major producers and distributors was scheduled for Friday in the United States District court at Nashville. The suit was filed on August 11th by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Owen Hughes.

In the suit, brought in behalf of the Department of Justice, it is asserted that the independent theatres are not able to get first class features because of extensive block-booking by the Crescent Company and affiliates and subsidiaries.

The defendants will enter motions for a bill of particulars from the government to get a detailed explanation of the suit and for a 40 day extension of the time given defendants to answer the Federal complaint.

Vineland Injunction Decision

Decision is expected Monday in the case of the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., against the Warner circuit and the majors. The defendants have appealed the decision of Judge William Kirkpatrick in granting a temporary injunction last November.

The injunction was called "unconstitutional" by William A. Schnader, former attorney general and counsel for the majors, and Morris Wolf, representing the Warner circuit. The attorney for Eugene Mori, owner of the Landis theatre, was Harry Shapiro, and he asked the court to "destroy that monopoly as the courts did in 1916."

Trial Delay Beyond May I Seen

While trial of the Government's anti-trust action against the majors in the New York area had been expected to begin on May 1st, delays occurring up to this week made it appear that it would start later. The delays have been occasioned by the Government's failure to answer defendants' interrogatories, and by its last-minute intention to hold pre-trial examinations of major company executives.

The Government, if it agrees to answer the interrogatories, probably will be given until March 1st. The interrogatories have been consolidated and approved by all defendants except Columbia. The Justice Department this week was still to approve. If it does not, it will have about seven sets of separate answers to prepare, instead of two.

That trial might possibly be delayed until next fall is entirely a possibility, these attorneys hold. They point out that, if trial is held up much after May 1st, the court may have to begin it next fall because it recesses from July until September.

Columbia's application to vacate the Government's request to examine its officers, was heard on Monday, before Federal Judge William Bondy.

The company's attorneys told Judge Bondy that the order requiring Harry Cohn, Columbia president, to appear in New York for examination would create a precedent which would give the Government power to "cause a terrific amount of annoyance and harassment" to other coast officials.

Louis Frohlich of Schwartz and Frohlich, Columbia attorneys, argued that Mr. Cohn, as a California resident, was not amenable to the court's processes. On the Government's request for appearance of Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, and A. Montague, its general sales manager, he noted that the Government, to date, had failed to answer the company's interrogatories.

Judge Bondy reserved decision, indicating that he might not ask Harry Cohn to come to New York from the coast.

The Government on Monday filed notice that it would apply next Tuesday to Judge Henry W. Goddard, who will hear the trial, for an order vacating the 59 interrogatories served by Columbia.

EXTRAS GAIN GROUND; VAUDEVILLE UNIT VOTES

Agents Union Demands New Election in Endicott Circuit; Radio Closed Shop in Seattle

This week was one of the quietest in organized motion picture labor, on the two main fronts—talent and the crafts in Hollywood—and in the mechanical crafts in the field. The main activities centered upon the granting of broader organization rights for extras by the Screen Actors Guild, in the nomination of officers by the American Guild of Variety Artists, and in less than half a dozen controversies in exhibition.

Greater Autonomy for Extras

Class A members of the Screen Actors Guild, in Hollywood, by a vote of 420 to 31, passed an amendment to their constitution and bylaws permitting Class B members (extra and bit players) a greater measure of autonomy inside and outside of the organization. John Dales, acting executive secretary of the Guild, said that the amendment would become effective at once.

Philip Irving was nominated for the post of president of the New York chapter of the American Guild of Variety Artists last weekend by the nominating committee. The Guild's membership is composed of stage performers in film-stage show theatres, night clubs, cabarets and the like.

Elections must be held on or before February 23. Additional nominations may be made by petition if filed before Sunday. Dave Fox was named for the vice-presidency; Peter Wells, second vice-president; Hazel Scott, third vice-president; Michael Lewis, fourth vice-president; Sam Kramer, fifth vice-president; Helen Sanford, secretary; and Alfred Stone, treasurer.

For the executive board candidates named were Charles Arno, Henry Berman, Billy Glason, Jack Gilford, Al Hammer, Lionel Murray, Mario Naldi, Fred Pisano, Elton Rich, Ed Rickard, Noble Sissle, Thelma Flowers and Arthur Ward. Alternate candidates named were Charles Honi Coles, Dorothy Stone, Jay Dixon and Al Shayne.

Unions in the Field

Charging that the election held by the New York State Labor Relations Board for the Endicott Circuit was improperly conducted, the Motion Picture Division of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union asked last week that the election be set aside and a new one ordered. The board reserved decision.

Melvin Albert, attorney for Endicott, said that the election, which voted down the designation of TMAT as collective bargaining agency, presented a true picture of the desires of the employees and that the charged irregularities would not in any case have affected the vote.

Gustave A. Gerber, union attorney, said that notices of the election were not posted in theatres, that the union had not been permitted to use its challenge lists, and that the board had failed to provide a certified voting list. A decision is expected shortly.

In Springfield, Mass., Daniel J. Collins of Boston, examiner for the State Labor Relations Board, conducted a hearing on charges brought by Alfred Page, former manager of the Strand theatre in Holyoke, that he was discharged for union activities. Claiming unfair labor practices by the Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., owner of the Strand, Mr. Page asked the board to order his reinstatement.

Sharp clashes developed during the hearing between Nathan E. Goldstein, president of the theatre circuit, and Charles O. Carroll of New York, national president of the motion picture division of the TMAT. Mr. Page charges the theatre circuit management began moves which led to his dismissal after it was revealed that he was a union member at a hearing before the board last Summer. The circuit claims the discharge was for cause and had no connection with his union activity.

EXCHANGE HOLDS GOODWILL TOURS

As a means of promoting goodwill between the motion picture industry and the public, the Warner Brothers exchange in Chicago has been conducting a series of tours through its offices in a tieup with the Board of Education. Tom Gilliam is branch manager.

Representatives of the exchange explain the various tasks performed in distributing motion picture film to the public. Hundreds of persons from all walks of life have visited the exchange so far. The tour has been climaxed by screenings of special subjects for the group.

An agreement calling for a closed shop, increased wages and improved working conditions for technicians was signed in Seattle this week by Bert M. Fisher for National Broadcasting Company stations there with W. A. Kelly, international organizer for the Electrical Workers' Union, Local B-77. Wages will be $45 weekly for six months, and then $47.50. The Columbia Broadcasting System outlet in Seattle signed the same agreement last week. KOL, the Mutual-Don Lee station, is still unsigned and the studio in the Northern Life Tower building is being picketed.

Local 343, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, in Omaha, has elected R. L. McIntyre president, succeeding Adolph Fells. Other officers are Howard Jackson, business agent; Alvin Kostlan, first vice-president; Shep Owens, second vice-president; Clyde Cooley, secretary; G. E. Jordon, financial secretary, and Baird Loomis, treasurer.

Theatrical Employees, Local V-105 in Sheboygan, Wis., has elected the following officers: Frank Zore, president; Nellie Luksis, recording secretary; William Kotnik, business agent and secretary-treasurer; Ralph Schallow, William Way and Joseph Heitzman, board of auditors; William Heimke, Messrs. Way, Zore, Kotnik and Bauman, executive board.

The eleventh annual Theatrical Ball, sponsored by Local 87, IATSE, Richmond, Va., will be held at Tantilla Garden February 14th. Harry Jarvis is general charman

Unions Face Tests Under Trust Laws

While labor leaders in both the Congress of Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor ranks criticized the use of the Sherman anti-trust law in the indictment last week of Joseph P. Ryan and other union officials in New York, federal authorities reiterated the statement of Thurman Arnold that the anti-trust law could and would be used in labor cases, where it was found applicable.

The indictment of Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, AFL, was attacked by New York spokesmen for the federation and by Hugh Thompson, secretary-treasurer of the New York State Industrial Union Council of the CIO.

Grant W. Kelleher, a special assistant in Mr. Arnold's anti-trust division of the attorney general's office, issued a brief statement defining the Government's attitude in the case.

"It is the policy of Mr. Arnold," he said, "to invoke the provisions of the Sherman act in cases where pressure is being put on an employer through secondary boycotts and threats of violence to compel him to coerce employees to join a union not of their own choosing," Mr. Kelleher said.

Referee Orders Sale of GN Assets

Referee Peter B. Olney on Monday ordered the sale of all remaining assets of Grand National Pictures in 28 exchanges. Under court directions a public auction will be held by the trustees within the next few days.

During the examination of Earl W. Hammons, former head of Grand National, Joseph Dannenberg, attorney for the trustees, clashed with Hammons over the valuation of Educational Pictures' assets assigned to GN in return for stock. Mr. Dannenberg attempted to show that GN got the worst of a deal in which it turned over to Educational 1,100,000 shares of common stock and assumed Educational's obligations in return for the major part of the latter company's assets. Dannenberg delved into an estimate of $1,068,922 as the valuation of Educational's trade-marks and reissue rights assigned to Grand National, and stated that assets on Educational's books were set up at the figure of $55,389.

Mr. Dannenberg attempted to show, at continued examination of Mr. Hammons on Tuesday, that GN was insolvent during part of its operations. Mr. Hammons insisted that the company was solvent, despite losses of $4,500 weekly. The examination was to continue on Friday.

Educational Pictures, Inc., on Wednesday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in U. S. district court in New York, listing liabilities of $577,923 and assets of $352,442. Electrical Research Products, Inc., was listed as the largest creditor. The company's action followed the recent refusal of the Securities and Exchange Commission to extend a loan of $450,000 to the company.

H. J. Allen, vice-president and managing director of Grand National Films, Ltd., in Toronto, Canada, has announced plans for a reorganization of the company as a result of the Grand National windup in New York. The Canadian company was an independent incorporation, but, in view of developments, the name will be dropped and Mr. Allen will use his own name for the time being at least.

Griffis and La Guardia Confer on Production

Another in the lengthening procession of film company executives who have conferred with New York's Mayor, Fiorello La Guardia, on the feasibility of producing pictures in New York, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the board of Paramount, talked with the Mayor and his aide, Clendennin J. Ryan, Jr., last week.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE WAR HAS COST the loss of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S northernmost subscriber on the North American Continent, perhaps in the world—the Yellowknife theatre at Yellowknife, 'way up in the Yukon, on the very rim of the Arctic Circle—a place so small that the latest World Atlas doesn't show, or even list it.

When the gold boom mining town of Yellowknife started to show the effects of the invasion of miners, gamblers, prospectors, and others, growing to a full 1,000 population, from its normal few hundreds in 1938, a Mr. Rothstein set up a "big," "de luxe," "downtown first-run" theatre of 300 seats—the only one for hundreds of miles. The Yellowknife theatre set out in the fall of 1938 without any Bingo, Beano, Banko or Biffo, no dish or vegetable giveaways, no double bills, triple bills or any other of the what-have-yous that clutter-up so many theatres in the U. S. A.

At the outset, the Yellowknife theatre management sent in a hurry-call for MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on subscription, the first copy going forward on June 6, 1938; but not without quite some exploratory pioneering on the part of the HERALD'S subscription and delivery departments and the post office departments of the United States and Canada, for they had to trek the copies, first by train to the north, then by plane further north, then by dogsled, still further north, to the doorstep of the Yellowknife in northern Yellowknife.

In September, last, there was still plenty of life left in Yellowknife, gold or no gold. Then the war came, and, in a flash, Yellowknife was practically shuttered, including the Yellowknife, MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S northermost subscriber on the North American Continent, in the Yukon, on the very rim of the Arctic Circle.

With some 30 of Hollywood's very-top stars present, eager to attend the President's radio broadcast from his private study, Lou kept Gloria out of the White House altogether at that hour and instead arranged for her to appear, as the only Hollywood celebrity, at the Mayflower Hotel when Mrs. Roosevelt cut the birthday cake there, just before the President's radio address at the White House. Five newsreel cameras and every press syndicate photographed this event and they all showed Gloria standing on a chair beside Mrs. Roosevelt as she brandishes the first slice of cake. Mrs. Roosevelt said Gloria is "a little darling."

He finally picked one and held up for insertion a picture of Hitler to see if it would do. The floorwalker saw the picture and shouted: "You mug," or worse. Crowds gathered. Monsieur Tytis will recover.

IT IS no simple thing to crush a legend. To destroy a host of legends seems almost impossible. For the last week, however, so the New York Times' Meyer Berger reports, 34 men from 34 midtown New York Times Square hotels have been at this task. They want to break up the almost universal belief that Times Square is wicked, the Times Square that is the "heart" of the world, the heart of the theatre world.

They want to destroy the idea that The Square never sleeps. They would convince prospective visitors that Times Square is less noisy than legend says it is. And they will try to prove that Times Square is not haunted by careless "trigger men," cutthroats and purse-cutters.

All this they hope to accomplish before the N. Y. World's Fair opens next May. They have formed an association—The Hotels of Times Square—with these aims and are prepared to flood the country with proof that the theatre belt is safe, sane and habitable.

Men with sound-measuring devices will attack the noise legend. Surveys of pedestrian and motor traffic will be invoked to banish the thought that The Square never sleeps. Police statistics will be marshaled to put down visitors' fears of gunmen. The hotels of Times Square have adopted a slogan: "Times Square, a Place to Play; a Place to Stay."

Road men for these hotels have learned that folk from the weed and pollen belts still think The Square is populated after dark by sinister fellows with dirks and machine guns.

"A New Yorker won't believe it," one of the hotel men assured us, "but our road men have run across people who are afraid they will be mowed down by gunmen in Times Square."

WARNERS, COLUMBIA, NATIONAL IN MEETINGS

Final Week of RKO Selling Before Depinet Drive Brings 17 Circuit Deals

Product and sales and billings were taken up this week by Columbia, Warners and RKO, and product and buying, by National Theatres.

Columbia held another field sales meeting, in San Francisco; Warners called a convention for the weekend, in Chicago; RKO started its "Ned Depinet Drive," and National Theatres circuit officials were meeting in Los Angeles.

Columbia Divisional Meeting

Fourth and last of Columbia's divisional sales meetings was held at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, last Saturday and Sunday, with A. Montague, general sales manager, presiding. Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, was the only other home office executive attending.

Thirty branch managers and their sales forces, headed by western division manager Jerome Safron, represented the following exchanges: Salt Lake City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle. Branch managers present were: W. G. Seib, R. C. Hill, W. C. Ball, L. E. Tillman, J. B. Beale, Neal Walton.

Columbia's foreign manager, J. A. McConville, left New York Saturday for Mexico, thence to Cuba, returning to New York to again sail, on February 23rd, for South America.

Sears Calls Meeting

A two-day mid season sales meeting of district managers, branch managers and field exploitation men was called by Gradwell L. Sears, Warner sales manager, for the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, Saturday and Sunday, 3rd and 4th.

Plans for the merchandising of Warner-First National features now in release and for the balance of 1939-40 will be discussed.

Company executives leaving from New York Friday to attend the meetings, are: Gradwell L. Sears, Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity; Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager; Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the east; Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian sales manager; Ben Kalmenson, southern and western sales manager; Arthur Sachson, sales department executive; Norman Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, and Mitchell Rawson, eastern publicity manager.

District and branch managers who will be present are:

Ed Schnitzer, eastern district manager, and branch managers Paul S. Krumenacker, Albany; N. J. Ayers, Boston; Charles Rich, Buffalo; John R. Mahan, New Haven; S. Lefkowitz, New York.

R. Smeltzer, central district manager, and branch managers Ralph Kinsler, Cincinnati; T. L. Mendelssohn, Cleveland; F. E. North, Detroit; W. G. Mansell, Philadelphia; Harry Seed, Pittsburgh; F. W. Beiersdorf, Washington.

Rud Lohrenz, midwest district manager, and branch managers T. R. Gilliam, Chicago; Fred Greenberg, Indianapolis; R. T. Smith, Milwaukee; C. K. Olson, Minneapolis.

James Winn, Prairie district manager, and branch managers A. W. Anderson, Des Moines; Homer Hisey, Memphis; W. O. Williamson, Jr., Kansas City; Sid Rose, Omaha; Hall Walsh, St. Louis.

Fred M. Jack, southern district manager, and branch managers R. L. McCoy, Atlanta; John A. Bachman, Charlotte; Doak Roberts, Dallas; L. Conner, New Orleans; J. O. Rohde, Oklahoma City.

Henry Herbel, west coast district manager, and branch managers E. A. Bell, Denver; W. E. Callaway, Los Angeles; V. Stewart, Portland; Wm. F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; Al Shmitken, San Francisco; Wm. Shartin, Seattle.

W. Cohen, Canadian district manager, and branch managers Sam Pearlman, Calgary; M. J. Isman, Montreal; L. McKenzie, Saint John; Jos. Plottel, Toronto; I. Coval, Vancouver; Lou Geller, Winnipeg.

Field exploitation men who will attend include Sam Clark, Chicago; Cameron Shipp, Atlanta; Dick Hyland, Dallas; Monroe Rubinger, Kansas City; Phil Engel, New York; Martin Weiser, Los Angeles.

RKO Deals for Drive

The RKO Radio Pictures' sales department in its final week of selling preparatory to the "Ned Depinet Drive" for billings, this week closed with 17 circuits deals embracing 239 houses. The transactions practically wind up RKO's coverage of major circuits for 1939-40 product.

New deals include the Wehrenberg Circuit, 12 theatres, St. Louis; Black Hills Amusement, six in Denver; Goldberg Circuit, Omaha, seven theatres; Delft Theatres, of Escanaba and Marquette, Mich., two first-runs; Danze Circuit, Seattle, 14 houses; Blumenfeld Circuit, San Francisco, six theatres; Marchesi Brother Circuit of Illinois, six theatres.

Affiliated Circuit, Philadelphia, 12 theatres; John H. Harris, 10 houses in western Pennsylvania and Ohio; Moe Horwitz Circuit, Cleveland, seven theatres; Allen's Circuit, Ontario, 33 theatres; Interstate Circuit of New England, 33 houses; Lichtman Circuit, Washington, 14 theatres; White-Libson Circuit, Cincinnati, 10 theatres; E. M. Loew Circuit of New England, 35 theatres; Pitts Circuit, Washington, 17 theatres; Schulte Circuit, Detroit territory, 15 theatres.

National Theatres Meet

The annual meeting of executives of the National Theatres Corp. started Monday, in Los Angeles, at the Fox West Coast office, with Spyros Skouras, who arrived from New York over the week-end with his brother, Charles P. Skouras, in charge.

Divisional chiefs Harold Fitzgerald, Elmer C. Rhoden, Rick Ricketson, Frank Newman and Arch M. Bowles are present. Harry Cox, A. A. Powers and Edward Zabel of the New York home office also attended.

The meeting concerned itself chiefly with operating policies.

Honor Kellenberg

C. C. Kellenberg, sales manager of the Pittsburgh branch of Twentieth Century-Fox, was honored Monday, by a banquet at the William Penn Hotel, in that city, with more than 200 film industry and American Legion members present. The banquet marked Mr. Kellenberg's twentieth year with the company. C. J. Latta, chief barker of the local Variety Club, was toastmaster. Ira H. Cohn, branch manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, presented Mr. Kellenberg with a gift in behalf of those attending.

FCC Wins U.S. Court Decision

The Federal Communications Commission this week won an important victory in the United States supreme court when Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter delivered an opinion holding that the authority of the courts to review FCC actions was limited to questions involving compliance with the provisions of the communications act.

Indirectly, the decision was of major importance to all Federal administrative agencies, whose authority to make final decisions on administrative questions has long been in dispute.

The court's attitude was expressed by Justice Frankfurter in opinions ordering the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to dismiss writs of mandamus it had issued to the Pottsville Broadcasting Company and Paul R. Heitmeyer, unsuccessful applicants for construction permits for new stations, the former at Pottsville, Pa., and the latter at Cheyenne, Wyo.

The Supreme Court's principles were laid down in the case of the Pottsville application which, after denial by the FCC, had been appealed to the court, which had found an error in law and remanded the case to the commission, and, after a second rejection, was again appealed.

Error of Law Found

"The commission's responsibility at all times is to measure applications by the standard of 'public convenience, interest, or necessity,'" Justice Frankfurter pointed out.

"The commission," he continued, originally found respondent's application inconsistent with the public interest because of an erroneous view regarding the law of Pennsylvania. The Court of Appeals laid bare that error, in compelling obedience to its correction, exhausted the only power which Congress gave it.

"At this point the commission was again charged with the duty of judging the application in the light of 'public convenience, interest, or necessity.' The fact that in its first disposition the commission had committed a legal error did not create rights of priority in the respondent, as against the later applicants, which it would not have otherwise possessed. Only Congress could confer such a priority. It has not done so.

"The Court of Appeals cannot write the principle of priority into the statute as an indirect result of its power to scrutinize legal errors in the first of an allowable series of administrative actions," the opinion held. "Such an implication from the curtailed review allowed by the Communications Act is at war with the basic policy underlying the statute. It would mean that for practical purposes the contingencies of judicial review and of litigation, rather than the public interest, would be decisive factors in determining which of several pending applications was to be granted."

Commission Files Brief

The Federal Communications Commission filed a brief with the Supreme Court contending that it was under no obligation to protect licensees of existing radio stations from competition.

The commission made the argument in an appeal from a decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals holding that the F. C. C. had erred in rejecting the protests of Sanders Bros., licensee of station WKBB, in Dubuque, Iowa, against authorization for "The Dubuque Telegraph Herald" to build a rival station.

"The basic theory upon which broadcast licenses have always been allocated is that competition is essential to the maintenance of high quality programs," the commission said.

over →

TRADEVIEWS by W.R.WILKERSON

• OF the various bread - and - butter pictures that are being made, the series of "Hopalong Cassidys" that Harry Sherman has been producing for Paramount probably earn as much for the company, for the theatres and the industry as any other series produced on a like budget.

The popularity of the "Hopalongs" has reached the stage, because of their entertainment, that they are now getting playdates in the larger and more important theatres, and this gradual move into the better houses means a gradual move into better money, which will be velvet, for, with the manner in which Sherman produces and budgets his shows, the care and attention and sound showmanship that make up his entertainment, he will not have to exceed those costs with the acquisition of the more important exhibitions.

Sherman has been doing this series since 1935. He makes six a year at an average cost of $80,000 each. The series is now doing a domestic gross of $250,000 each and, because of the new interest on the part of the better houses, the collections should jump.

The job done on this series does not end with Sherman producing the pictures and then turning them over to the Paramount exchanges. Harry is one producer in this town who "contacts" his customers. He knows every theatre running the series, is always in correspondence with many of them, and immediately Paramount puts on a new "Hopalong" account, Sherman writes that exhib, thanks him, tells him about the series (from a producer point), encourages his suggestions and, in short, establishes a contact that's a cinch to get the theatre owner working for the pictures.

As mentioned here some time ago, some of the bread-and-butter pictures have been the backbone of production during the days when so many expensive efforts were flopping on all sides. The industry will never thrive on the cheap-budgeted product, as it must have its big, fine, expensively made shows to highlight the boxoffice, but series like Harry Sherman's "Hopalong Cassidys" are a credit to the business and the success that Paramount, Sherman and the exhibitors are having with them is most deserved.

Appellate Division in New York Revokes Injunction Restraining Unions from Interfering with Opera; Dissenters Cite Gains

Disagreeing with a New York supreme court judge's opinion, delivered early last year, that two unions may not combine to block the use of labor-saving machinery—and establishing a ruling of import to exhibitors—the appellate division of the New York supreme court last Friday reversed New York supreme court Kenneth O'Brien's permanent injunction to Opera On Tour, Inc., restraining Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, and George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, from ordering their stagehands, projectionists and musicians to refuse to work for the plaintiff, because the latter used mechanical sound—"canned music."

Calls Action Justified

Justice Joseph M. Callahan, in reading the decision with Justices Alfred H. Townley, and Edward S. Dore concurring, took issue, in effect, with Justice O'Brien, by declaring.

"The defendants, in order to secure what they believed to be their economic betterment, are endeavoring to prevent the use of a mechanical contrivance, which is in the nature of a labor saving device. Such conduct on the defendants' part is justified as a legitimate endeavor of labor, even though it results in some injury for the plaintiff."

Judge O'Brien, in ruling last January, said:

"I hold that the plaintiff (Opera on Tour, Inc.) is within its rights to conduct its business in such a manner, and the illegal interference by the defendants, indicated here as a group, can be enjoined, thus leaving the plaintiff to obtain help outside of the union without being charged with a violation of labor union rules, where a union refuses to furnish help by its members, or where the members of the union individually refuse to take employment of the plaintiff."

Demand Re-employment

The reversal of the opinion and injunction, forecast last year by Henry Friedman, attorney for the AFM, is in line with the Federation's demand for re-employment of musicians in the hundreds of theatres in which they were employed before the coming of "sound."

The federation has been conducting sporadic campaigns and front-of-theatre picketing against theatres to "force" exhibitors, especially the circuits to relieve their unemployment ranks which, they claim, were swelled at the inception of "canned" music in motion pictures. The Federation has been demanding that the circuits rehire the orchestras that they let go when sound entered the films. For the most part, their progress has been nil, except for an occasional theatre enlarging its pit, the most noted instance of which was New York's Music Hall.

The musicians, in various campaigns against theatres, paraded long lines of pickets in front of film houses, displaying banners: "Canned Music (in Films) Ruined Live Music in Orchestras," and the like, calling on the public for support. The Musicians Federation Local in New York started to set up a "million-dollar war chest" to fight the circuits, but apparently only got as far as a series of conferences with circuit executives.

"HEIGHTS" LEADS IN ARGENTINE POLL

A poll of 26 motion picture critics in Argentina to select the best English, Spanish and French films released in 1939 and conducted by Heraldo del Cinematografista, motion picture publication of Buenos Aires, resulted in the following selections:

The best English-spoken production, "Wuthering Heights";

The best Spanish-spoken production, "Prisioners de la Tierra"; the best French-spoken production, "La Fin du Jour."

Other English-spoken films that received votes in the poll were "You Can't Take It with You," "Pygmalion," "Stagecoach," "Boys Town," "The Citadel" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Judge O'Brien's granting of a permanent injunction last year to Opera On Tour was quoted widely in the newspapers as a precedent to aid employers hampered by strikes and combinations of strikes.

The issue came to head in the fall of 1938, after a road company of Opera On Tour, Inc., playing "Faust," had been halted in the South by the refusal of the stagehands in various theatres to work. These had been called upon for aid by the AFM. The company, amidst wide publicity, applied for the injunction, and the Judge additionally, when granting it, noted that, in his opinion, there was "no labor dispute" between the two unions and the company; that the two unions had no right to "enter into any plan or scheme to prevent the plaintiff from conducting its business or producing opera in its own manner"; and that the conduct of the IATSE was "the exercise of an arbitrary power which it has used upon the pretense that they had a right to refuse to render services because of an alleged controversy between the plaintiff and the union (AFM)."

Called Legitimate Move

Last week, in implementing the reversal ruling with opinion, Justice Callahan took issue with the argument that use of machinery represented "progress." Said he:

"While many may deem this to be true, there are those who question the fact that we 'progress' where we use machinery to such an extent that we destroy the opportunity for men to live by employment, and thus create vast numbers of permanently unemployed.

"In any event, we see no reason why it is not a legitimate object of workingmen to attempt by lawful means to limit such alleged 'progress' when it results in direct injury to them."

Two Dissenting Opinions Cited

Judge P. J. Martin, in a dissenting opinion, said, in part:

"The great industrial development of this country is, in large part, due to the practical application of inventions and technological improvements. The majority of labor-saving devices have created greater opportunities for labor through the opening of new fields of endeavor. In some instances, adoption of new machinery has compelled readjustment, but enlightened labor organizations have found means of meeting changing conditions without resorting to strikes to stop progress. . . .

"The conduct of the defendants is sought to be justified on the theory that the endeavor to secure employment for their members is a legitimate activity of the unions. Not every effort of organized labor to secure employment is legal. . . .

"We know of no legal right which justifies the coercion of plaintiff to bring about a reorganization of its business by the elimination of the mechanical device which makes that business possible, so as to compel the employment of instrumental musicians entirely unnecessary in plaintiff's organization, and whose compulsory employment means the death of plaintiff's endeavor."

Judge Edward J. Glennon, also dissenting, remarked, in part:

"The basic question, therefore, is: Has the plaintiff the right to carry on its business in the way it sees fit, by the use of mechanical reproductions, instead of employing members of the musician's union? The proposition presented transcends in importance any question which has been before the courts in recent years. If the contentions of the defendants are to be upheld, we might just as well scrap nearly all mechanical inventions."

ASCAP Wins in Nebraska Action

A decision in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers suit to test the constitutionality of the Nebraska anti-ASCAP law passed by the 1937 legislature was handed down last week by a three judge court in Lincoln. The decision makes the temporary injunction set up November 13, 1937, permanent and perpetual, restrains the state, as defendant, from interfering with the Society's agents in duties of copyright protection, or further attempt to enforce the legislative measure and provides that the complainant pay proper costs.

Depositions will be taken in New York next Tuesday in the Society's action to contest the constitutionality of Florida's law to prevent ASCAP from operating within that state. Prominent ASCAP publisher and author members will be called for their depositions by Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel to the Society. Depositions of Florida state officials also will be taken and the case will then be turned over to the federal court.

The National Tavern League, Milwaukee, has instructed its counsel, Howard P. Haberla, to begin a circuit court action to enjoin the Society from collecting fees on the ground that it has not complied with the Wisconsin registration law, which requires the organization to turn over to the state 25 per cent of its receipts. The association also is expected to begin its court case to force ASCAP to take out a license in Wisconsin in conformity with the state statute.

The Society announced in New York this week a national college fellowship competition for student musical plays, either musical comedies, revues, operettas or operas, to be conducted annually, starting this year. Eight cash awards of $720 each will be paid to the winning authors in each of eight regions.

The "real prize," according to E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of ASCAP, will be the submission of all eight winning plays to Broadway and Hollywood producers with the Society acting as an unpaid agent.

TAXATION BULKS IN LEGISLATIVE ACTIONS

State Censorship Proposed for Kentucky; Ohio Theatres' Tax Bill Up $46,537

New taxation, to be applied directly and otherwise, this week loomed threateningly for exhibitors on the legislative horizon with a new state proposal for censorship, in Kentucky.

New taxation led half a dozen measures of interest to exhibitors and others in the industry in New York. Ohio owners' tax bill for theatres has jumped $46,537 and there are some who see enforcement of new film rental taxes. In Florida, Plant City authorities attempted to push through a four per cent tax on amusements.

Dollar a Reel for Censoring

The Kentucky state censorship proposal was introduced by Representative T. J. Fitzpatrick of Covington. A $1 fee for censoring each reel, not exceeding 1,000 feet, would be charged. Another $1 would be charged for each additional 1,000 feet or fraction thereoef. Fines are provided for violations.

The censorship board wold have three members appointed by the Governor and would be under the Department of Education. They would receive expenses but no pay. One section of the bill allows the board to work with such boards in other states as a censor congress and the congress action would be taken as that of the State board.

Indications are that the bill will meet with vigorous opposition in Kentucky. Jesse L. Lausman, acting head of the Kentucky Theatre Business Association, said his group was not sufficiently organized to take part in the actual fight, but said the bill had his disapproval.

New York Bills

Among the bills affecting the industry introduced in New York State Legislature this week were: Assemblyman Irwin Davidson's declaration of equal civil rights in relation to entering and remaining in motion picture theatres and other places of amusement and Assemblyman MacNeil Turshen's measure to legalize Bingo with stringent restrictions.

The Davidson bill proposes writing into the civil rights law a new section defining the rights of any person to remain in places of public amusement and entertainment, which are defined as legitimate theatres, burlesque theatres, motion picture theatres, music halls, opera houses, concert halls and circuses.

Assemblyman MacNeil Mitchell has introduced a bill to limit the resale of theatre tickets to not more than 75 cents above the printed price. The bill transfers from the Secretary of State to local licensing authorities the regulation and licensing of those engaged in the business of reselling tickets of admissions to theatres, amusement places or public exhibitions.

The Turshen Bingo bill would restrict operation to charitable, civic and other non-profit making organizations formed five years before an application for license was made. The Secretary of State would be in charge of licensing, fees for which would be $100 annually. In addition, playing on Sundays, after midnight or for more than four hours in any day would be banned. Additional tax amounting to 10 per cent of the admission charge would go to the state.

Thomas Murtha, president of the New York City Central Trades and Labor Council, this week attacked the bill introduced by State Senator William Bewley of Lockport, which would impose taxes on membership dues, theatre admissions and receipts from business and services. He termed the measure reactionary and destructive in the extreme.

Ohio ITO Notice

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, is sending notices to Ohio owners recommending that they do not comply with the request for a daily listing of receipts asked by the Ohio Department of Taxation.

The notice reads in part: "Under the Admission Tax Law, the Department of Taxation is given the right to prescribe the manner and form in which reports shall be made by theatres and others coming under the provisions of the Admission Tax Law, but this does not give them the right to demand this information in a form that is burdensome to the taxpayer and which is readily obtainable through an audit of the taxpayer's books."

Attorneys for the plaintiff in the suit of John V. Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the Ohio Tax Commission, challenging its authority to exempt film rentals from the sales tax, and seeking to enforce collection of the tax law, have been granted a 15 day extension for filing answers.

Revenue data released by the Ohio department of taxation show an increase of $46,537.73 in amusement tax receipts in 1939 when compared to 1938. Actual receipts totaled $1,645,147.57 last year and $1,598,809.84 in 1938.

Abandon Plant City Tax

Plant City, Fla., commissioners, needing cash to meet the city's share of WPA projects, voted to put a tax of four per cent on receipts of amusements, electricity, telephones and water. The proposition was about ready for final consideration when representatives of the Sparks circuit and the utility companies presented a strong protest and the plan was abandoned.

Ordinance In Effect

Acting in the absence of Albert W. James, Wilmington city council president, Councilman William J. Winchester as presiding officer, this week proclaimed that the new fire ordinance is now in effect.

The ordinance provides that standees in theatres are permitted between the rear row of theatre seats and the foyer wall in the ratio of one person per each four square feet of standing room space, provided that an unobstructed passageway of not less than five feet is maintained at all times.

Philadelphia Assessments Drop

Real estate assessments for the 10 key houses in the Philadelphia central city zone operated by the Warners will be $194,702 less than 1939 figures, according to Frank J. Benham, president of the Board of Revision. The houses, Aldine, Boyd, Earle, Fox, Karlton, Keith's Mastbaum (dark), Palace, Stanton and Stanley were assessed at $10,155,198 as compared to $10,349,900 for 1939. The largest factor in the cut was a 1½ per cent slash for depreciation.

New Company Incorporated

Mayfair Productions, Inc., has been incorporated at Dover, Del., to deal in motion pictures with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are R. F. Lewis, C. S. Peabbles and Walter Lenz of Wilmington.

SERVICE EMPLOYEES SUE FOR CHARTER

United Theatrical and Motion Picture Service Employees Union, Local 258, has brought suit in New York Supreme Court against the parent body, the United Retail and Wholesale Employees of America, CIO, for reinstatement as a local union in good standing. Local 258 received written notice last December that its charter had been withdrawn "due to circumstances over which we have no control".

Bernard Deckoff, president of 258, claimed the charter had been duly granted to the local and that all dues had been paid. Last November, Mr. Deckoff said, he heard that officials of Operators Union, Local 306, an IATSE affiliate, were having conferences with United Employees officers. In December notice of revocation was received.

Mr. Deckoff's affidavit claims that the revocation was "irregular and unauthorized" because the charter could be withdrawn only if the local was found guilty on written charges. A hearing on a motion for a temporary injunction will be held Monday.

Poster Association Meeting February 9th

Devoting its annual convention to a discussion of the situation in the accessories field, the National Poster Association, representing independent accessories renters, will hold its annual meeting at the Hotel New Yorker, New York City, on February 9th, 10th, and 11th.

Simon Lebros, president for the last ten years said attendance would be "100 per cent".

Ballance Leaves Paramount

Charles Ballance, former managing director for Paramount in India, has resigned from the company because of ill health. No successor has been named yet. Mr. Ballance returned to the United States some time ago and underwent a series of operations. He is now recuperating in Miami.

General Film in Rockefeller Center

The General Film Company has leased space on the 15th floor of the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center. The company, which was organized five years ago, has its headquarters in Hollywood. Lawrence W. Fox, Jr., is president; Charles L. Glett and Ben Hersh are vice-presidents.

"Bibi" to Twentieth Century-Fox

Twentieth Century-Fox has acquired distribution rights to "Cheri-Bibi," French film from Edwin Fadiman of National Pictures, owner of the film. The deal covers 19 countries. The film stars Pierre Fresnay.

Charter Film Company

New York Pictures, Inc., has been incorporated in Albany, N. Y., by Sam Spiegler, Ruben Schwartz and Rea Wolkoff.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Denham Resuming

First signs of activity in months have been seen again at the Denham Studios where John Corfield's British National unit has gone to work on a new film, "Contraband." Conrad Veidt is star of the film which has an obvious wartime background. Michael Powell, creator of the highly successful "Spy in Black," is directing.

The film deals dramatically with the work of Britain's wartime contraband control and the scene flashes back and forth from a nation in arms to the high seas. Much location work has been done and scenes have been shot in London itself, at various coastal centers, on the sea and in the actual contraband control ports. One of the phenomena of wartime London, photographed by Freddie Young, recently returned from Hollywood, is the blackout itself!

Valerie Hobson plays opposite Veidt in the film, the cast of which also includes Hay Petrie, Harold Warrender, Dennis Arundell, Torin Thatcher, Peter Bull, Joss Ambler and Albert Chevalier.

Corfield will later make a screen version of "Gaslight," successful West End stage play. He has engaged Anthony Asquith to direct and Anton Wallbrook and Diana Wynyard to play leading roles.

Diana Wynyard will also appear with Clive Brook in British National's "Freedom Radio" scheduled for early production under the directorial eye of Brian Desmond Hurst.

Musicals

British Lion, who have a highly successful box office record for an individual type of musical in which leading acts and artistes of stage, screen, vaudeville and radio are patterned into an engaging tapestry of entertainment are shortly to embark on another. "This Way Please" is the title selected and it will have a radio background. Herbert Smith, who directed the four musicales "On the Air," "In Town Tonight," "Soft Lights and Sweet Music" and "Calling All Stars" will probably handle the new production.

Other films from the British Lion Studios at Beaconsfield will include "The Case of the Frightened Lady" and "Crimes at the Dark House," a modernization of Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White."

Balcon and the War

The war figures too on the producing program of Michael Balcon, Ealing Studios impresario. He has set for production at an early date "Convoy," a naval drama, to be made with the approval and practical collaboration of the British Admiralty. Some of the material used will be authentic shots taken from the naval battle scene itself. A dramatic passage in the film will be the beating off by the naval convoy of an enemy air attack. Pen Tennyson, who directed "The Proud Valley" will have charge.

Another nautical subject from the same studios will be "Sailors Three" which Forde will direct from an original by Austin Melford. The setting will be a naval training depot.

Balcon will also make two Formby comedies in 1940, with the Lancashire comedian in one instance having the role of a Blackpool cop. He also has in view the making of a film telling the story of the entertainment provided for the British troops behind the lines in France.

TARS SEE FILMS FIRST, EXHIBITORS COMPLAIN

Exhibitors at Portsmouth, England's naval base, are complaining that sailors are seeing new films at the Royal Naval Barracks without charge before the local theatres are getting them. They claim the sailors walk up to the theatres, look at the posters and leave, having already seen the attractions.

Scheduled for production at the Ealing Studios early in the year is "Saloon Bar," a London set piece with a murder thrown in for drama. The original is currently playing on the London stage with Gordon Harker, who will play in the film, starring. Alistair Sim will be teamed with Harker and Walter Forde will direct.

Most of the action unrolls against the characteristically metropolitan background of a saloon bar in a London "public house," yclept "The Cap and Bells." The story is set on the evening preceding the execution of the barmaid's boy friend for the murder of his landlady. "Regulars" at the "pub" get together evidence enough to save the boy from the scaffold, with, it is said, drama and comedy interwoven in the process.

Teddington Busy

Losing no time between pictures Warner Brothers' Max Milder has set his Teddington team to work on a new film "That's the Ticket," comedy in which Sid Fields, vaudevillian, will star. Redd Davis is directing. It has an espionage idea in it.

Among films to follow at Teddington will be "George and Margaret" and a mystery subject, "The Hawk Gang," which George King will direct.

"Doc" Salomon is in charge at the studios.

Deserting Comedy

Forsaking for a time the comedy note which has been struck by their more recent productions, Gainsborough Pictures are now to launch forth on a serious drama of the present day "Gestapo" which is to be made for distribution by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Carol Reed will direct the film, which is from a story by Gordon Wellesley.

Margaret Lockwood and Rex Harrison will star jointly, and John Clements will have a further prominent role. Back to screen roles, too, come Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne, whose performances as the cricketing English travellers in "The Lady Vanishes" earned much critical applause. Their characters will be the same as in the Hitchcock film, Messrs. Charters and Caldecott.

In less serious vein, however, will be "The Siegfried Line," which follows "Gestapo" on the studio floor at Shepherds' Bush. This will be another comedy for the combined talents of the Crazy Gang, Flanagan and Allen, Nervo and Knox, Naughton and Gold.

From an original by Ralph Smart and Val Valentine it will put the Gang in a concentration camp where one of their predicaments will be encountering seventy-five doubles of Nazi Fuehrer Adolph Hitler. Marriott Edgar and Val Guest will write the dialogue, and Marcel Varnel will direct. General Film Distributors will handle it.

Both these films will be produced by Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black.

GBS Again

This week has been set by Gabriel Pascal, now a British subject, for the deadline shooting date of "Major Barbara," in which Wendy Hiller is to star with Robert Morley as Andrew Undershaft. Shaw has written in new scenes and brought the armaments manufacturing element up to wartime date, and Pascal promises a screen creation of the slums of Whitechapel, better than any before achieved.

The same technical unit as worked on "Pygmalion" will aid Pascal on the new Shaw film. He himself will direct and his art director will be Vincent Korda with Harry Stradling in charge of photography.

The cast includes Dame Sybil Thorndike, Marie Lohr and David Tree. P. C. Samuel is production manager.

On Location

Headed by Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, creator of "Old Bill," cartoon hero of the 1914-1918 War, a British film production unit has gone to the battle front in France. Complete War Office co-operation has been assured the unit which will film background sequences for the Legeran Production, "Old Bill and Son," shortly to go on the floor at the Denham Studios.

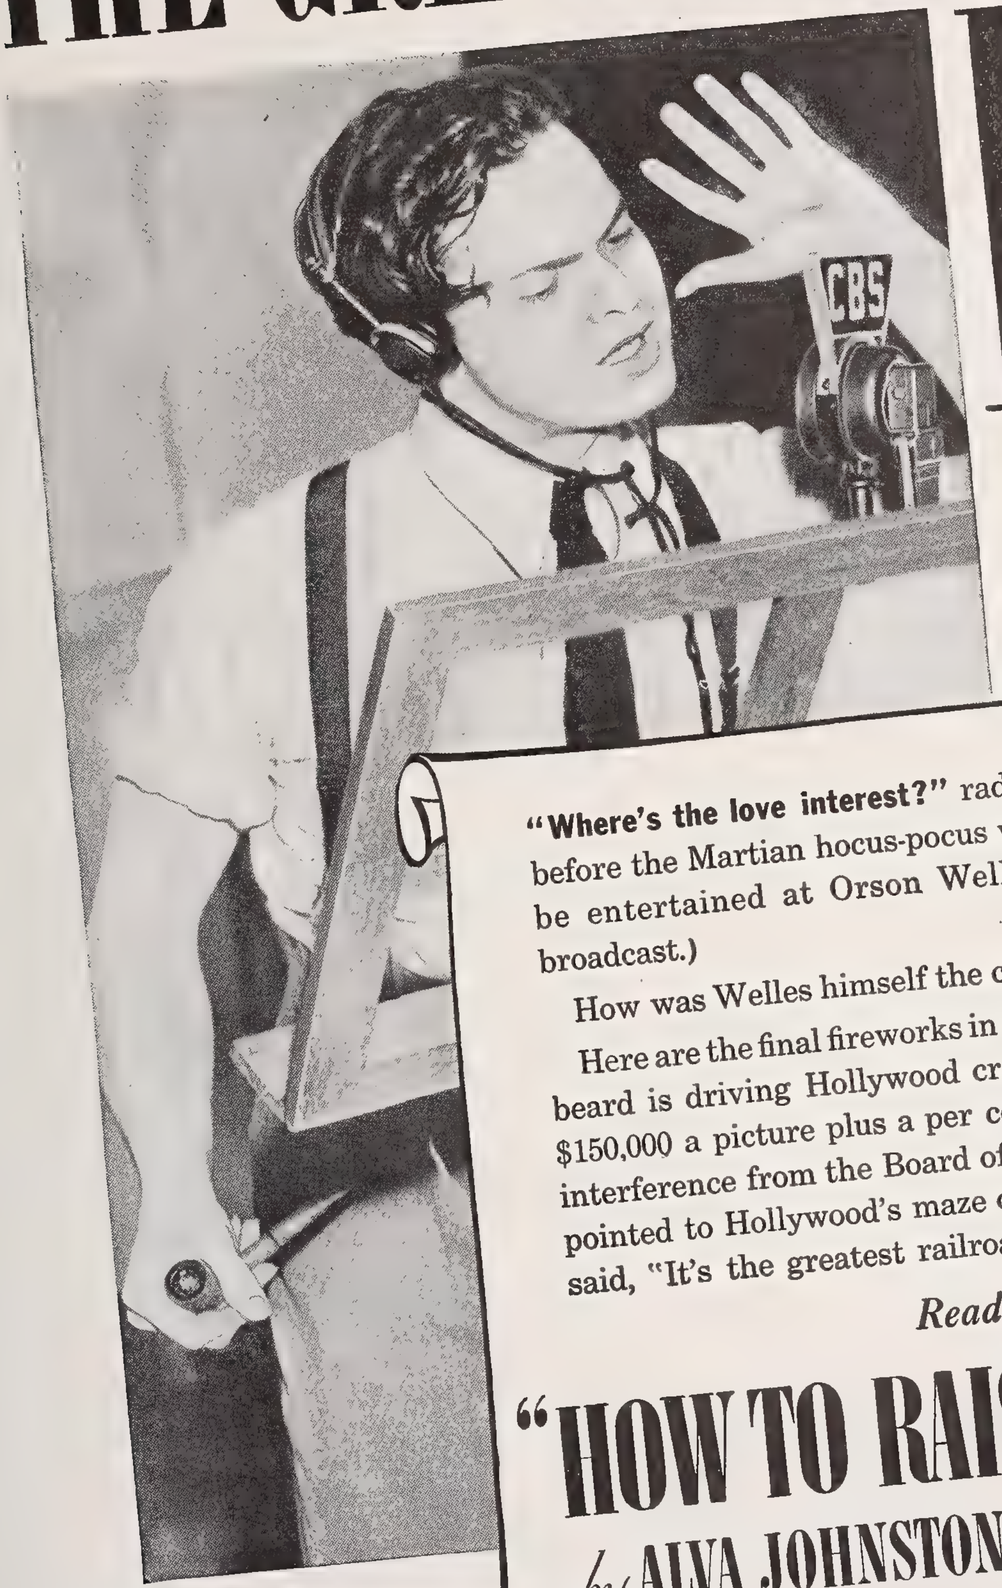
"Old Bill and Son" which is being produced by Joseph Somlo and Zoltan Korda, will be directed by writer Ian Dalrymple, and is from a story jointly written by himself and Bairnsfather.

At Welwyn

Fresh from his performances as a naval officer in "The Middle Watch," British comedian Jack Buchanan, now dons flying kit for his work in another Associated British film, "Alias the Bulldog." He has the role of a test pilot who stumbles on a sabotage plot aimed at munition factories in wartime Britain.

Welwyn is the scene of this production, scene in fact of all Associated British activities these days. Production will, on the completion of "Alias the Bulldog," continue on a program which includes "My Wife's Family," another Bulldog Drummond adventure, the Irish comedy "Spring Meeting," a modern version of "The Flag Lieutenant," a comedy, "Coffee for Two" and a drama of London titled "Piccadilly."

THE GREAT ORSON WELLES PANIC



"Where's the love interest?" radio technicians howled before the Martian hocus-pocus went on the air. (You'll be entertained at Orson Welles' theory about this broadcast.)

How was Welles himself the chief victim of the panic?

Here are the final fireworks in the life of the man whose beard is driving Hollywood crazy—the actor who gets $150,000 a picture plus a per cent of the gross (and no interference from the Board of Directors!)—the lad who pointed to Hollywood's maze of cameras and lights and said, "It's the greatest railroad train a boy ever had!"

IN THIS WEEK'S ISSUE OF THE POST

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—I doubled this with "Secret of Dr. Kildare," thinking the series lovers would not be able to withstand such a lure. It seemed to work well because we had above average receipts. If you have "Blondie" fans in your territory, this will not let them down. Plenty of laughs from the audience gave evidence of satisfaction on their part. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 13.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—This was a swell show and did swell business. Columbia sure started something when they started "Blondie." Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

COAST GUARD: Ralph Bellamy, Randolph Scott, Frances Dee, Walter Connolly—Good action programmer that most of them enjoyed. Played December 24-26.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: William Holden, Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—Played this on Thanksgiving day and did a very good business, but why not. It was a swell picture. More like these, Columbia. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—This is a class "A" picture all right but I do not think it quite as much of a superfilm as Columbia would like you to believe. However, it is well enough done that it should give satisfaction almost anywhere. It did little more than an average business for us. In fact, it did not give us better than a "B" class result. Running time, 100 minutes. Played December 16-17.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Eugene Pallette—One of the best pictures I've ever seen or played. James Stewart gets our vote for the finest acting job turned in this year. Better than average business, and the crowd stood up and cheered when it was over. Succeeded in dispersing considerable amount of gloom that has been hovering over box office. Running time, 130 minutes. Played December 10-11.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—Not as good as previous Capra productions. Did not draw any extra business. Comment divided. Running time, 130 minutes. Played January 21-22.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Jean Arthur, Cary Grant, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess—This is a great picture but it failed at the box office. It's too long for one thing. The cast is great, but just didn't click. Maybe the title had something to do with it. Running time, 120 minutes. Played December 24-25.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson, Sebastian Shaw—Do not expect too much from this offering as it is not there. Certainly not the picture that "Thunder Afloat" is. Just another picture that failed miserably. Perhaps we expected too much after reading the raves of other exhibitors. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND: John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell, Stanley Fields—A good prison picture that had a great deal of comedy, plenty of comedy. Stanley Fields stole the honors for the acting. Played with Three Stooges comedy and did a good business. Played December 29-30.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—A bit morbid but good picture. Cagney is coming back fast. Played December 30-31.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Not so hot. Maybe it is me that's wrong. I thought it could have been made into a two-reeler. Goes around in circles and gets nowhere for the first half hour, then begins to get lukewarm. Why waste a good cast on this. (Maybe I'm sour. Maybe the weather is too cold). Running time, 82 minutes. Played January 16.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—Our patrons were on their feet before the picture ran off. A very poor excuse for a picture. Our holiday patrons were disappointed and so were we. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 25-26.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

SMASHING THE MONEY RING: Ronald Reagan, Margot Stevenson—A nice little picture that seemed to please. Running time, 57 minutes. Played January 19-20.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Roland Young, Fal Bainter, May Robson—This was positively a flop here. No comments or criticism. Print in very poor condition. Missing a great deal of dialogue. Just a program picture. Played November 28-29.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—It's not Metro's fault that I didn't go to town on this one. Ran into the blizzard that hit this entire part of the country. This picture is easily as good as the other "Thin Man" stories and, what's more, all you have to do is hang out the shingle and patrons know what they are buying. If you could have bought Metro and didn't, this one will make you feel sorry. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 13-15.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—No wonder Rooney is No. 1 at B. O. A picture that was good every foot of the way. Business very good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 1-4.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Very good. If someone would give Virginia a break she would give some well known child actors a real run for their money. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 10-11.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—This kid is really going places. I would like to see MGM give her a part equal to what Fox gives Shirley Temple. This picture was highly recommended by the local pastors. Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 26.—K. C. Lybrand, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Wills Point, Texas. Rural and small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—A very excellent picture but failed at the box office. These kind of musicals have never clicked here. Running time, 102 minutes. Played January 3-4.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, A: Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn, Gene Lockhart—There is no question about this picture being very well done, but it has, we think, been done too many times in too many ways to expect to be able to sell it in a big way. For example it was being played over the Columbia radio network at the very hour that we were giving it on Christmas eve. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 23-24.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—This has quite an assortment of various kinds of screen entertainment. It is not at all stupendous and the plot is certainly quite a bit threadbare, but it will get by and satisfy most audiences. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 6-7.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—Here's a honey. Don't throw it away. This gal Turner is the closest thing to Clara Bow in her "It" days that we have had since Clara. She's okay. Don't spoil her, Metro. Give her good stories and support and she can go places. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—A very good picture and different than the usual gangster. Below-zero weather hurt business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 17-18.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Not as good as previous Sonja releases and attendance reacted accordingly. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—The best of the Hardys to date. Did not draw quite as well as previous ones but this was due to playing it on Christmas Eve and Christmas day. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 24-26.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker—This one, in spite of so-so reviews, packed 'em in. It's perfect for small town. Practically another "Jesse James" so far as gross was concerned. Played December 10-11.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

NICK CARTER, MASTER DETECTIVE: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—Good little action picture for family night. Pleased fair business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Fellows, when you have the farmers to tell you they really liked this picture, then you have something in the picture. I really got behind this one, determined to put it over and, although the weather was bad, I had average Sunday-Monday business. Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 14-15.—K. C. Lybrand, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Wills Point, Texas. Rural and small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Helen Gilbert, Laraine Day—I played this with "Blondie Brings Up Baby" with great success. This is by far the best of the Kildares. Lionel Barrymore more than holds the spotlight and there

MR. FITZGIBBONS READS THE HERALD TOO -- AND SAYS . . .

On page 28 of the November 11th issue of "The Motion Picture Herald" there are some interesting figures that should suggest some very good ideas to a great many of our theatres that are so dependent upon rural business. Oneonta, New York, is just as typical a town as any we might select in Canada.

While you might not be able to arrange a tie-up with a magazine such as the Country Gentleman, there are papers and periodicals circulating through many of the districts with which tie-ups can be made.

It is interesting to note that 37% asked for a weekly program. There is no reason, where we have a condition of this kind, why programs cannot be made available to every family within a reasonable distance of the theatre. Local merchants who really appreciate the drawing power of the motion picture will co-operate, and co-operative advertising ideas can be worked out to the advantage of the theatre and the merchant.

I suggest that you let your copy of the Motion Picture Herald and the supplements circulate through the employees of your theatre. It keeps them up-to-date on their business and, very often, somebody in your organization may spot an item of interest you have overlooked that can be used to your advantage. This is particularly true in your projection and maintenance departments.

Incidentally, I would like to see a few more Canadian managers mentioned in Mike Vogel's Round Table column.

This issue contains as a frontispiece a beautiful colored portrait of Deanna Durbin, Canada's own singing sweetheart. These fan photos are available to our theatres from Empire-Universal exchanges for only $8.00 a thousand, and less when ordered in 2,000 lots.

is more than the usual amount of humor. This could easily stand on its own in some spots. The "secret" part of the story is rather vague but that is the usual thing with titles. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 13.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE, THE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Gentlemen, here is a picture. Wonderful entertainment with a lot of satisfied customers who take time to come to you and tell you what a swell picture it is. A pleasure to run such product but what else can you expect from a company such as this one. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—The best of the Dr. Kildare series. Real entertainment from start to finish. Better than average mid-week business. I hope Metro doesn't let "Dr. Gillespie" die as he means as much to this series as "Dr. Kildare." Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 26-27.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Tom Neal, Rita Johnson—As I understand it, this picture was started out to be one of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series. They could not cut the running time to twenty-one minutes so they made a feature out of it. They should do it some more. This picture was tops. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 12-13.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Tom Neal, Rita Johnson—Swell little picture that pleased everyone. Played January 5-6.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Clem Bevans—Very good with Wallace Beery the whole show. Chester Morris and Virginia Grey are only fair. Next to Beery, Clem Bevans deserves the most praise. Story timely and views on the submarine are great. Struck worst weather and roads of the year so did not make expenses, but no fault of the picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 5-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Virginia Weidler, Joan Fontaine—I was afraid of this due to other comments in this column. However, there was no reason to be, as we had an above average turnout, which continued the second day, so they must have liked it here. The college students certainly listened intently to catch all the subtle remarks which fly thick and fast, and real enjoyment was evident all through it. I supposed rurals can't use this but the college certainly turned out for it. I ran only one show each evening as it is long, but not too long for us. Running time, 134 minutes. Played January 19-20.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: Craig Reynolds, Ruth Reece, John King—A natural for western towns. Played on single feature program on a date where we have been running a double bill. Out-grossed any picture played on Sunday for the past year. Beautiful scenery. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 14.—A. B. Davidson, Rex Theatre, Hayden, Ariz. Small town patronage.

WOLF CALL: John Carroll, Movita—Played this picture on a double feature bill with Gene Autry in "Colorado Sunset" and the result was a dynamite attraction at the box office. Had regular Autry business plus the followers of the Jack London stories. This program not only did business at the box office but pleased our patrons 100 per cent. Comment from our patrons was more in favor of the Carroll and Movita picture than the Autry western. They said they enjoyed both but they liked "Wolf Call" the better of the two. You people up there in Chicago, Mr. Elman, Mr. Hellman and last but not least Mr. Jack Barry (the latter being responsible for the booking), we want to thank you for this exceptionally fine Monogram picture and request that you ask those in charge of production to continue with this type of down-to-earth entertainment, entertainment that will appeal to the masses, the type of patronage that makes bread and butter for the exhibitor. Pictures like this one are more desirable to the small town exhibitor than a lot of the so-called super specials from the major companies. Played January 12-13.—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Jean Parker, Leo Carrillo—Too old or too cold. Anyway, failed to do us business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Robert Preston, Ray Milland, Brian Donlevy—One of the best of the Legion pictures. Gary Cooper gave his usual good performance. Picture itself is unusual. Running time, 114 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

> "I have not written in before. However, I do feel that I should do my part in helping other fellows as they do me."—A. B. DAVIDSON, Rex Theatre, Hayden, Ariz.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—I'd guess too much wholesale killing and too long. It didn't quite have what the public expected or wanted. Definitely not as good as they would hâve you think. Gary Cooper is always good. If we must have foreign legion pictures, let's have enough romance to make an enjoyable picture along with the slam-bang stuff and let's don't have our killings quite so grim. Running time, 114 minutes. Played December 24-25.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—A typical Paramount picture; not bad but certainly not justifying the rentals they receive. This one holds interest, even if you saw the earlier version, but business was quite disappointing. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 10-11.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Comedy mixed with horror. Played Sunday-Monday-Tuesday to a good business. Gave dishes and had several dropped due to the scares. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—Another fine picture from a Lloyd Douglas novel. Tamiroff is good and Howard has his best role to date. Average mid-week business in bad weather. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 2-3.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

EMERGENCY SQUAD: William Henry, Robert Paige, Louise Campbell—Played above on Friday and Saturday and did good business. It is an excellent action picture. Running time, 57 minutes. Played January 5-6.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color cartoon feature—Good picture but did not draw as expected and predicted. "Snow White" was a novelty. To the public this is just a long cartoon. Booked for four days but played it only three. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 14-16.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—One of the few good pictures I have had recently. A logical story, full of romance and fun. MacMurray and Carroll are both splendid. An entertaining, enjoyable picture that everyone likes. Running time, 96 minutes. Played January 14-15.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

ISLAND OF LOST MEN: Anna May Wong, Anthony Quinn, J. Carroll Naish—A bit different. Naish is nasty menace and adds a few thrills. They liked it. Played January 5-6.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, John Barrymore. Mary Astor—This one was labeled "corking entertainment" by our audience and is just what the doctor ordered for the prison blues. Miss Colbert, always a favorite here, scores another "grand slam" and recalls to mind such other Colbert successes as "It Happened One Night" and "The Gilded Lily." Ably supported by the invincible John Barrymore, Don Ameche, Mary Astor, et al, Claudette gives one of her best performances and is pictured in several amusing predicaments, keeping everyone in an uproarious mood. Congratulations, Paramount, let's have some more equally as good. To those theatre owners who delight in showing interesting and amusing comedies. I suggest you arrange for your patrons to see "Midnight." They'll thank you. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna, Roland Young—No drawing power and bad weather made this one an all-time low. The picture came near to being good but like so many of them this season it missed and so will go down in records as just another film. Played January 17-18.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Brown and Raye make a colossal team. Good comedy. Let's have more of them. Played January 7-9.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—If you have to play this one, book a good picture with it, and run a double bill. Maybe you can get by with it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 28-29.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Frank Craven—Fair picture but no business. No one in it with drawing power. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 10-11.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Fair picture but no business. It takes real drawing power to get them in when weather is like last few days. Played January 14-15.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Good picture that failed to draw. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyfle—Here is a very fine picture that pleased the few who saw it. Severe cold wave kept our patrons at home. But no fault of the picture. Play it and boost it. It's plenty good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 18-19.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—One of the best musical comedies I have seen. It is based on the life story of Gus Edwards. Linda Ware, Paramount's new singing find, is one of the greatest child finds in ages. Let's see her again and make it soon. Running time, 94 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Very good, Sunday, Saturday, mid-week, it'll please any audience. Everyone in your audience will imagine the same things as having happened to them and they will like it. The most natural picture in a long time. Plenty of laughs and a sensible story to go with them. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 3-4.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Story, Buster Crabbe—See comments on Monogram's "Wolf Call."—M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

COVERED TRAILER: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—We find these Higgins pictures very good for our Saturday patrons. Plenty of good hearty belly laughs on this one and that's what we need right now. You won't make any mistake by booking the Higgins Family pictures for a double bill on Saturdays. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 13.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

COWBOYS FROM TEXAS: Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo—A darn good western as all the Mesquiteers are. We find Republic 'way out in front when it comes to westerns. More power to you. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 30.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

DOWN IN ARKANSAW: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Ralph Byrd, June Storey, Pinky Tomlin—It seems these type pictures do more business than the biggest box office hits of the season. Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 14-15.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes, Hoosier Hot Shots—Here is the best Autry picture played in this theatre to date. Had it booked for two days and extended the playing time one extra day, which resulted in big business for three days. The supporting cast was very good, especially the Hoosier Hot Shots. Direction, acting and photography good. Keep up the good work, Gene, and you will be public star No. 1. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 4-6.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Gene can't act. But what do we care so long as he packs 'em in on Friday and Saturday nights. Gene Autry is probably the only star in the business (besides Mickey Rooney) the public will come to see for "hisself" and "hisself" alone. All the others rise and fall with each picture but Gene goes merrilly along. "Ki-yi-yippie-yippie-ay!" Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Good picture for a double bill. Has plenty of draw. Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 12-13.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—This is strictly a hillbilly show and is okay for a small town on Saturday double bill. We had this picture scheduled on Saturday but Republic pulled it and we redated same on Wednesday. The story is very weak and the director has a very poor judgment of Mountain people. Running time, 68 minutes. Played January 17.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Edward Ellis, Anita Louise—Good picture; fair business. Production above average for Republic. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Edward Ellis, Anita Louise—A very good picture that held interest all the way. Good for one day or a double bill. Played with stage show. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 3.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Joan Fontaine—Republic shot the works on this picture, but it just didn't register at the B. O. It was a very good picture but we think it didn't have the right title. They didn't come out for this one.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

MONEY TO BURN: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—This series is very good. Don't be afraid to book on any date. Republic keeps climbing. Running time, 69 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This is Gene Autry's best picture to date. Well liked. Nice comments by rural people. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 25-26.—K. C. Lybrand, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Wills Point, Texas. Rural and small town patronage.

THOU SHALT NOT KILL: Charles Bickford, Owen Davis, Jr., Doris Day—A fair program picture that we showed on a double bill. Seemed to please. Running time, 68 minutes. Played January 6.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CAREER: Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis—Good picture but lacks drawing power. Played with stage show and still failed to draw. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 12.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Very good. Pleased all. Did not draw as good as "Bachelor Mother." Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 10-11.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—Good picture. Drew well. Pleased all. Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 3-4.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—A better than average programmer that pleased everyone who saw it, and I think it even lived up to the expectations of those of our patrons who have been following the "Christian" series on the radio. More of these, please, instead of crime, on account of "Crime does not pay" in our towns. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 2-4.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Ralph Morgan, Sally Blane—Entertaining. Good story that received comments. Played December 30-31.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Jean Rogers, Arthur Treacher, Robert Kellard—We played the picture Thanksgiving Day to a good business. It wasn't the picture that brought the customers. It was the holiday. Our opinion Thanksgiving is the best show day of the year. Played November 30.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—Not a bad picture but these good stars were wasted on it. Business very poor. Running time, 71 minutes. Played January 3-4.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—An excellent picture in beautiful color. Nothing extra in the way of business, but not the fault of the picture. Think our customers are tired of pictures crammed with action, fights, etc. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 7-8.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Too much killing and fighting scared away the feminine trade. Did not draw any extra business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 19-20.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Good picture but only fair business due to cold weather. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Anita Louise, Bela Lugosi, Patsy Kelly—A natural flop at B. O. The Ritz Brothers are comedians, singers and dancers, but where do they get them to be detectives. They are all right in a supporting cast. A complete washout. Played January 1.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbings, Minn. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George—Not a very pretentious starring debut for Greene. Yet I must admit the audience commented very favorably on the picture. For me he's still a supporting player. Running time, 82 minutes. Played December 20-21.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe E. Brown, Jr.—Attendance fell off from previous releases of this star. Her last two pictures have been weak. Up to that time her name meant capacity even in mid-week. Running time, 74 minutes. Played December 27-28.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Even the Ritz Brothers couldn't quite ruin this one. Withers is a swell drawing card for me but if I never have a picture with the Ritz Brothers it'll be soon enough. The second successive idiotic performance by the Ritz trio. Don't know of anything that is as sure of making more money for me as to have Jane Wtihers in better pictures. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 22-23.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Just a fair program show that failed to draw. Jane not so popular and the Ritz Brothers too darn silly. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 11-12.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—A swell picture. Personally thought Brenda Joyce was better than Myrna Loy and Brent better than Power. It won't draw as much in a small town as the cast would cause you to think. Fox is O.K. by me. Running time, 103 minutes. Played December 10-11.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull—Very good. Would have drawn better if weather was not so severe. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 14-15.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Excellent. The color is great. Big business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 7-9.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, June Lang, Paul Lukas—A fine picture. No business. Think we should have played a western.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—The first United Artists picture in months that did average business. Running time, 96 minutes. Played January 12-13.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—Magnificent color, magnificent emoting. Magnificent! Played January 1-3.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

119 minutes. Played October 10-11.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith—Fair color, good story, good acting. I didn't like it, my audience didn't like it. I lost money. English casts scare my prospective customers so much it takes them a week to recuperate. With an American cast it would have been a dilly. Running time, 115 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—Biggest bust at the box office I have ever shown. Didn't even get back the film rental. Personally liked it but the violin music, particularly the long numbers, killed it for the public. For a small town, pay for it and let them keep it. You'll be money ahead. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 31—January 1.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Jascha Heifetz, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—They shall have music but they won't take it when it is dished out like it is in this flicker. The usual patrons stayed home and played dominoes the nights we played it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played December 20-21. Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—What a shame it is that the modern theatre goer is losing all beauty of soul. Here is a picture that the producer and everyone connected with it should get an immediate ticket to heaven as a reward for making it, but in spite of a big campaign we didn't take in the cost of the film in three days. They thought it was too arty and highbrow. What's the use of Better Film Councils? Running time, 102 minutes. Played January 10-12.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—This is really good entertainment and will satisfy even those who think they do not like music, if you can get them to see it. But the advertising stresses the music to an extent that many persons not musically inclined will avoid going to see it. Small houses must be the result unless you have more music lovers than most small towns seem to have. Our second night was better than the first. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 30-31.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—Was a very good picture but not for small town patronage. A few thought it wonderful and many who didn't appreciate Heifetz thought his numbers would never get over. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 28-29.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Billie Burke, Roland Young, Richard Carlson—For want of better product we picked this one up, and what a swell picture it is. Try it if you need something good. It just proves that a good picture will draw (if you get a good print) no matter if it is old. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (reissue): Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville—Booked this in desperation as houses around me had dodged it. So far has grossed more than any picture this month. A fair portion of my audience was disappointed. There was not much entertainment in it. Yet, if it hasn't played near you, I believe your gross would surprise you as much as I was. The sound was much better than expected. Running time, 93 minutes. Played January 7-8.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (reissue): Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville—The war scenes were very convincing. Too much commentary but it seemed interesting. Sound poor. Did exceptionally good business. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 24-25.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

CODE OF THE STREETS: "Little Tough Guys", Frankie Thomas, Harry Carey—Very ordinary. Business poor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer—Good. Bing draws well here regardless of the picture and this one is really enjoyable. A homey story full of down-to-earth comedy. A picture with an everyday story that the audience can understand always goes over here. Running time, 89 minutes. Played January 21-22.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy, Robert Stack—A good picture suitable for any theatre any time. Not as great as Universal would lead you to believe. Personally think that Durbin has never made a picture to beat "Three Smart Girls". This picture lacks comedy. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 3-5.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

NINE MORE SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTING STAFF

Nine new contributors to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department this week represent eight states. The "cub reporters" are:

A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa.
Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis.
Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis.
A. B. Davidson, Rex Theatre, Hayden, Ariz.
Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass.
K. C. Lybrand, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Wills Point, Texas.
W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind.
H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo.
A. B. Thompson, Park Theatre, Ritz Amusements, Inc., North Vernon, Ind.

Returning to the reportorial staff after more than a year and a half of absence is M. F. Bodwell, Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Matty Melneck and His Orchestra—This was a swell little show. The music was good and most people liked it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 20-21.—A. J. Andersen, Sloan Theatre, Sloan, Iowa. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Florence Rice, Hugh Herbert, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—Our customers enjoyed this picture much more than many of the supers which have been brought out. Business better than usual and many favorable comments. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 9.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, C. Aubrey Smith—Here is a picture almost everybody liked. With some special exploitation in the form of a multigraphed letter on the back of the Herald personally endorsing this movie, we did a better than average Sunday business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural partonage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy", "Mortimer Snerd"—Had it not been for "Charlie McCarthy", "Mortimer Snerd" and, yes, Edgar Bergen, this one would have been more disappointing than it was. In the opinion of the boys here there was too much Fields, just like there were too few circus wagons to carry such an enormous show. Fields is OK in small doses but too much of him can certainly make any "patient" theatregoer wince. In the opinion of our critics the picture could have been very much improved by (1) reducing the "Fields", (2) showing in color some actual shots of circus performers in action. Say the boys here: "Give us more, a lot more, of the Bergen, 'McCarthy,' 'Snerd' trio, but go light on Fields". Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 20.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—This was a fine motion picture with both Davis and Flynn portraying their parts fine, but, as any small town exhibitor knows, these costume pictures are not money makers. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—K. C. Lybrand, Jr., Majestic Theatre, Wills Point, Texas. Rural and small town patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: Leo Gorcey, "Dead End Kids", John Litel—I'll bet even money Warners never spent one-third the money to make this that they spent on "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex", and they have a grand production here that is worth six of the others put together. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 17-18.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids", John Litel—The "Dead End Kids" are dead at the box office. This picture would be okay on a double bill on Saturday. However, we had to play it two days. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 15-16.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Victor Jory, Frank McHugh—This is an outstanding picture both from production and box office. Beautiful color, massive sets, cast great, beautiful photography. Play it by all means. The best Warner picture to date. Running time, 103 minutes. Played December 26-28. —Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—Good melodrama that pleased and did better than average Sunday-Monday business on a hot date. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 7-8.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett, Edward Brophy—Not very much to this one although it pleased the younger patrons. John Payne is not too bad but do not see Jane Wyman in the lead. Edward Brophy is very good. Altogether, it is just another picture. Running time, 58 minutes. Played January 12-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—I liked it, my audience liked it and I made a little money. For rural communities it's a better Saturday night show than some of the so-called "A's". Worth its film rental and your playing time. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Played this on Bargain Night and suits there fine. It's a good picture, not great. If Warners had made this in color and put a name cast and built up a bit they would have had one of the top grossers of the year. Haven't had so many favorable comments about a picture in a long time. It's okay. Don't be afraid of it. Running time, 55 minutes. Played January 9.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—A very fine picture that failed to draw. Not a small town picture. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 9-10.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—What the h—— did the critics rave about this picture for? Bette Davis emotes all over the place. Just about the most exaggerated portrayal possible, but I suppose she thought it was acting. I had it flat but wanted to eliminate. Exchange wouldn't let me so I made them take it on percentage. They didn't hardly get the cost of the checker for their share. If it wasn't for Errol Flynn the picture would be a total failure. They had a great story if they wanted to put some action into it. My advice is eliminate it if you can. Running time, 104 minutes. Played January 2-4.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Here is the spectacle in the grand way. A beautiful picture with splendid acting but missed the boat at the B. O. P. S.: the playdates might have something to do with it. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 24-25.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh.—Story of the years following the World War and of Prohibition. Holds the interest but has an unhappy ending. James Cagney is good and Gladys George gives an outstanding performance. Miss George is one of the very best stars in my opinion. Priscilla Lane is fair and Frank McHugh and Humphrey Bogart are always good. Struck three days of extremely bad weather so attendance was 'way below par. Pleased those who came. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 30-January 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George—A man's picture with plenty of action and an interesting plot. We didn't break any box office records but the results were satisfactory. The musical background proves to be as interesting as the plot because of the familiar melodies. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 18.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—I'd like to hear from an exhibitor whose box office isn't sick of these gangster pictures. A good production with no unfavorable comments from my audience. Even the checker felt lonesome on this one. Running time, 104 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

State Rights

IT COULDN'T HAVE HAPPENED: Reginald Denny, Evelyn Brent—This murder mystery pleased Bargain Night crowd. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 6.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

LADY LUCK: Patricia Farr, William Bakewell—Pleased Bargain Night crowd. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 6.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

LAW AND LEAD: Rex Bell—Fair western for 10c night. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 13.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

LIVING DEAD, THE: Gerald DuMaurier—This is the worst picture I ever ran. Absolutely no good. No story. Poor dialogue. Running time, 66 minutes. Played December 8-9.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

MAN OF SENTIMENT: Marian Marsh—Fair independent picture. OK for 10c night. Running time, 67 minutes. Played December 13.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

PUBLIC OPINION: Lois Wilson—Poor print and foolish story. Not worth running for a gift. Running time, 66 minutes. Played December 15-16.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ANDY CLYDE GETS SPRING CHICKEN: Andy Clyde—This got a lot of laughs. If your patrons like Andy Clyde, don't waste this one.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

LIFE IN PARIS: Columbia Tours—Very good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE IN SWINGTIME: Color Rhapsodies—Some interesting caricatures of movie stars, but outside of that very "ho-hum"-ish. The smell of burnt flesh was noticeable as my goose was cooked by the comments on it later. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WORLD OF 1960: Cinescopes—Good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAUTIFUL SWITZERLAND: Columbia Tours—A swell travel talk. One of the best subjects we have played, with swell comment and beautiful scenery. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLUE DANUBE: Cartoons—A different kind of cartoon and very good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

BLUE DANUBE, THE: Cartoons—Here is a cartoon for the balance of all cartoonists to copy. We defy Mr. Disney to make one as good. Perfection in all respects so do not waste it. Our nomination for the Academy Award. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Again we nominate this as the outstanding short of the season. This series is the tops of the industry and this short the tops of the series. Our nomination for the Academy Award. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 6: Fashions—The women liked it. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: Abbott Dancers—Why make cartoons when they can make shorts like this one. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAD MAESTRO, THE: Cartoons—Excellent.—H. E. Miller.—Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—Excellent on any program.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: John B. Kennedy—Metro never did make a good newsreel. This one is no exception. Their news photographers just don't seem to know the angles, and the voices of Kennedy and Hawley don't improve it any. Running time, 11 minutes. Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patroange.

OLD NATCHEZ: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Very good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY: Cartoons—The usual beautiful and amusing cartoon we always expect from this series. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: Cartoons—An excellent subject for the holidays and very good to run on any program at any time.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: Cartoons—This one is everything the critics have said. A swell cartoon that you can be proud to show and one you can brag about.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: Cartoons—Fair cartoon in color which lacked comedy. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Good just as the previous releases of this series were. The public likes them.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

SEE YOUR DOCTOR: Robert Benchley—Amusing and entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Ned Day, Andy Varipapa—Just about tops in short subject entertainment. Universally liked, well made, interesting and can be sold to a big following. Sell it big and it will pay dividends. Running time, 10 minutes.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialties—A dandy reel on bowling. Make sure you contact the people most likely to be interested and tell them about it. Humor and skill are expertly combined as only Pete Smith can do it. It has nothing to do with drinks as some of my customers presupposed from the title. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TAKE A CUE: Pete Smith Specialties—Most of these Pete Smith shorts are okay. This one is particularly interesting. Skillfully made and interestingly narrated. Running time, 11 minutes.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

THINK FIRST: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This is good as are all this series, but there is not as much action in it as usual so I would rate it slightly below the high average. There are practically only women in it so don't play it with "The Women" as I did. It deals with shoplifting so why not tie up with local stores? Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TIME OUT FOR LESSONS: Our Gang—This is about the poorest Our Gang we've ever played. This series not nearly so good as a year or so ago. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BARNYARD BRAT: Color Classics—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRANKIE MASTERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

HAL KEMP AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Just a fair band subject. Public is getting terribly fed up on swing music.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JUDO EXPERTS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Interesting and instructive subject. Well liked by patrons.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 2—Very interesting scenes in the fire underwriters' laboratories showing the testing of various materials. The color is good and the other items in the reel are worthwhile. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 3—This is one of the best of this series, covering interesting topics in an exceptionally good manner. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC HOBBY, NO. 1: Paragraphics—Very good. Everybody enjoyed this. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SCARED CROWS, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Nobody gave it any cheers, only sighed with relief after it was over. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TED FIO RITO AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good numbers, swell music, very good singing and excellent photography combine to make this short well worth playing. Needn't be afraid of this one, Mr. Theatre Owner. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TEMPO OF TOMORROW: Richard Himber and His Orchestra—A very, very good band short with some excellent vocalizing by attractive Patricia Gilmore and Mr. Allen. If your audience likes to hear good orchestras play, this one will make them happy because "Dick" Himber and his boys know how to "give out", when they don't swing it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

ARCADE VARIETIES: Nu-Atlas Productions—Very weak.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

COAT TAILS: Radio Flash Comedies—Not so good. Did not help program.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

KENNEDY THE GREAT: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—All Edgar Kennedy comedies are enjoyed by our patrons. This not so good as others but most patrons like them. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MEN OF MUSCLE: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Springfield University and its athletic course. Interesting and one of the better sports reels.—A. B. Thompson, Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

OFFICER DUCK: Walt Disney Cartoons—Excellent.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 6: Fashions—A good short and well liked.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

GANDY THE GOOSE IN A BULLY ROMANCE: Terry-Toons—Terrible. Running time, seven minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

ICE POND, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good.—H. E. Miller, Miller Theatre, Festus, Mo. General patronage.

ORPHAN DUCK, THE: Terry-Toons—A very good cartoon. Not to be compared with Donald Duck but still very good entertainment. Running time, seven minutes.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

TIMBER TOPPERS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Very good single on racing horses. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 71—A fine short on American wild animals that should be played when you have plenty of kids in the house. Excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Art Shaw may have a good band but to us there is not enough diversion and too much brass to make it a good short. We have had better. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CURIOUS PUPPY, THE: Merrie Melodies—Exceptionally good cartoon.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

CURIOUS PUPPY, THE: Merrie Melodies—This is quite cute and very funny in spots. The popcorn machine and the hall of mirrors were tops in humor. I hope Schlesinger can keep up the pace he has set for himself this year. A show without a cartoon is severely criticized here. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FDDIE DELANGE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters--Good musical reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAGIN'S FRESHMEN: Merrie Melodies—Here is a very good cartoon in color; not the best but well worth running. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FILM FAN, THE: Looney Tunes—Better than the usual run of Porkys but still nothing very hot. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, eight minutes.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JERRY LIVINGSTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good orchestra reel. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT FUN: Merrie Melodies —This is a dandy. Plenty of action.--John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

LEITH STEVENS AND THE SATURDAY NIGHT SWING CLUB ON THE AIR: Melody Masters—Good musical reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MONROE DOCTRINE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—A beautifully photographed and enacted playlet showing the origin and use of the famous Monroe Doctrine. People will be surprised at how little they really knew about it. It is especially appropriate at this time. Don't waste it on a good playdate without advertising it. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RIDE, COWBOY, RIDE: Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards—Swell color short. With more stuff like this available and just a little bit of brains in some of the circuit bookers' heads we could easily get away from these cursed double features. Running time, 16 minutes.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

ROYAL RODEO, THE: John Payne, Cliff Edwards —Technically, photographically and entertainingly, this short is excellent. I still can't see how they get so much story in these color shorts. However, the overemphasis on patriotism is becoming objectionable to my audience and they make the fact known very definitely. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RUBINOFF AND HIS VIOLIN: Melody Masters Very good band subject. Much better than average. —N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

SIOUX ME: Merrie Melodies—Excellent. I believe these Melodies are better than Disneys. Running time, seven minutes.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

SLAPSIE MAXIE: Maxie Rosenbloom, Johnnie Davis—We haven't had such a funny comedy in a long time. The audience reaction was just about perfect, especially at the concluding fight scenes. Put it in a good spot. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SLAPSIE MAXIE: Maxie Rosenbloom—The kind of comedy the cash customers enjoy. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SNIFFLES AND THE BOOKWORM: Merrie Melodies—This entire series is excellent and this one no exception. Very clever. Do not waste it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWORD FISHING: Vitaphone Varieties—Entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VOTE TROUBLE: Vitaphone Varieties—Poor. Nothing to it. Not worth showing. Running time, nine minutes.—William Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

Robbins New Company Starts Operations

Herman Robbins' new Advertising Accessories, Inc., which for the first time in this industry will provide advertising accessories to exhibitors for distributors—Paramount, RKO and Universal already having signed exclusive tieups, will establish rental charges for the material at current rental prices prevailing, which means, they say, "immediate savings to those exhibitors who now buy their accessories outright." Furthermore, the company predicts that as the new organization develops and its business increases it will be able to make "substantial reductions in the price of accessories." The plan went into effect Thursday.

FROM READERS

HAWAIIAN EXHIBITORS WELCOME REPORTS

Editor, Motion Picture Herald:

Exhibitors reports as shown in your Motion Picture Herald are interesting and of considerable value even to exhibitors here in Hawaii. Tastes and appreciations run about parallel with Mainland audiences, strong hatred of the "villain," sympathy and fear for the safety of the "beautiful, helpless and unsophisticated damsel" is registered by our patrons in about the same degree of concern as is shown by audiences in the cultural centers of the United States proper.

Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Filipinos, Portuguese, Korean, White Americans and mixed nondescript races religiously attend the better class of pictures in about the same proportioned increase over the attendance to the mediocre and ordinary class "B" shows on the Mainland. If anything different, our audiences are more sophisticated and understanding of many emotions and influences that prompt certain reactions and inclinations of people's actions, they have an insight and knowledge of human weaknesses and character or lack of it in certain people. We who have lived here and learned to appreciate the characteristics of the races we see from day to day are anxious to see the "white man" presented in as favorable a light as is possible. ("White man" is used to designate the citizen of the United States.)

The Americanization film, that is produced in too limited quantity, is of untold value in helping with the job of Americanizing these Islands. We here that pride ourselves on our citizenship and those trying to live on good American standards are concerned over the lack of encouragement offered to raise the living standards of the people of "foreign" antecedents. We are now undergoing a siege of protest by politicians and "big" business for "Statehood." It is being suggested that "Statehood" is not wanted by them; this effort is a smoke screen to try to keep what they now have, political and financial control. Most of the thinking people realize that we are not qualified for the responsibilities of Statehood. We do not have a majority of our people of the stock that will balance the two extremes, the very rich and the very poor.

What is needed is an appreciation and understanding of what has been put into the United States by the patriotic forefathers, the pioneers and early settlers of our Country. An understanding of what their dreams and ambitions were that prompted them to push into the wilderness and carve out a home, building for a security and happiness that was not possible in the surroundings they were born to. This is the spirit of our United States, the grandest and most God-like of any government on the face of the Earth today. This is the spirit that has been caught and woven into stories and History that the screen can so ably tell to those with limited knowledge and understanding of the American Way of Life. It is good for them and good for us all. Let's have more of it. Aloha nui loa.—C. E. MORRIS, Owner and Manager, Molokai's Theatres, Kaunakakai, Molokai, T. H., U. S. A.

National Board Holds Meeting

Meeting for the 16th year, formally, the National Board of Review inaugurated its annual sessions on Thursday in the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, with a discussion of community motion picture activities, and will close with a luncheon on Saturday. Dr. A. A. Brill, the organization's new head, presided.

To Review History

The discussion on community motion picture activities was held in the Hotel's Salle Moderne, at 11 A. M., on Thursday. That afternoon, at 2:30 P. M., there was a review of the topic, "Fifty Years of Films," in the same room. The topic was divided thus: "Machines and Possibilities"; "Story Content of Early Films"; "Dominant Personalities of the Early Films"; "Developments of Social Trends in the Movies"; "Educational Trends in the Motion Pictures." At 8:15 that evening, there was held a meeting with the students of the motion picture course at the New York University School of Education, a special film was to be shown, and an address given.

On Friday, February 2nd, the Review committee will meet at 10 A. M. At 2:30 P. M., the 50 years of film history study will be continued, the topic subdivided thus: "The Change to Sound"; "The Changing Trends of the Sound Film"; "The Newsreel and the War in Europe"; "The Pan-American Film." At 8:00 P. M., members will visit the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, for a tour and a screening of specially selected early films.

On Saturday, February 3rd, there will be a "junior" session in the Salle Moderne, of the Pennsylvania. The younger members of the board will see a demonstration of the Four-Star Club activities, and will hear talks by club advisors. At 12:30 P. M., there will occur the annual luncheon, with Dr. Brill presiding, and screen personalities as speakers and guests. There will also be addresses by other speakers.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

EACH IN ITS WAY

Three pictures recently have been introduced in a blaze of top-line showmanship to dull the barbs of the most critical. In New York and 40 other cities, S. Charles Einfeld and Mort Blumenstock guided openings of Warners' "Fighting 69th" to the top attraction at reunions of the famed regiment of which the picture so graphically tells. The highlight was the metropolitan gathering of over 1200 at the Waldorf-Astoria, where the presence of Governor Lehman brought such publicity as a full-column in the New York Times.

The gracious hospitality of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, at the White House, was a peak of the campaign put on by RKO's S. Barret McCormick and Hardie Meakin, in Washington, for the world premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois". Set aside for the benefit of a local charity, attendance at the opening was entirely "Who's Who", the publicity vast and inspiring.

The talented job of promotion handling from the beginning that brought such nationwide critical discussion on the picture's release; the original work of Thomas Benton, distinguished American artist, that gives new lustre to motion picture advertising, places the Charles E. McCarthy-directed campaign for Twentieth Century-Fox's "Grapes of Wrath" squarely in the spotlight of showmanship acclaim.

Thus, three campaigns, intelligent, competent and complete, each in its own way, join the fabled job on "Gone With the Wind" in adding boxoffice fuel to the mounting fires of exploitation. As an indication of what the future has in store, it is not too early to mark 1940 among the biggest years in the history of motion picture showmanship.

AND IT'S 30 BELOW

As far as our knowledge goes, the community of Sudbury, Ontario, is up in those Canadian woods, away from everything. It's a mining town. Can't be very big. That doesn't seem to disturb Famous Players Canadian's Sid Scott, manager of the Capitol. He's the lad who distributes heralds via air service to the many camps far away from civilization.

Scott's an oldtimer. He knows most of the answers. Members have seen quite a few of them in these pages. Last week, there was a trick ad on "Ninotchka". It jumped his usual Garbo grosses. This week, Sid switches his attack, with, of all things, a music festival week, detailed on another page. The temperature was 30 below. Still he did business.

Thirty below is enough cold to stop a war. But evidently not enough to stop Sid. Thought we'd mention it. Particularly in the direction of certain sizeable cities where the weather is much easier to take. Where showmanship is just a three-syllable word.

A MATTER OF PLAIN SWEAT

As far as concerns this corner, the correspondence in last week's issue between the aspiring young theatreman and Terry Ramsaye bogs down on the discussion of hard work. The young fellow has asked around on how to be a good theatreman. The only answer so far, he writes, is: "Work hard and do your job and you will learn"—advice he terms absurd, "inasmuch as misdirected effort gets one nowhere". In his answer, the editor opines that "the fellow who has a hard job is never any good at it, gets nothing out of it but the wage". Continues Mr. Ramsaye, "More progress is to be had by devising ways of getting the job done painlessly, but done".

We never knew of a "good theatreman" who became one without sweating his way, and who does not continue to sweat to remain in that classification. His progress is measured importantly in the success with which he accomplishes the thousand-and-one jobs—odd and otherwise—that need doing every working day, that can be done only by personal and, obviously, well-directed supervision.

The showman's job is a continuous series of pains. Compensation comes from the absorption and pleasure in the job that immunizes the "good theatreman" against the retchings of pain felt by the lad who sees no profit in it.

Bell, Brien Picked By Industry Jury For Grand Awards

realize the value of that certificate, but that now he understood what it means.

"We are trying to train our men not only to go out after the natural pictures for exploitation but also the problem films. Exploitation that costs the theatre nothing is the best. All pictures are not perfect but we must try to sell our wares as we have them." Concluding Mr. Schine said, "Quigley Publications are doing a great thing by offering this inducement to managers."

Wobber Emphasizes Exploitation

Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, emphasized the importance of exploitation from the viewpoint of the distributor and producer.

"Showmanship needs just what this meeting today covers," he said. One great fault seen by producers and distributors is the want of that effort—so well expressed in the books here—on the part of many theatre men. The growth of the business and the heights which it has reached are based on such an exploitation effort as is outlined today. The need today is greater because the problems are greater.

"Unfortunately this is an industry which is not making proper awards to the producers and distributors," Mr. Wobber continued. The speaker observed that if the results of production and distribution were analyzed carefully, it would be shown that the rewards are far from adequate. He said that occasions such as the award judging pointed the way to returning the industry "to its proper level of showmanship greatness." Mr. Wobber commended Mr. Quigley and Mr. Vogel for their enterprise in sponsoring the awards.

Goldberg Was Winner

Harry Goldberg, director of Warner theatre advertising and publicity, was the third speaker. He was introduced as the only man who has won a Quigley Grand Award and later been a judge in the contest. Mr. Goldberg won in 1935. He explained that when he went to Hollywood on the prize trip in 1935 everyone out there said the picture on which he won the award was no good. "No one thought you could do any business with that picture." Mr. Goldberg said that he would like to change the remark made by one of the Schenck brothers, "There is nothing the matter with this business which good pictures can't cure" to "there is nothing the matter with the business which good showmanship can't cure."

He explained that the basic problem is "how to energize customers" and get them to come to the theatre. The speaker held that there probably would not have been a Neely bill if managers had the spark to get the additional business which can be obtained by good showmanship. Big grosses, he said, influence the selection of stories and efforts by exhibitors could improve the whole business.

Mr. Goldberg expressed the opinion that circuit managers work hard on exploitation and placed most of the blame on independents for not giving the distributors and producers all that a picture should gross. In conclusion he said, "A medium that stimulates managers is worthwhile. The Quigley Contest and Awards and the Round Table stimulate managers and are of fundamental importance."

Among those present in addition to the judges were Colvin W. Brown, Sam Shain, Gertrude Merriam, James P. Cunningham, Martin Quigley, Jr., Theodore J. Sullivan, Ray Gallagher, James A. Cron, Herb Fecke, Leo Brady and Al Finestone, all of Quigley Publications, and Hal Young and Don Velde, Advertising Accessories.

Single Promotions Judged

The competitions under which this year's winners were selected inaugurated a new policy for the Awards. Entries were judged on the basis of single ideas or promotions and not on entire campaigns submitted quarterly as formerly. The quarterly periods were retained for the regular judging but in addition the competitions were broken down to fortnight preliminary periods.

At the close of each preliminary entries in that period were judged for Quarterly Awards consideration and those that scored oftenest in the preliminary periods of the quarter were then considered for the Quarterly Awards, called "Quarter-Masters." The three best entries were given plaques, the next five medals and other entries judged to be of merit were awarded citations. The finalists judged Tuesday were those who made the best score in the Quarterly competitions.

NEW "FORTNIGHTERS"

With the beginning of the year's Competitions, new faces to the Awards make their appearance to start the 1940 contests from scratch. To be noted among the 36 winners of the 33 Appointments in the second Fortnight of the First Quarter, are quite a few newcomers to the Awards, as here listed:

On another page are listed the rules and regulations for 1940. As already noted, there have been no changes from last year's procedure. Competitions are based on single exploitations or promotions. Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations will again be voted among theatremen making the best records in the Fortnight periods of each Quarter.

World's Fair Baby Exhibit Promoted for "Child Is Born"

Special "women only" matinee arranged through state department of health was one of the highlights on "Child Is Born" at the Paramount, Syracuse, in the campaign set by Gus Lampe and Gene Curtis. Lecture was delivered by prominent physician with county nurse on hand to answer questions. Announcements were made on three radio programs and at nurses' meetings.

For lobby exhibit, a portable incubator and educational charts were displayed, the charts prepared by the Maternity Center Association of New York, the same set, incidentally, originally prepared for the New York World's Fair. In addition to extended publicity, short readers were planted immediately below birth notices, papers also using the title and baby cut in house ads to plug children's features. Papers also plugged the theatre's search for parents with largest number of children, parents to be guests at the picture. Heads of all women's clubs were also notified.

Novelty paper diaper herald was distributed house-to-house and on main street during rush hours. Diaper service trucks carried one-sheets, the company also putting out a street stunt of picket carrying sign reading: "When a Child Is Born, it is unfair to wash diapers at home." Windows in baby, book and greeting card shops were obtained on the tiein title.

Campaign Briefs On Recent Dates In Various Parts

Unusual advance publicity for "Ninotchka", at the State, Minneapolis, was planted in the local Times by Manager Frank Steffy, in the form of an illustrated running story of Garbo's picture career in ten installments. Stills were obtained from MGM as was background material which was elaborated for story purposes by Ev Seibel, of Steffy's ad staff. Promotion was arranged with Merle Potter, paper's picture editor.

To every school teacher in his territory, for his date on the Vitaphone short, "Monroe Doctrine" at the Lyric, Brownswood, Texas, Manager Lew Bray mailed a letter which pointed out highlights of the short for the benefit of students. Attention was called to the 116th anniversary of the Doctrine and lead names in cast were stressed. Letter also mentioned special rates for schools on group attendance.

Co-op advertising on "Four Daughters" at the Brandeis, Omaha, by Louise Cotter, house publicist, was topped with 12 tieins on "Tour the Shops" page in Sunday World-Herald. Title was carried in masthead with group and star cuts illustrating the various ads. Added illustrated co-ops obtained by Louise included quarter-page by utilities company for gas heaters and department store hookup for stockings.

Colonels in Lilliput were appointed by Ralph Billings on "Gulliver", at the new Family, Batavia, N. Y., printed certificates distributed ahead carrying actual names of locals with copy that recipients had been commissioned officers in army of Lilliput. Theatre credits were typed on outside for quick observance.

For "Cat and Canary" at the Strand, Vancouver, B. C., Manager Norm Duncan advertised five dollar offer to "bravest woman in town", one who would sit through special midnight preview in darkened house, alone. Offer was accepted with volunteer's reactions at screening making good newspaper copy.

With the sporting editor of one of the dailies in the hospital, Manager Lou Mayer arranged a private screening for the ailing newspaperman of the original Dempsey-Willard fight pictures in advance of the showing at the RKO Temple, Rochester. The publicity resulting was appended with mention in sport columns and cuts of the action shots. Sports program over station WHAM featured the hospital showing and description of the pictures.

Through tieup effected with local Oldsmobile agency, Harry Rose at Poli's Globe, in Bridgeport, Conn., placed a new model car in front of theatre with sign "Hear Bing sing—In My Merry Oldsmobile." Agency also furnished a short wave set with record for the lobby which was tuned into the radio in the car. Rose says the stunt created much interest, with folks wondering what station Crosby was singing from.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

Awards are now voted on single exploitations and not on complete campaigns as formerly. This includes goodwill and institutional ideas, as well as those on pictures.

Each Quarter is divided into two-week preliminary contests.

Winners in each preliminary are appointed Fortnighters.

Entries of Fortnighters in each Quarter are judged for Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals, Citations.

Quarter-Master Plaque, Medal and Citation Winners are appointed Quarter-Masters.

Entrants registering the best records of Quigley Plaques, Medals and Citations in the four Quarters will be eligible for the Grand Awards judging.

There are no classifications of population or situation. Everyone starts from scratch.

There are no deadlines. All entries will be considered in the period in which they are received.

All product is eligible—features, shorts, serials. Also stage shows, amateur presentations, etc.

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered.

At this writing, the second Fortnight of the First Quarter has passed with four more to go until the end of the First Quarter. It is to be kept in mind that, with everything equal, theatremen who score more often in the Fortnighters will receive greater consideration in voting the Quarter-Master Awards.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Page

(1) The fact that the regiment is a famed New York outfit plus the tremendous campaign put on in advance of the opening plus the draw of the three stars, decided the Einfeld-Blumenstock Warner ad forces on an "announcement-series" of ads for the date on "Fighting 69th" at the New York Strand, as illustrated in this 125 lines on 2 col. In addition to the Cagney head, those of O'Brien and Brent were used in opening day displays. For the stage show, the trade-marked head of Paul Whiteman was featured throughout.

(3) For the reserved-seat world premiere of "Abe Lincoln" at the RKO Keith's, Washington, D. C., S. Barret McCormick and Manager Hardie Meakin, arranged a 10-day advance campaign confined almost exclusively to distinctive type layouts, the same type faces and title lettering used throughout, as represented by the opening day display of 150 lines on 4 col. Additional pictorial advertisements are included in the pressbook.

(4) The new Dietrich character and the "rough and tumble" of the fight scene were selected by E. G. FitzGibbon, Peoria, Ill., Great States ad head, for main selling appeal on "Destry" at the Palace. The 75 lines on 3 col. was divided as illustrated, the reverse title and star panel aimed to point up the action shot alongside, with the star heads and second-feature copy set to tie up entire layout.

(6) To sell the three units of his coming show at the State, Portland, Me., and the last showings of the current attraction, all in 95 lines on 2 col., Harry Botwick hooked the popular Popeye short directly to the "Hardy" reverse circle, the latter set firmly on the second-feature box, and the cartoon figure supported by the circle immediately below.

More Expressions On The 1940 Awards

BOB COX

Manager, Park
Dexter, Maine

I can truthfully reply that the Quigley Awards have definitely aided me both mentally and shall we say, physically.

In the first place, when I sent in my first efforts from a town the size of mine, 4,000, I did it with a feeling of "what chance have I against all the other men in bigger towns where the potential is greater and the field of action larger?" Well, Mike, I don't mind telling you that when I found that I had won a Fortnighter, gosh, my hat didn't fit for three days. Then I got thinking and realized that not only winning a Fortnighter was enough, why not go out and do the same stuff day after day. Results would show at the b.o.

Sure enough, it worked out that way. Things perked up a bit and when my Anniversary Week rolled around, I received a letter from my boss which impressed me so much that I used it as the basis of my campaign for the entire week. I had a window in one of the stores with the letter mounted under my Quarter-Master Citation, etc., and used fliers as well.

FRANK MURPHY

Manager, Loew's State
Syracuse, N. Y.

The Quigley Awards have in a great measure served to stimulate the utmost in our efforts. They are the inspiration of greater effort and a stimulant to ever wide-awake aggressive showmen. The Awards serve as a means of broadening our outlook and reflect personal achievement and help in a great measure to place the industry on an ever higher level.

HAROLD LEAND

Manager, Revere
Revere, Mass.

I have made it a point to publicize in local newspapers the fact that I have won Quigley Awards and have explained in such publicity what Quigley Awards are. The purpose of this has been to increase the theatre's prestige in the community. To the best of my knowledge, the publicity has been successful in so doing.

PAUL BINSTOCK

Manager, Warner's Lyric
Hartford, Conn.

The "Quigley Awards" are a great incentive for any showman. I have been fortunate to receive a plaque, medal, and numerous mentions which proved stimulating to myself and the box-office. I believe that any company will reward the successful showman when the opportunity presents.

L. WARD FARRAR

Manager, Loew's
Indianapolis, Ind.

In comment on the Quigley Awards it's only possible to say that this spur to showmanship greatly inspires managers to their best effort. Your 'Round-Table' pages are a fine medium for the exchange of ideas that benefit us all.

Two Music Dates Give Scott Idea for Music Week

Consecutive bookings of "Swanee River" and "Victor Herbert" in one week at the FPC Capitol, Sudbury, Ontario, was enough to give Manager Sid Scott ammunition for a citywide Music Week, with the campaign dedicated to a finer community appreciation of music. The idea broached by Scott in the right places, caught on immediately. Musical organizations, teachers, music stores, station CKSO and allied musical interests cooperated.

Campaign opened 10 days ahead with a series of teaser ads, different copy used each day for seven days. Auto and window stickers spread widely, carried the copy, "Get aboard the Bandwagon. It's Music Festival Week at the Capitol. Six Whole Days of Happiness." Stickers were also attached to sheet music and recordings sold by the foremost music shops. Windows were also secured on Stephen Foster and Victor Herbert compositions.

Foster Radio Program Held

Radio station plugged all the old familiars by the two composers and numerous spot announcements made tying in the music and the theatre dates. Outstanding broadcast on opening of the Week was a Foster commemorative program, during which Sid read wires of congratulation from Hollywood, signed by the stars of both pictures. Wires were later used for a window in the downtown offices of the Canadian National Telegraph, where local traffic is thickest. For the Herbert date, The Round Table promoted another program, this also in honor of the composer.

Outside exploitation was topped with three 60-foot banners suspended from the roof of business block in center of town. Letters two foot high by three feet, sold the week and both dates. To indicate what the theatreman was up against, he reports temperatures of from 20 to 30 below during the Week, but did business nevertheless. Scott also credits his assistant, Louis Gauthier, for a lot of strong support that made the campaign possible.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

5,000 Members Reported In Brien's "Horror" Club

For dual bill of Demon Barber and Return of the Frog at the Prince, Ambridge, Pa., Lige Brien inaugurated a horror society that was reported immediately successful to the extent of over 5,000 members. These registered in the lobby and were given filled-in cards surmounted with skull and bones in reverse panel. Among the privileges of membership listed were free milk to members to revive them of fright, the milk company paying cost of the cards. Nearby Pittsburgh papers considered stunt newsworthy for big space.

Coffins and weird noises were also a part of the idea and advertising featured request for bravest woman to view pictures alone, volunteers to be qualified by insurance examination. Inside theatre, 15-foot skeleton travelled across front during showing.

Air Ads Plug "Mice and Men" For Miami Beach Date

"Of Mice and Men" opened sensational business despite the coldest weather Miami Beach has had in 20 years. More than 1000 lines of free publicity and art secured in Miami newspapers. Transcription used on local station gratis. Street car cards and displays in leading hotels were used in outdoor campaign in addition to 10 twenty-four sheets in strategic locations. Daily radio announcements. Banners hauled by planes over Hialeah Race Track and Beach.

Local gossip columnists plugged opening with many items about stage play, etc. Tie-up bookshops. Special colored blow-ups used in front and displays in hotels. Ad campaign consisted of three days' advance advertising introducing the characters in the picture with different ads in each Miami paper. Both book and stage play referred to in ads as well as special line, "The picture Hollywood said couldn't be made". United Artists Carl Erbe worked on campaign.

SONNY SHEPHERD,
Manager, Lincoln, Miami Beach.

Giant Board Shows War Shots For "69th" Harrisburg Date

Highlights campaign on Fighting Sixty-ninth series of six radio interviews WHP, outstanding local heroes World War relating their experiences. Second, a promoted spot announcement immediately following preview on Kate Smith program CBS. Third, a huge board in lobby plastered with World War pictures actually clipped from various roto sections during war over twenty-two years ago. Board stood more than nine feet high, twice as wide. Got tremendous attention. Of course VFW and Legion co-operated with announcements at gathering places. Picture of lobby board and story will break local papers this week.

IN COURTS

Loew Stockholder Action Dismissed

The suit of Norman Wolf and Mannes Fuld, minority stockholders of Loew's, against Loew's, A.T.&T., Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., was dismissed by New York supreme court Justice Valente for failure to state a cause of action. Justice Valente ruled that charges that Loew's was paying excessive rentals for sound production equipment had not been substantiated in the complaint.

The plaintiffs had claimed that A.T.&T. by reason of its position as a large stockholder of Loew's exacted excessive rentals on equipment. The court ruled that the complaint made charges "without a vestige of fact," and that the plaintiffs were "merely groping in the dark."

In addition, the court said that the plaintiffs had failed to make a demand on the directors of Loew's to cancel the contracts.

Liquidating Trustees Asked

Appointment of trustees to liquidate Warner Bros., who control the Ohio, Sigma, State and Faurot theatres at Lima, Ohio, has been asked by Paul T. Landis, Allen County prosecutor, in a petition filed in the third district court of appeals. Mr. Landis charges Warners with "having misused their corporate franchise under the state law by advertising and promoting a lottery or game of chance." A Prosperity Club was inaugurated at the 1,800-seat Ohio theatre in December, in which all patrons were eligible to participate in weekly cash awards.

The Ohio also launched Bank Night two years ago, but abandoned the project after one week when the Lima Ministerial Alliance threatened legal action.

Erikson Files Order

Carl Erikson has filed an application in the New York supreme court for an order directing Meyer and Louis Schine and Chester and Paul Fenyvessey to testify before trial in reference to Erikson's suit against the Schine Enterprises Corp., the Schines individually and Fenyvessey Enterprises for $35,000 brokerage fees. Mr. Erikson claims this is the sum due on sale of four theatres in Rochester, N. Y.

Zasu Pitts Loses Appeal

The supreme court on Monday made effective a deficiency of $15,395 assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue against the income tax return of Zasu Pitts when it denied the actress' petition for review of a Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals decision. The case involved a controversy over whether there had been a community of property between Miss Pitts and her former husband, Thomas S. Gallery.

NBC Defendant

The National Broadcasting Company and the Victor Talking Machine Company, have been ordered by Supreme Court Justice Bernstein to be added as defendants in the stockholders suit brought against RCA, Western Electric, Erpi, Westinghouse and A.T.&T. The defendants are charged with transferring a large block of RCA shares without adequate compensation.

16mm. Rights

A suit has been filed in the New York supreme court for $35,000 damages and an accounting against Majestic Pictures Corporation, Major Film Laboratories, Inc., Herman Gluckman and Thomas W. Evans, by Phil Goldstone Productions. The plaintiff claims that Majestic assigned the 16mm. rights to ten of its films without its authorization.

Song Royalties Suit

Mrs. Charlotte Arndt Alexander, as administrator of the estate of her brother, composer Felix Arndt, has brought a suit for $590,000 into the Brooklyn supreme court for back royalties on "Nola," "Marionette," "An Operatic Nightmare" and "Clover Club." The Sam Fox Publishing Company, defendant, has filed a general denial and asserts "Nola" was purchased outright.

Warner Motion Denied

The motion of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., for reargument of the William La Varre plagiarism case, has been denied by the court of appeals in Albany. The court recently decided the facts should be determined by a jury.

Decision on "Nation"

Stone Film Library, Inc., Treo Film Exchange of New York, Inc., Marian T. Stone and David M. Sohmer have been directed by Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge in New York, to pay $3,500 damages to the Epoch Producing Corporation and Thomas Dixon. The plaintiffs had secured a decision in their favor on November 22nd after they had filed suit for an injunction and accounting in which the defendants were charged with illegally distributing and exhibiting the film, "Birth of a Nation."

OBITUARIES

Sol Pincus Dies

Sol Pincus, 63, long in the theatrical business in San Francisco and brother of Ralph Pincus, Geary manager in San Francisco, died after a short illness, Monday. Mr. Pincus for some time was publicity representative of the city's major stage productions and road shows.

Ernest W. Morrison

Ernest W. Morrison, 46, formerly manager of all Paramount theatres in the South, died at Atlanta, Ga., January 5th. Mr. Morrison had been with Paramount for more than 25 years and had retired six months ago when his health began to fail.

Decision Reserved In Goldwyn Action

Before Federal Judge Bondy, United Artists contended that the suit of Samuel Goldwyn for $54,559 should be dismissed on the ground that he had assigned his claim to the Bank of America. After attorneys for both sides argued on questions of law Judge Bondy reserved his decision.

Mr. Goldwyn's suit is based on a contractual clause which calls for payment of bonuses on pictures which bring in additional revenue. The actual dispute concerns payments of interest on bonuses.

Guaranteed Releasing Thirteen Symphonic Short Subjects

Guaranteed Pictures is releasing 13 "Symphonic Featurettes" with music by The National Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and conducted by Fredrich Feher. Two of the subjects "Aida," from the Verdi opera, and "Rosamunde" by Franz Schubert are now ready for release.

The balance of the series consists of "Stephen Foster Songs," a symphonic arrangement with mixed chorus; "Pittoresque," "Lohengrin Bridal Chorus"; "Negro Spirituals," with chorus; "Capricio Espagnol," by Rimski-Korsakov, with solo instrument; "1812 Overture" by Tschaikowsky, with brass orchestra added in special colors; "Polovetzian Dances," by Borodin with mixed chorus; "Leonore 3 Overture," by Beethoven with special colors; "Tales from Vienna Woods" and "Second Rhapsody," by Liszt, and "Jazz Symphony," Negro folk songs with chorus.

Theater Supply Co. Convention

The National Theater Supply Company managers' convention was held last week at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Walter Green, president, presided at the convention which was attended by executives of International Projector and other equipment manufacturers. On Thursday afternoon Oscar Neu, head of Neu-Made Products, took all those attending the convention through his plant. Managers spent Friday at the home office before returning to their local offices.

New Harris Treasurer

George S. Harrison, at present auditor for the Harris Amusement Co., of Pittsburgh, will become treasurer of the company May 1. George Eby, formerly of Main & Co., will succeed Harrison as auditor.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

NINE OF THE "TEN BEST" ON EASTMAN NEGATIVE

The Prize Baby
MAKES AN ANNOUNCEMENT!

THIS IS A GRAND occasion for us. We feel warm, happy and grateful and we want to thank you . . . Exhibitor Leaders, Exhibitors, Producers, Trade Paper Publishers and Editors . . . the whole industry . . . for the hundreds of congratulatory messages you sent on the creation of our new child . . . ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES, INC.

- In this new addition to the NATIONAL SCREEN family we assume a tremendous obligation to our customers, to the distributors whose product we handle and to the industry. Our aim is satisfied customers . . . good, showmanship theatre advertising that will help you sell your show . . . and increased service . . . NATIONAL SCREEN Service! . . . and fair dealing to all.

- We have nothing to sell but advertising. Trailers on the screen through NATIONAL SCREEN SERVICE. Lobby displays through NATIONAL SCREEN ACCESSORIES, INC., and now the complete line of distributor accessories for all companies serviced through the new baby . . . ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES, INC. Our aim has been and always will be to give you the best theatre advertising it is possible to produce at the fairest prices.

- Accessories for all companies serviced through the new ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES, INC., will be available to you on a rental basis with current rental prices prevailing.

THERE WILL BE NO INCREASE IN PRICES!

- That means immediate savings to those exhibitors who now buy their accessories outright. And, peering into the future, we feel certain that as our organization develops and our business increases we will be able to make substantial reductions in the price of accessories, as we did with trailers. Our record speaks for itself.

- We have been in business twenty-one years and as our business has grown we have shared the benefits with our customers in reduced prices and superior service. We will continue to share, for we have learned during the years that fair dealing pays dividends.

- We are optimistic about our future and the future of motion pictures. The whole NATIONAL SCREEN SERVICE ORGANIZATION has been built around men with the ability to accept and foresee new trends . . . to inject new creative inspiration into theatre advertising.

- We will continue to build that way, with the new baby too, ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES, INC., devising new ways and means of bringing more people into your theatres through these great mediums of theatre advertising . . . TRAILERS . . . LOBBY DISPLAYS . . . ACCESSORIES.

- We repeat—ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES, INC., entails many heavy obligations. A tremendous financial obligation to our COMPANY . . . a serious obligation to DISTRIBUTORS whose productions we handle . . . an important obligation to EXHIBITORS whom we service. We will try to meet them in the same manner that we have always met our obligations.

- For it has been a rule of our business life to let performance be our best advertisement. We will continue to live by that rule.

"YOUNG TOM EDISON"

THIS week your editor went over to Metro's projection room to sit at a screening of "Young Tom Edison" with a little audience of "Edison Pioneers" and officials of the Edison industries of today. Most of us in that room had known Thomas A. Edison for many a year, and many of us had known him very well indeed.

It was a special and somewhat emotional experience to relive with him again some of his oft told boyhood reminiscences, and through the instrument that he himself brought into existence.

One was to be reminded of certain lines that Mr. Edison wrote for an introductory pamphlet back in 1895 when he observed that one day by the films there could be performances "by artists long since dead." Here by the screen's processes of re-creation were brought alive again before us the boyhood years of the inventor a full generation before the screen itself was born.

To those of us there at that curious sort of memorial service Edison was all in our minds. But along with the story of the man came also the telling of a poignantly interesting story of the life of middle America in the Sixties, a measure of the world that Edison was himself so completely to make over by his implementing of industrial evolution.

All of the narration is in episodes gleaned from research, but in the gleaning and making worn round and smooth by the processes of tradition and euphemisms of cinema until they are symbols—but all symbols of homespun humanity, blunt father, tender mother, tinkering problem child, small town scorn and small town pride.

In that audience was Mr. Walter S. Mallory, 79, erect and able, now the precise statistician of the Cement Institute, and long in the Edison organization many and many a year ago. He looked and approved, and when the house lights came on there was the glimmer of tears in his stern eyes. The whisper went around among the Edison people: "Old Man Mallory likes it, too."

He knew him when.

RADICAL also REACTIONARY

A CONSIDERABLE and concerned attention to Mr. Martin Quigley's recent expression about certain aspects of "Grapes of Wrath" by Mr. Frank Nugent appeared in his last Sunday column for the New York Times. By a device more obvious than dexterous, Mr. Nugent seeks a point of argument by incomplete quotation.

The quoted passage: "If the conditions which the picture tends to present as typical are proportionately true, then the Revolution has been too long delayed. If, on the other hand, the picture depicts an extraordinary, isolated and non-typical condition and tends to persuade an audience that it is typical, then no small libel against the good name of the republic has been committed."

After omitting the clause "and tends to persuade an audience that it is typical," Mr. Nugent proceeds to charge Mr. Quigley with ". . . being more radical than most of us . . ." in one breath, and goes on to a charge of ". . . being more reactionary than most of us. . . ."

One begins to feel that it is quite possible that the policies of Motion Picture Herald and its publisher are never going to be entirely satisfactory to Mr. Nugent of the Times. There will be nothing much done about that.

Meanwhile it is about that Mr. Nugent is about to close a deal to go to Hollywood, that Hollywood of which he has so disapproved, to be a screen writer.

Irrelevantly, something reminds one of that old story of the asylum inmate who, after sitting for hours on a wall watching a feckless fisherman, shouted, "Come on inside."

"CHESS MARKET"

IN a speech in New York the other day, Mr. Arthur L. Mayer, out of his abundance of experience in production, distribution and exhibition, told an audience of the cognoscenti that the topical, documentary film lacked the support of public interest. He reproved the lecturers and writers who charged that the public was being deprived of such pictures by an obtuse or willful industry.

"If the public really wishes to see topical problems discussed on the screen, they should further that wish by supporting such pictures when they come along. At present many public organizations exist for the purpose of purging the screen, but there are relatively few whose aim is to increase its vision and scope."

So far, so good.

But as has been here remarked oft before, the non-fiction film must make itself available to the non-fiction audience, through classification of theatres and their policies, before, if ever, it becomes important. Putting the issue into analogy, the amusement picture mechanism that public demand has created today compares with the field of intelligent non-fiction films as Coney Island does to a chess board.

As Mr. Mayer knows so well, the vast and overwhelming majority want to buy, do buy, emotional kick, and that majority gets no fun considering matters that pertain to thinking, facts.

Nothing needs to be done, or will be done. Nothing can be done.

Maybe some day pictures that can be made for less and shown to fewer, but at a profit, will arise out of our competitive system, to serve minorities. Agitations about a "deprived public," like much of what passes for censorship, is merely expression of a demand. A big enough demand will make a business. It always does.

THE acute unreasonableness of the attitude of the press toward the screen in frequent expression is exemplified by a recent editorial in the Chicago Daily News, under the heading of "Willie and Will", in which it says:

"Where have Will Hays, the elder statesmen and avenging consciences of the movies been while Willie was putting the bang on the camera crankers, stagehands, prop boys and the magnates who employ them?"

Does it not seem to be asking a deal of Mr. Hays and the organized industry to guarantee the redemption and salvation of all persons with whom they come in contact?

This Week in the News

"Trust Trial" Nears

TIME WAS, back in the summer of 1938, and for many months following, when many a motion picture corporate executive and many a motion picture corporate counsel, held the opinion—never expressed publicly—that the United States Government's "key" anti-trust case to divorce production-distribution from exhibition, break-up the "talent pool" in Hollywood, and otherwise refabricate most of the industry's pattern, never would reach trial.

Opinions of some changed as they saw the Government's lawyers start the case through the machinery of the Federal Courts. Others commenced to think differently, too, when they heard, from Washington, that a consent decree, precluding trial. was impossible unless the eight company defendants agreed to incorporate therein the basis of the original complaint, i. e., theatre divorcement, etc.

But, through all of the court strategies and maneuverings by both sides, there were still some who held to the belief that there would be no trial. Two weeks ago, however, the line of diehards began to dwindle, as John C. Knox, senior federal judge in the Southern District, rapped an old hickory gavel in his chambers in the Federal Court House at Foley Square, New York, and in a slow, determined tone, ordered the case to trial on May 1st, adding a figurative "and no foolin'" warning a few moments later when he assigned Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard to the trial bench.

Last Monday, after unsuccessful last hour attempts were made to delay action, the United States Department of Justice started placing executives of the producer-distributor defendants under oral questioning before trial, and leading thereto. Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, was the first to be questioned; special U. S. assistant district attorney Robert L. Wright was the questioner.

The interrogation of Mr. Cohn and other film trust-suit incidents of the week are reported on page 17.

John C. Knox, senior federal judge, for the U. S. Southern District of New York, on Wednesday afternoon filed a formal order officially referring the United States Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit against the large companies to Henry W. Goddard, federal judge, for trial May 1st. Judge Knox's action followed the submission to him Wednesday of a stipulation signed by attorneys for all the defendants and the Government providing for the date of trial.

Radio Giveaways

WITH 45,000,000 U. S. radios offering "free entertainment" to would-be or should-be patrons of the nation's theatres, exhibitors long have considered broadcasting competition of unknown quantity. For years exhibitors have protested the use of screen stars to increase the potency of radio. This year showmen are particularly disturbed because many things in addition to "air" are going to the public by radio.

Everything from silk stockings to autos, from baby rings to cross-country trips has been used for years by broadcasters for "premiums" for listening inducements. Of growing concern to exhibitors, however, is the cash award of a type like Tums' "Pot o' Gold," which requires that the listener sit at home beside his fireplace and radio to be eligible for $1,000 in U. S. currency.

Exhibitors in Colorado, Michigan, Ohio, Missouri and a dozen other places are on the warpath over these stay-at-home-to-win cash prizes and their complaints already have reached Congress, the Federal Communications Commission and other government agencies.

There are now 50 other "big" air awards of one kind or another, affecting the box office in one way or another, as reported on page 13.

Suit Against "Wind"

SEEMS that most big pictures have suits. And "Gone With the Wind" is no exception.

Wednesday morning attorneys for one Ann R. Davis of Montgomery, Alabama, administratix of the estate of Susan Lawrence Davis, who died last year, walked into the United States district court at Birmingham, and to the United States court clerk handed paper petitioning for an injunction to restrain the Ritz theatre in Birmingham from further showing of David Selznick's production of Margaret Mitchell's story.

The petition claimed plagiarism from "an authentic history of the Ku Klux Klan—1865-1877," written by Susan Davis and published in 1924.

The Ann Davis attorneys filed a similar plagiarism suit last year against Margaret Mitchell, author of the "Wind" book, and Macmillan, its publishers. The suit was dismissed by federal judge Henry W. Goddard in New York. The court found that since the facts concerning the Ku Klux Klan are in public domain no plagiarism could be proved.

Hit ASCAP Twice

TROUBLES of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers are never-ending. There is the word of Edwin Claude Mills, ASCAP's general manager, for that, "and it's all because those who publicly perform ASCAP music for profit do not want to pay for its use."

There have been 40 different attacks made on ASCAP in 25 states within three years, instigated for the most part by broadcasters and night club and dance hall proprietors, who dispute the right of the organization arbitrarily to levy a royalty fee, and collect it too, under the United States Copyright Act.

There have been court suits filed and legislation enacted to outlaw ASCAP from state borders, attacking principally on the grounds of monopolization, or imposition of license fees so heavy as to make operations unprofitable.

One such license proposal was made Wednesday morning, in New York's legislature, by Assemblyman Anthony J. Canney, who would have ASCAP pay a $10,000 license, not nearly so much as the Society collects in that state, however. Thus ASCAP would have to pay a special license for the "privilege" of collecting royalties.

One of the most unusual twists in the state-to-state battle over ASCAP operations came on Monday in Lincoln, where the state appealed a federal court decision of last month which nullified a new state law barring the music combination from doing business in Nebraska. In support of its appeal, the state obtained 22 pledges from that many of its state legislators who had voted for the bill back in 1937, to swear in affidavits that ASCAP is an "unlawful monopoly."

Television's Color

COMMISSIONERS of the Federal Communications Commission on Monday, in Camden, N. J. witnessed an exposition of television's latest and most exciting developments, which at the same time seem to possess some competition to the motion picture screen. They saw color television, they saw television on a large screen, and they saw it with definition greater than used yet on home receivers, so goes a report on the demonstration, as appearing on page 29.

Last week the commissioners also saw "relay" television at the General Electric laboratories in Schenectady. The program received in that city was sent from the National Broadcasting Company station in New York City, 142 miles away.

Nugent Negotiates

ALONG about last April it began to be apparent that Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation had ceased to indulge in display space advertising in the New York Times. This was said to be a consequence of an opinion in the Fox office that the motion picture pages of The Times were not contributing to the progress and wellbeing of the picture business.

Among other manifestations it was to be observed that the motion picture editor and writers of The Times did not appear to enjoy a large enthusiasm for Darryl Zanuck and his works.

This week it became known, from Hollywood sources, that negotiations were being had by the Twentieth Century-Fox studio with Frank Nugent, motion picture editor of The Times, for his employment as a writer, presumably for the screen. It was said Mr. Nugent had asked The Times for a leave of absence, and indications were that a contract would be concluded.

Twentieth Century-Fox advertising is still out of The Times.

The Times' first motion picture editor, the late James Oliver Spearing, was for a time a Hollywood writer, then director. He returned to The Times as automobile editor. Other newspaper picture critics who have had flings at Hollywood include Quinn Martin, New York World, and John C. Moffit of the Kansas City Star. Mr. Moffit is back on the Star.

No Fair Film Show

AGAIN THIS YEAR reports circulate that the motion picture industry will participate in one or both World's Fairs. The latest "plan," advanced in print, is that the film companies would take over a building at the New York Fair 1940, and preview a new picture every day. The building, according to the "plan," also would have an exhibit of material related to films and film making.

Despite reports of "plans" for this, last and pre-Fair years, industry opinion has remained strong against active participation in either of the Fairs, on the grounds, according to spokesmen for the organized industry in New York, that exhibitors do not like anything which might even resemble competition, and producers and distributors would have difficulty agreeing on priority and other questions.

The only official industry World's Fair plan this year is to place again the Hollywood-made "Land of Liberty" in the Federal Building at Flushing Meadows, and on Treasure Island in San Francisco where the Golden Gate Exposition also is reopening.

F. D. R. Not Acting

WHETHER by virtue of any desire to confine, nay, even continue Presidential histrionics to the White House, deponent sayeth not, but the fact remains that the White House would like it to be known, as of word given privately the other afternoon, that Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt is not contemplating entering the motion picture business, as his son, James, did.

There are some who would have one believe that Mr. Roosevelt will or might appear in a series of say 10 or 12 short subjects, each in two reels, in takeoffs on his "fireside chats" of radio, all net accruing therefrom going to the President's foundation for infantile paralysis at Warm Springs. Seems like a case of the wish attempting to father action.

Box Office?

SINCE, as has been remarked before, the horse race fancy so extensively taps the pockets of the amusement buyers who are the motion picture's customers—so extensively making sucker money out of what might be box office dollars—it is of showman interest to observe currently that sports writers are today finding "the strain on the traditions of racing will be greater than ever." This has no reference to the Annenberg matter but to admission figures, it appears.

So it comes that after a Jockey Club meeting in New York percolates word that track admission prices are to be cut. Top was $8.80 for the clubhouse and $3.85 for the grandstand. The New York Racing Commission cut that eventually to $5.00 for men in the club house and $2.50 in the grandstand, and additionally a reduced fee for women admirers of the track champions.

Now it looks like there will be one price for men and women at $1.65 for the grandstand.

"The sport of kings" seems to be doing some mercenary calculating.

Meanwhile our movie world is talking higher top scales.

Amkino Quits

A HOST of persons, of all classes—and the censor boards of many places—might be interested in the following news brief: Amkino, for 13 years official Soviet film distributor in this country, has closed and shuttered its doors.

The company's "board of directors" is supposed to have made the decision a week ago, in New York, and Amkino spokesmen admitted as much this week. President Dimitri Vassiliev, a Russian, went back to Moscow last month. Treasurer Nicola Napoli, an American, doesn't know what his own plans are, but his secretary emphasized that he is not going to Russia. Amkino workers have left and the New York office closes soon.

Seems that Amkino's film business in the U. S. slowed when Russia embraced Germany, slowed some more when the Russians went into Poland, virtually stopped when Russia attacked Finland.

Amkino's "retreat" is described in the story on page 16.

British Labor Asks

THE RISING COST of living in England under war conditions—estimated at at least 15 per cent—has had its inevitable result in a growing demand in labor circles for wage increases. The National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, labor organization of the film industry, has launched a nationwide campaign for higher wage scales and is now engaged in bringing discreet pressure to bear upon branches of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association to approve their demands. They call it a "war bonus."

The present state of mind of exhibitors is that such an increase at present is impossible because of the fixed economic conditions under which they operate. They add that in their opinion the amusement buying public would not pay increased admission prices.

HISTORY is turned to the usages of exploitation. The train on which Thomas A. Edison worked as a "train butcher," including a restoration of baggage car which the young experimenter nearly destroyed by fire resulting from an inadvertent juncture of chemicals, will run from Detroit, where it is a feature of the Henry Ford museum, to Port Huron on Saturday for the premiere of MGM's "Young Tom Edison" in which Mickey Rooney, thinking at right as the director thinks Edison might have thought, plays the title role.

J. G. LONG, left, president of J. G. Long Theatres, is a member of the executive committee in charge of the National Variety Club convention to be held in Dallas in April.

BOB LIVINGSTON, left, of the Capitol, Lincoln, Neb., keeps his Tuesday night vigil at his radio to make sure he will not have to make good his guarantee to pay $1,000 to any member of his audience whose name is called on the Tums Pot o' Gold radio giveaway.

E. C. BEATTY, president and general manager of Butterfield Theatres, addresses a community banquet given by citizens of Traverse City, Mich., upon Mr. Beatty's announcement that his company would build a 1,000 seat theatre in the community this spring. At the table are Edmund C. Shields, vice-president; L. A. Gordon, treasurer, and Ollie Brooks, booking agent for the circuit.

HOLLYWOOD VISITORS

RADIO'S 50 KINDS OF GIVEAWAYS COMPETING FOR THEATRES' PUBLIC

"Pot o' Gold", Bringing Storms of Protests from Owners, Is but One of Many Forms of Weekly Cash Awards on Air

Theatres today face the greatest competition ever experienced from radio giveaways, with cash awards given by commercial sponsors for listener attention reaching an all-time high and foremost is Horace Heidt's "Pot o' Gold" $1,000 weekly minimum giveaway, which has aroused such a storm of protest from the motion picture industry that exhibition has appealed to the United States Government for relief.

From Recipes to Thousands

Fifty current sponsored programs on networks, mostly of national scope, are offering premiums or giveaways to promote mail from listeners or merely to obtain a greater audience. These are on networks alone; there are hundreds of additional giveaways on local stations. Prizes range from free recipe books and inexpensive pins to cash awards running into the thousands of dollars.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, led by P. J. Wood, secretary, attempted to obtain enough pledges from theatre owners so that the Tums "Pot o' Gold" cash award can be equalled if the would-be winner is in the theatre when the results are telephoned. The Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan, through its public relations director, Thomas McGuire, filed a formal protest last week with the Federal Communications Commission at Washington. The matter also was brought up in Congress.

But the "Pot o' Gold" program is not the only radio show offerings awards, cash prizes and other giveaways to keep persons interested in the radio and away from the motion picture theatres. Thirty-three current NBC programs have some form of awards. CBS has 13 similar programs and Mutual four, with two additional large cash giveaway programs going on the air this month.

Fewer but Costlier

In a survey on June 2, 1934, Motion Picture Herald listed 88 premium programs on the NBC and CBS networks. Though the number of programs giving prizes has been cut almost one-half in the six year period, the premiums offered today are much more costly and embrace many more kinds of gifts. In 1934 cash money awards were very rare; at present they are becoming very common. While in 1934 only one gift trip was offered, many programs this season were giving trips as prizes.

In 1934 exhibitors were particularly interested in radio premium programs because the NRA theatre code regulated the offering of premiums by the exhibitors and no such regulation on the part of radio was considered unfair competition.

Six years ago, though the number of premiums was high, few were large compared with present awards. The total cash offers in 1934 amount to less than $25,000. This year one advertiser, Procter & Gamble, is giving away each week in connection with its radio programs ten 1940 Buicks, each with 1,000 gallons of gas and a $50 service fund. The big radio contest in 1934 was Ipana Toothpaste's quest for "the young woman in America with the greatest dental charm"—with a prize of a trip to Chicago and New York with one week in each city.

This year radio program prizes included large cash awards, fur coats, samples, encyclopedias, watches, pastry sets, records, autos, bracelets, recipe books, flower seeds, silk hose, etc. The big radio awards and the most common at present are payments for questions submitted for quizzes and prizes for the winners of the quiz contests.

NBC current premium programs, from the exhibitors' standpoint, is headed by the Tums "Pot o' Gold" show with Horace Heidt. Procter & Gamble is the NBC advertiser with the most premium shows each week—six programs daily, Monday through Friday.

Forty-two Columbia Network advertisers sponsored more than 125 different "inducements for audience mail" in 1939. Almost every type of premium was offered, including: makeup kits, pins, sewing kits, Chevrolets, photographs, copies of the Gettysburg Address, War Atlas, all expense trips to Hollywood, New York City and the World's Fair, recipe and cook books, samples of products advertised, tickets to broadcast, teaspoons, books of various kinds, aprons, shears, salt and pepper shakers, knives, flower seeds, weather forecasters, candles, puzzles, first aid kits, thermometers, maps, silk hose, radios, skirt marker and basting sets, Calendar of the Stars, can openers, dishes, games.

Cash awards totaling well over $100,000 were offered in 1939 over CBS. Merchandise premiums had a value of many times this amount. In the year only one radio contest with a motion picture company tiein was held over CBS. This was the Jesse L. Lasky program which ran from January 8th through June. Application blanks and information were obtained from RKO or Lasky, and two of the winners received RKO contracts.

Only four of the 22 advertisers having premiums on broadcasts over CBS in 1934 are numbered among the present sponsors on that network offering giveaways. These companies are American Home Products, Corn Products Refining Co., General Foods Corp. and General Mills, Inc. In 1934 those companies offered samples, an Antarctic map with a picture of Admiral Byrd in colors and a gyro boomerang plane model. In 1939 those same network advertisers gave the following premiums: makeup kits, lover's knot and heart pins, sewing kits, crown and horseshoe pins, perfume, party books, flower seeds, recipes, cookbooks, weather forecasters, fruit and vegetable knife, candles, puzzles, spoons, trips to New York, Drip-O-Lator with package and filter paper, recipe folders and books.

In the following listings the hours are given in Eastern Standard Time unless otherwise noted.

The weekly list of radio cash giveaway programs heard in Chicago amounts to over $25,000. Almost all the programs are broadcast all over the country. The following list of major cash giveaway programs for Chicago is typical of the premium competition the exhibitor faces each night of the week. (Where the cash prizes vary with each broadcast, an estimated figure is given.)

Monday: "Broadcast," Mutual, $500; "Dr. I. Q." with Lew Valentine, NBC, $200; "Author! Author!" Mutual, $30.

Tuesday: "Pot o' Gold," NBC, $1,000; "Battle of the Sexes," NBC, $30; "Information, Please," NBC, $30; plus $150 Encyclopedias.

Wednesday: Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge," NBC, $100; "Quick Silver" (silver dollars are given away), NBC, $75.

Friday: "Don't Forget," NBC $200; "Prof. Quiz," CBS, $150; "Quixie Doodles," with Col. Stoopnagle, MBS, $115.

Saturday: "Name Three," Mutual, $80; "Stop Me If You've Heard This One," with Milton Berle, NBC, $30; "What's My Name?" NBC, $30.

Sunday: "Spelling Bee," NBC, $30; "March of Games," CBS, $30; "Spelling Bee-Liner," CBS, $30.

Another new show started on NBC last Sunday, titled "Beat the Band," with Ted Weems, has a cash giveaway of an amount yet to be settled. Listeners send in questions which will be popped at band members. Questions accepted are worth $10; double that if the bandsman, who tries, fails to answer correctly.

New Cash Show to Start in Chicago

With cash giveaways banned in Chicago theatres but permitted in broadcasts, theatremen are seeking other means of combatting the problem than merely protesting.

In Chicago, currently, only one night in the week, Thursday, is free from the cash award via radio, and this night is overloaded with big radio shows.

Jack Kirsch, head of Allied Theatres of Illinois, is one of the most active in denouncing the radio giveaway practice. Circuit leaders as well are endeavoring to find a means to fight back at radio prizes.

One line of action undertaken calls for reinstatement of cash awards and giveaways in the theatres.

The latest of the radio giveaway games to get underway will be from WGN in Chicago when MBS joins the gold giveaway parade with the new audience participation show, "Play Broadcast," which makes its bow at 8 P. M. Monday, February 19th. A first prize of $100 in cash, with supplemental awards of $400 in money each week, will make its prize distribution the second biggest on the air.

The new show will require listeners to identify notables, places or events from radio clues.

VOICE PERSONALITY WINNERS SELECTED

The American Institute of Voice Teachers announced this week that Loretta Young and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. are the winners of the annual "voice personality" awards in a round-robin nationwide vote.

Irving Gielow, founder and president of the Institute, said that awards were made on the basis of five qualities: enunciation, clarity, tonal quality, range and sex appeal.

13th Plea to Pass "Ecstasy" Fails

The 13th unsuccessful attempt by Eureka Productions, New York, to override the denial of a license to exhibit "Ecstasy," so-called "sex film", in New York State ended in a court rejection in Albany last Saturday, when the court of appeals refused to hear a reargument or listen to an appeal from the adverse decision recently handed down a second time by the appellate division of the supreme court.

Thus the Czechoslovakian film which first directed attention to Hedy (Keisler) LaMarr still cannot be shown in the state, although distribution rights are understood to have cost Sam Cummins, distributor, some $25,000 four years ago.

The Highlights

While the best mathematicians in Albany court circles cannot agree on how many separate legal actions appellants have instituted, the following highlights are among those remembered:

(1) Submission of "Ecstasy" to Irwin Esmond, state motion picture division director for licensing and his original 1935 ban.

(2) Appeal to Dr. Frank Graves, Commissioner of Education, to override the Esmond refusal to license. Lost.

(3) Attempted injunctions against Gov. Lehman, Attorney General Bennett, etc., because of the denial. Unavailing.

(4) Various Federal court actions predicated on the fact that U. S. Custom officials had admitted "Ecstasy" into this country and that hence Federal jurisdiction obtained. Unavailing.

(5) Appeal to the Appellate Division, which screened the picture and heard arguments, then denied the motion. Lost.

(6) Motion to appeal from Appellate Division action, which was automatically successful since a minority opinion had been filed by justices dissenting from the majority opinion of the court.

(7) Appeal in the Court of Appeals which failed.

(8) Resubmission early in 1939 of a revised and toned-down version to Director Esmond which resulted in a new rejection of the license application.

(9) Appeal to the Board of Regents which meanwhile had taken over the work of considering such actions on films turned down by Esmond and resubmitted to them. Esmond again upheld.

(10) A second submission of "Ecstasy," a rescreening of the revised version and another motion rejection by the Appellate Division, this time unanimously.

(11) A motion for permission to reargue or appeal to the Court of Appeals, which was denied.

(12) Last week's motion before the Court of Appeals on the preceding appeal move.

No further appeals loomed this week on the "Ecstasy" horizon after four long years.

Theatre Man Held

Samuel Millard, St. Louis exhibitor of "Condemned," a film dealing with social disease, was arrested last week at the Lyric theatre for the second time on a charge of showing an obscene film. He was released on $1,000 bail.

The Providence Bureau of Police and Fire last Friday denied to Antonio A. Romano a permit to show burlesque at the Playhouse.

The bureau acted after Police Censor George W. Cowan and Samuel Gee, secretary, had reported that there had been no improvement in burlesque since the bureau originally banned it.

The Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Record has instituted a daily amusement page which will include the theatre advertisements along with reviews of the current films at the Comerford circuit theatres. In addition cuts of the current pictures and other news about Hollywood along with the newspaper's New York and Hollywood columns appear daily on the page.

Celebrate Anniversary

The Metropolitan theatre in Iowa Falls, Ia., recently celebrated its 40th anniversary under the management of E. O. Ellsworth. The theatre was formally opened Dec. 17, 1899, with Tim Murphy, a popular comedian of that time, appearing in "The Carpet Bagger."

Mendelssohn Cleveland Manager

Ted Mendelssohn, Chicago salesman for Warner Brothers, has been named branch manager for the Cleveland office. Mr. Mendelssohn, formerly with MGM, took over his new duties January 8th.

Sparks Acquires House

The Sparks circuit in Florida has acquired the Scenic theatre in Lake Wales, Fla., from Mrs. N. W. Remond. The theatre will be remodelled and refurbished.

Metzger Joins Krueger

Joe Metzger has joined John Krueger as associate in the talent personal management business in Hollywood.

District Manager

Morton Van Praag, formerly New York sales manager for the National Screen Service, has been appointed Chicago district manager for that company.

RED RUSSIA LIQUIDATES ITS U. S. FILM COMPANY

But Treasurer's Secretary Says He's Not Going to Follow President to Moscow

Russia has suffered another loss in her "defensive war" against Finland. She has lost her American film market.

This week, after several months of battling American resentment, expressing itself in a virtual boycott against Russian films, over the Russo-German agreements and the Russian war against the Finns, Amkino, official outlet of Russian films in this country for the last 13 years, was dismissing its personnel, preparatory to closing its New York offices.

Not Going to Russia

"Yes, we are closing shop," the secretary of Nicola Napoli, treasurer and manager of the company, admitted Monday in New York. Mr. Napoli had no plans for the future, she said. She was sure he would not go to Russia.

"He is an American," she said.

Dimitri Vassilieff, president of the company, returned to Russia last month, after two years in New York. No word of public record has since been received from Mr. Vassilieff. Thurber Lewis, publicity manager, was "no longer with Amkino." Other Amkino workers left. Last Friday the board of directors voted to close down.

Amkino this week refused to disclose how films now in the company's vaults will be disposed of, and whether the American market will be entirely, or permanently, abandoned.

The difficulties of Amkino became acute shortly before the European War. With the Russian-German rapprochement, Russian films began to lose what supporters they had in this country.

November and New Films

Last November, in an interview, Mr. Napoli conceded "some change" was appearing in the attitude of its exhibitor clients, "most particularly in the subsequent runs." He asserted, however, that it was "too early" to predict anything. He expressed optimism over the reception of new Soviet films just arrived (by Norwegian boats), the first to come to America since the war's beginning.

The titles of these films were "Shors," "They Wanted Peace," "Tractorists," and "The Little Golden Key," the latter supposed to be a Russianized version of "Pinocchio."

Also expected, at the time, by Amkino, were the following films: "Minin and Pozharsky," "Stenka Razin," "Ferghana," "Teacher" and "Courage."

Amkino officials then had declared that business in South America would increase sufficiently to overbalance lost business in North America.

In its 13 years of operation, Amkino's importations frequently aroused discussion. It would import 15 to 20 features, and some short subjects. At least two a year would arouse controversy, among them "Professor Mamlock," "Beethoven Concerto," "Chapayev," "We Are from Kronstadt," "Potemkin," "Ten Days That Shook the World."

Amkino was not only a Russian film outlet. It was also purchaser of raw film stock, imported technical help into Russia, and attempted to book American films, if it wanted any or could get any. This phase of Amkino's business had been comparatively minor up to 1933-34. Then American recognition of Russia neared and the granting of credits, with that recognition. In November, 1933, H. M. Idashkin, then acting president of Amkino, waxed optimistic over business. Russia did not object to the tenor of American films, he said; it was merely the "exorbitant" prices asked for prints by American companies.

FOREIGN FILMS GROSS IN U. S. DOWN 25%

American grosses on foreign films are off from 25 to 30 per cent, due to a decreasing interest in this type of product, Motion Picture Daily said Monday. It was said that distributors of foreign pictures hold that the European war has had the effect of making Americans more patriotic and that the "buy American" movement has spread to motion picture entertainment. Also the report said that there has been no consistently good foreign product in the last few months.

About 175 theatres in the United States had been showing foreign films on a full-time or part-time basis. Several have already turned back to domestic product and others are expected to do the same as the lack of product from abroad becomes more serious. So far, according to distributors, there has been no lack of product, because the pictures being currently released were made about a year ago.

Another factor, according to foreign film distributors, is that most pictures from abroad are heavy dramas and the American public's taste is now for light entertainment. Theatres showing Russian pictures have been particularly hard hit since the invasion of Finland.

American companies had objected that their pictures, when exported to Russia were delayed at Moscow for technical study and then, after weeks or months of negotiating, shipping, and screening, were found "unsatisfactory" and returned to America.

The American firms also complained that, on the few occasions that the Russians liked an American film, they wanted it "outright," title as well as print.

Reflected Changes

Amkino has reflected the changes in the Russian film industry, and in turn the changes in the Russian Government. Amkino presidents have come and gone from these shores; some have visited Russia, and not returned.

The Russian film industry, which, through its exponents, promised so much in orders to American equipment manufacturers, and so much in technical developments to American experimenters, appears to have been thoroughly riddled by the upheaval in Russian politics, a progressive upheaval for more than ten years.

In 1935, Boris Z. Shumiatsky, then a Stalin favorite and "czar" of the Russian film industry, visited America. The old Motion Picture Club, in New York, and other agencies, feted him during his survey of "American conditions" and his granting of copious promises and opinions.

Mr. Shumiatsky, under whose regime the old favorite Russian directors had been demoted and production was to be rushed and bettered, returned to Russia with plans for a "Russian Hollywood" on the Crimean peninsula.

Then came rumors that he had become unpopular; Russian newspapers hinted that he was a saboteur. This was in January, 1938. Later that month, while the Hearst International News Service "feared" for Mr. Shumiatsky's life, Moscow newspapers began to refer to him as "the ex-head" of the Russian industry. Amkino, in New York, then admitted his removal, inefficiency being ascribed. The inefficiency was reported accentuated by Mr. Shumiatsky's handling of "Treasure Island." He was accused of introducing Irish politics into the picture, and in doing so, straying from the party line of the moment.

He has not been heard from, since.

In May of that year, Semyon S. Dukelsky was named head of the new "Soviet Cinema Committee," formed "by a decision of the Council of People's Commissars of the USSR."

Vladimir Verlinsky, heading Amkino during Mr. Shumiatsky's regime, was shifted to a Russian post; a Samson Kritsberg replaced him.

Mr. Dukelsky, praised in Russia as a "tough-minded young man," inaugurated a "new deal," brought back Serjei Eisenstein, to make "Alexander Nevsky," presumably economized, ousted the "saboteurs."

Dukelsky Is Supplanted

Mr. Eisenstein was awarded the Order of Lenin in February of last year, but Mr. Dukelsky was replaced, last July, by Ivan Grigorivich.

Last October, about one month after the European war's beginning, the Cameo Theatre, New York "premiere" Soviet film house, started showing other than Russian films. Shortage of films was given as a reason, but Matty Radin, operator, also asserted there was "no percentage" in playing bad Russian pictures, and admitted that, except for some "outstanding" films, his house had lost money on most Russian pictures.

Amkino, Mr. Radin said at the time, should be pleased at the Cameo policy. "If we play only the good product now, they will benefit," he said.

In September, Amkino was attacked in testimony before the Dies Congressional committee investigating un-Americanism. It was charged that Amkino collected $1,000,000 in this country, and that the funds were used to promote Communistic activities here in America.

At the time, Amkino purchased Universal's "One Hundred Men and a Girl" for Russia, and continued negotiations for Walt Disney's "Snow White," and Warner Brothers "Juarez" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Charles Chaplin's "Modern Times" had been purchased in 1936.

Merrill Elected RKO Treasurer

The board of directors of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, the Delaware corporation which constitutes the parent holding company of the group of RKO corporations, met Friday to formally elect W. J. Merrill treasurer of the corporation. He had been elected a vice-president at the board's last meeting on January 10th.

Mr. Merrill for the last year has been connected with RKO as assistant to the president. Previously he held the posts of vice-president, comptroller and director of the Royal Baking Powder Company; vice-president and treasurer of the Great Island Holding Corporation and vice-president and comptroller of W. & J. Sloane.

U.S. OPENS QUESTIONING OF MAJORS; "NO STOPPING CASE NOW": ARNOLD

Harry Cohn First Executive Examined in Anti-Trust Case; Arnold's Budget Request Is Compromised

The United States Government on Monday started placing executives of the producer-distributor defendants in the "key" New York anti-trust case under fire of oral questioning before trial.

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, in charge of production in Hollywood, was the first to appear, followed later in the week by other Columbia executives.

Pre-Trial Examinations

Thus did the Department of Justice start actual pre-trial examination of witnesses as it made this and other tangible movements to proceed with the case, the trial of which was ordered for May 1st by Federal Judge John G. Knox. Two weeks ago Judge Knox appointed Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard to sit as trial judge, in chambers in U. S. district court, at the U. S. Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, where the executives of the defendants started this week to undergo oral questioning by Robert L. Wright, special U. S. assistant district attorney, of the Department's anti-trust division.

Further evidence that the Department of Justice intends to proceed full steam ahead came from Washington Monday, when it became known that determination to carry on the film suit and suits in other fields was voiced by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, when he came before the House Appropriations sub-committee for an enlarged budget. Mr. Arnold appeared last month, but the nature of the hearings is only now being made public, disclosing that the anti-trust division head had made a strong appeal for an increase of $400,000.

Says It Turns In Twice the Total

In asking the House sub-committee for an increased budget, and declaring his opposition to any reductions, Mr. Arnold stressed that the Justice Department turned into the United States Treasury twice the money, in fines and penalties, that it spent in law enforcement.

He referred to the motion picture prosecution as "one of the major cases which cannot be dropped, and which will carry over into the next fiscal year."

There will be, also, "12 to 15 new major cases," some of them centering on patents (and some possibly applying to the motion picture industry), he told the sub-committee.

There were other situations, too, he added, "situations to which the public is demanding that we give attention."

"However," he continued, "there is no use discussing those situations now. Apparently, the most I can do is to ask that I be allowed to complete some of the building-cases already begun."

Compromise on Cut

Regardless, and avowedly impelled by the need for economy, the House appropriation subcommittee on Tuesday held to $1,250,000 the fund for enforcement of the anti-trust laws during the coming fiscal year.

The committee denied Mr. Arnold's request for $1,600,000, which would have involved an increase of $400,000 over the budget estimate, but agreed with him that the proposed cut of $100,000 from the current appropriation of $1,309,000 was too severe, and compromised by restoring $41,000.

Mr. Arnold, also in House testimony, parenthetically revealed that there were many complaints "lodged by great groups of the public," that the department had to decline to investigate.

LABOR FIGHTS U. S. TRUST SUIT POLICY

Because they think the Department of Justice's indictments of labor leaders on anti-trust charges are steps towards a dictatorship and toward the destruction of the labor movement, the members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in mid-winter session at Miami this week, pledged a "fight to the finish."

The council accused the Justice Department of having started a "deliberate, nation-wide drive to place the organized labor movement under the thumb of the Federal Government." The council, representing 4,000,000 skilled workers, also demanded that the Government "cease" discouraging and harassing business, and that it be "positive" in promoting industrial revival.

Goes into Detail

Last week, Mr. Arnold gave additional information, in an address to the Illinois Agricultural Association, at the Stevens hotel, in Chicago, thus:

"I am aware of the drive for balancing the budget. Therefore, I want explicitly to point out that the Anti-Trust Division is not an expense but a revenue to the Government. Let me illustrate the difference in expense between enforcement and non-enforcement. From 1929 to 1936 the Anti-Trust Division spent about $300,000 a year. That small organization, occupied with the 31 Acts which are related to the anti-trust problem, collected $73,000 in fines during that period.

Last year the Anti-Trust Division was given $1,300,000. Six months of that year have gone by and approximately half of that appropriation has been spent—about $700,000. We have already collected $2,400,000 in fines and we have a potential of $5,000,000 more. Of course, we are not running the Division to collect fines, but the differences between the two types of enforcement as a narrow budget balancing matter are strikingly illustrated by these figures. If you don't want anti-trust enforcement you can always get non-enforcement by paying lip service to the principals and cutting down appropriations, but your excuse can never be economy because the Anti-Trust Division pays revenue into the Treasury instead of taking it away."

U. S. Examines Cohn

The first company executive to be examined by the Government in the New York anti-trust prosecution, since United Artists officials appeared last spring in pre-trial examination, Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, at questioning on Monday in New York federal court, denied that Columbia was a major company; denied that it discriminated between affiliated and independent producers in loaning its players, denied that the company considered purchasing theatres; and was prevented by his attorneys from answering a Government question on whether it was advisable or necessary for a producer to own theatres.

The latter question, put to him by Mr.

Harry Fried Action in Philadelphia Is Fourth Settled by Companies; Decision on Writ Appeal Delayed

The large producer-distributors seem to be making progress in cutting down the number of independent exhibitors' anti-trust suits outstanding. This week they effected a settlement of the Philadelphia Fried case, the fourth action to be disposed of in recent weeks.

In other trust actions in the field developments included postponement of decision on the companies' appeal from a temporary injunction granted Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J.; conclusion of arguments for a bill of particulars in the Crescent Amusement case in Nashville.

Settle Fried Suit

The anti-trust suit by Harry Fried, operator of the Suburban Theatre, Ardmore, the Seville Theatre, Bryn Mawr, and the Anthony Wayne Theatre, in Wayne, Pa., against the Warner theatre circuit and seven large distributors, in Philadelphia federal court, was settled last Thursday.

It was understood that Mr. Fried would receive additional product at one of his suburban houses, and adjusted clearance at the others.

The Suburban was to receive Paramount and Columbia first-run pictures. It already had Twentieth Century-Fox first-run product, and that company was not sued.

The clearance adjustment was said to provide that Mr. Fried's Suburban Theatre was to play pictures 21 days instead of 30, after the Stanley Warner Ardmore Theatre, in the same town. Similar adjustments were to benefit Mr. Fried's houses in Bryn Mawr and Wayne.

With the attorneys for both sides reluctant to talk last week, it was said the settlement was effected because of the majors' aversion to entering long and costly litigation.

Mr. Fried had threatened, last week, that if settlement was not reached by Monday, he would push the case through the courts. The case had been scheduled to begin on Monday in the United States district court in Philadelphia. It had charged monopoly.

Another case against the majors and the Warner circuit in the same territory, that of the Admiral theatre, Philadelphia, was postponed last week, after scheduled hearing. Irvin A. Winegrad, attorney for the theatre, denied reports of a settlement.

Reserve Landis Decision

The decision on the appeal before the United States District Court of Appeals on the preliminary injunction granted the Landis Theatre, of Vineland, N. J., against Warner Brothers circuit in Philadelphia and the major distributing companies was still reserved by the judges, when the court reconvened Monday in Philadelphia. Arguments on the appeal were heard January 19, at which time the injunction granted by Judge Kirkpatrick in the United States District Court was attacked as "unconstitutional" by Morris Wolf, counsel for Warner's, and former Attorney-General William A. Schnader, representing the large distributors.

COHN CLASHES WITH U.S. ATTORNEY

Wright, is the main issue in the suit, and could not be answered by a witness, even an expert witness, Columbia lawyers declared.

Mr. Wright announced Monday he would move for a court order directing Mr. Cohn to answer the question.

Mr. Cohn had testified that Columbia not only never considered buying theatres, but that it had no financial interest in any.

In answering questions on the willingness of Columbia to loan players to all producers, the definition of an independent producer differed; also the necessity for considering a producer's affiliation.

Clashes with Wright

Mr. Cohn differed with Mr. Wright's contention that a producer who releases through a major was not an independent; and added that, anyway, his company did not investigate the releasing facilities of a producer to whom it loaned talent. Columbia, he said, was concerned with the ability of the producer to pay, the type of story in which the player would appear, and the billing which he would receive.

Mr. Cohn called Columbia an independent rather than a major during questioning about the company's growth and its facilities for making "Class A" pictures.

Tells Company History

He answered questions about his activities in the film industry since 1918; said he helped organize Columbia in 1924 with several others, that from 1924 to 1929 Columbia distributed its pictures through states rights exchanges, and that in 1929 it set up its own national distributing system, he said. But that did not make it a major, he insisted.

When Mr. Wright sought to make him admit that only majors could make "Class A" pictures, Mr. Cohn replied that "all companies make good pictures."

When Mr. Wright tried to have Mr. Cohn concede that Columbia became a major in 1929, with the setting up of its own exchanges, Mr. Cohn repeated that the company was an independent, and added that it had made "Class A" pictures before 1929.

The differences in definition which occurred during questioning extended to the definition of a "Class A" picture, Mr. Cohn maintaining, finally, that that type picture would be called such with some companies, and a "Class B" by another company.

The questioning took several hours.

Jack Cohn Friday

On Friday, Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, was to be examined.

Universal officials, who were to have testified next week, will testify in March, their attorneys having obtained the postponement, Mr. Wright announced.

Judge Bondy presided.

Settle Dispute Over Questions

Attorneys for the large companies and the Government, in the New York anti-trust prosecution, over the weekend reached a new agreement on the defendants' consolidated interrogatories. The defendants were to revise their consolidated list, to meet the objections the Government raised last Thursday. This was said to involve elimination of some, and modification of other, questions.

Completed, the list was to be submitted to the Justice Department, and the Department, if it accepted it, was to have until March 1st to prepare its answers.

Rejection of the altered consolidated interrogatories was to bring argument before Judge Henry W. Goddard, trial judge, this week.

United Artists, not participating in the consolidation of interrogatories, has been promised answers by the Government, to its separate list. However, the firm was to waive its right to a separate answer, if the consolidated list was accepted by the Government.

The Government moved last week to vacate the Columbia list of questions. Columbia, also, had not joined the consolidation. The Government's motion to vacate the Columbia questions was to be argued this week before Judge Goddard.

Columbia, this week, was scheduled to object to the Government's interrogatories and the other companies might join, it was said early this week. The Government's interrogatories, submitted some time ago, and then altered, are scheduled to be answered by next Thursday.

Last Thursday, it had appeared as if the dispute between the Government and major company attorneys on the latter's interrogatories, was an impasse. The Government had rejected the consolidated list, and had served notice on the majors that it would apply for an order striking out all interrogatories, except that of United Artists.

Attorneys for the majors professed surprise at the move, because, they said, the consolidated interrogatories were the result of long preparation and of conference with Government attorneys.

The Government on Thursday, in rejecting the defendant consolidated interrogatories, objected to them as immaterial, and irrelevant; because they asked for evidence which has been acquired after filing of the demand; because they called for opinion, not facts; and because they probed too deeply into names of witnesses, and for other facts. The Government also charged the questions were too long.

U. S. CHARGES AD FILM "UNFAIRNESS"

Unfair methods of competition in the distribution of advertising films and motion picture trailers were charged Monday by the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, in a complaint issued against the Northwest Film Ad Service, Inc., Portland, Ore., and Frank D. Atkins, president.

"For the purpose of inducing the purchase of their advertising films and trailers," the commission alleged "the respondents have made false and misleading statements and representations, among which are that they are producers as well as distributors of advertising films and trailers; that their business is nation-wide in its scope and that they maintain offices in numerous cities throughout the United States; that they have contacted manufacturers or distributors of various products sold by prospective purchasers of the films and that these manufacturers and distributors have agreed to cooperate in the film advertising of their respective products and pay a portion of the costs; that the respondents have negotiated contracts with local theatres to show their films and trailers, and that the advertising films supplied by them will be of the kind and quality designated by the purchaser."

Four Anti-Trust Actions Settled

ticulars from the Government, Federal Judge Elmer D. Davies indicated in Nashville, on Monday, after hearing arguments of both sides, concluded last Saturday. The Government's suit charges violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Late last Friday afternoon, Louis Frohlich, attorney, of New York, representing Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, charged the Government with trying to bring the case into court as an interstate matter, "only it didn't have the evidence," he said.

George H. Armistead, Nashville attorney, attacked the Government's bill of complaint as "vague, confusing, and self-contradictory." He asked for clarification of the Government's bill, so that the defendants could prepare an adequate answer.

He insisted that certain Crescent Amusement company practices were not interstate violations, not subject to Federal jurisdiction, and therefore had "no part in the lawsuit."

The defense sought, specifically, a more detailed bill of complaint, a bill of particulars, and 40 days additional time in which to file answers.

Chicago Case Still Pending

In Chicago, the Government's suit against Balaban and Katz and the majors, charging violation of a 1932 consent degree, is still pending, while awaiting word from Master-In-Chancery Edgar Eldredge, before whom the case was heard. Master Eldredge is scheduled to study the testimony, and then to hear oral argument.

In the same city, hearing in Frank Ford's anti-trust suit against the same circuit and the majors awaits Federal Judge Wilkerson's return from a winter vacation. Mr. Ford operates the Stadium Theatre, in Evanston.

Testimony in the Morse and Rothenberg Boston anti-trust case having been virtually concluded, after almost two years of litigation, attorneys were preparing concluding arguments for presentation to Master Phillip Hendrick. Summations are to begin March 25th.

Injunction Denied

The 395 Amusement Corporation, operator of the Gloria theatre, Brooklyn, lost its motion for a temporary injunction against the Randforce circuit and several of the majors, in its anti-trust suit against them, in Brooklyn Federal Court, on Tuesday.

AMPA Changes

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York, met Thursday at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, switching from Stouffer's Restaurant on Fifth Avenue. Paul Lazarus, Jr., president, explained that the lapse in meetings was due to delay in finding a meeting place with facilities required. The following were to be guests: Mary Howard, who plays in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"; Terry Kilburn, of "Swiss Family Robinson"; Joan Edwards, singer, and Katherine Conrad, European actress.

Dietrich Gets Refund

The United States Treasury Department refunded to Marlene Dietrich $37,902 as the excess paid on her income tax during the fiscal year ending June 30 last.

TELECASTERS FLASH "DARK SECRETS" FROM LABORATORIES BEFORE FCC

Government Agents See RCA's New "Large-Screen" Television, in Color, Besides Films in Black-and-White

by SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
in Philadelphia

There are no "dark secrets" any longer in the television laboratories—insofar as the Federal Communications Commission is concerned. Since the television manufacturers themselves are divided on the issue of "freezing" standards for the commercialization of the "infant" industry at the present time. FCC commissioners, to see privately for themselves the precise state of development of television, went out, last week on a first-hand inspection tour of the eastern television laboratories, making their last and most significant stop in Philadelphia on Monday.

At Opposite Poles

Philco Radio and Television Corporation, in Philadelphia, and RCA Manufacturing Company, across the river, at Camden, N. J., are at opposite poles on the question of standards, Philco engineers declare that a gross injustice would be done to the public "if present television standards are frozen," and the competitive viewpoint made for a most unusual demonstration on the part of both.

Making its first stop of the day at Camden, the most significant feature of the RCA show was a practical demonstration of television as a possible serious threat to the theatrical exhibition of motion pictures, although RCA engineers, virtually as one, vehemently disown the belief that television ever will take the place of the motion picture theatre. Nonetheless, what was disclosed to the Commissioners was reception of televised films on a four-and-a-half by six-foot "large" screen, projected from the telecaster by means of a new optical system, the workings of which will remain an RCA secret for the present. Going all the way, RCA's development of color television was disclosed at the same demonstration in reception of Technicolor films on the same large-screen by the same optical system. The colored pictures appeared in all its brilliant hues on the screen, and the black and white films as well were comparable to home sound films.

Alfred H. Morton, NBC vice-president, said Tuesday in New York that television offered no competition to motion pictures and that large screen television had been developed for motion picture theatres.

Tested on 6 x 9-Foot Screen

While the large-screen projection was confined to the four-and-a-half by six-foot screen, it is understood that RCA experiments have included projection on a six by nine-foot screen, comparable to that used in the smaller movie houses. Size of the screen eventually will be flexible enough to meet the demands of every sized theatre. However, RCA said there is no intention to advance this large-screen projection of television to supplant motion pictures.

Color television, a blending of the various colors transmitted on various wavelength channels, was hinted at as a possibility several weeks previous by E. W. Engstrom, director of research at the RCA Manufacturing Co.

RCA engineers also showed the Commissioners how they arrived at a 30 frames a second transmission of pictures of 441 scanned lines, the greater speed making for better definition of the picture and for better synchronization with the sound. This speed of transmission is compared against the speed of 24 frames per second of motion pictures.

UNIONS SETTLE TALENT DISPUTE

Contracts were signed last weekend in New York settling the talent jurisdictional dispute between the three branches of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and negotiations with the networks on conditions are to start within 10 days.

Control for a temporary period of six months is vested in a five-man board. Actors Equity, Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Radio Artists and Chorus Equity will designate one member each and these four will select a fifth. Addition of a Chorus Equity member was designed to equalize the balance of power between Equity, SAG and AFRA.

Members of any four-A union will be eligible to work in television. The committee is not permitted to set wage and hour standards without approval of the executive boards of the four branches, but, to prevent delay, all boards must approve or disapprove within one week after the committee makes its recommendations.

The six-month period may be extended later by agreement and it was agreed that all branches reserve their rights to assert claims for exclusive jurisdiction over television after the six months.

Making the field tour here were FCC Chairman James Lawrence Fly and Commissioners Paul A. Walker, Thad H. Brown and Frederick I. Thompson; along with Dr. L. P. Wheeler, chief of the Commission's technical information division; William H. Bauer, an FCC attorney; and George O. Gillingham, the Commission's publicity director.

For RCA Manufacturing were George K. Throckmorton, president of the company; Robert Shannon, executive vice-president, along with all the other vice-presidents in charge of the various RCA divisions: E. W. Engstrom, director of research; Thomas F. Joyce, in charge of advertising; O. B. Hanson, chief engineer of the National Broadcasting Company in New York; and all the television research engineers at both the Camden and Harrison, New Jersey, RCA laboratories.

In view of the fact that other television laboratories have demonstrated the transmission of pictures greater than the 441 line scanning, RCA engineers explained that they have experimented for years on television transmission up to 1,000 lines, within the limits of FCC bands, and determined to their own satisfaction that within that limit, a 441 scanned line picture gives the best detail and best definition while with a wider band, they get a "jerky" picture. Later in the day, at Philco, the FCC saw 605 line scanning and it is understood that the previous Saturday, at the Allen B. Dumont Laboratories in New York, the Commissioners were demonstrated 625 line scanning.

Call Lines Not Enough

Lines, a standard on which the television industry is divided, are not enough, say RCA engineers, "it's like saying if there are more tubes in a set, it's a better radio set." RCA engineers contend that "contrast, brightness, resolution and synchronization" of the picture are more important factors than the number of scanning lines in transmitting the picture.

The Commissioners were also told that RCA is prepared to present television transmission and reception as a commercially obtainable product in an already advanced stage of development, just as soon as the FCC takes the industry out of its experimental state. Stations have already been lined up and ready to prepare for operation to make for the development of a television network that would cover the entire Atlantic coast by means of relay transmitters. The Commissioners were shown the manufacture of transmitters and all necessary station equipment, as well as advanced models of receiving sets, and have even set up a service department for television stations.

See Transmission Tube

In addition to being shown RCA's own-made one kilowatt transmitter and signal generator, the Commissioners were taken into the laboratory to witness advanced developments of the iconoscope—the transmission tube—which gave promise of continuing improvements in the 441 line definition of pictures. Lack of time curtailed a proposed visit to the electronic laboratory where technicians under the direction of Dr. V. K. Zworykin, director of electronic research at RCA, were to demonstrate advanced developments in electron optics and by-products. Among the researchers, it is felt that ultra microscopes and telescopes using television's cathode tubes will eventually have more far-reaching implications than television iteself.

After spending the morning at RCA's plants and laboratories, the Commission's party spent the afternoon at the Philadelphia suburban homes of Philco engineers, where test television receiving tests are installed. Philco has withheld the marketing of its television receiving sets, feeling that "television is still in the research laboratory."

With William H. Grimditch, vice-president in charge of engineering, and David Grimes, chief engineer, conducting the demonstration, the showing concentrated on Philco's latest developments in television reception and receiving sets. And its significance was two-fold in that the receiving set offered a built-in aerial and that pictures were transmitted on a 605-line scan, approximating a perfect photograph, in the opinion of Philco engineers, and making obsolete every television receiving set on the market today.

Hum Annoyances Demonstrated

So far as the consumer is concerned, a built-in loop means the elimination of the expensive item of the building of an outside aerial as required for all sets out on the market today. But more important is the fact that with the built-in loop, a dial on the receiving set enabling the consumer to control the direction of the antennae, Philco engineers claim that diathermy interference—which makes for hum trouble—is eliminated and thus makes for better synchronization. By operating diathermy machines a mile distant from the homes of the engineers, a practical demonstration of hum annoyances was presented to the Commissioners with the trouble eliminated by the dial control of the built-in loop.

In eliminating the diathermy interference and keeping the frames lowered to a speed of 24 per second, the same as in motion pictures, Philco engineers say they have been able to increase the scanning of lines to 605, contrasting the 441 line scanning to the 60 screen gauge of newspaper pictures with the 80 screen in the slick paper magazines.

Flat-Faced Tube

Another feature of the Philco set demonstrated was the utilization of a flat-face tube as compared to the round-face tube on the receiving sets in use today, the flat surface eliminating distortion of the picture as one walks away from the set.

Insisting that definite knowledge is lacking even in the fundamental principles in television, Mr. Grimditch recently cited the blastings by Philco engineers and scientists of the popularly accepted theory that television transmission is limited to the horizon. As a result, he pointed out then, Philco's television station here, W3XE, and W2XAX of the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York are now sharing time as a result of interference caused by the collision of their television beams.

That argument was dramatically presented to the Commissioners in an actual demonstration of the collision of signals from CBS's television transmitter with that from Philco, the clash of signals making pictures from both studios run wildly into each other.

Black and white films and a live talent sketch, transmitting from the station at the Philco plant, illustrated the demonstration. Last month, at a Philco sales meeting in Florida, Mr. Grimditch said that "television is still in the research laboratory."

Opposes "Freezing" Standards

"Developments are being made in this infant science so rapidly that setting standards on the basis of present scientific knowledge would be doing the public injustice," he said. "Freezing the standards would be comparable to determining the gauge of a railroad track, buying rolling stock to conform to that gauge and then three months later finding that the agreed gauge was impractical and expensive. What then will be done with the rolling stock?

"Not enough facts are available at present on which to base any standards. Much research remains to be done before any effort is made to sell television sets. I know from personal knowledge of what is taking place in Philco's television science laboratories that revolutionary improvements in television will occur in 1940 which will bring television much closer to reality and perhaps out of the experimental stage."

After being a party to the practical arguments of both sides, the Commissioners returned to Washington, reserving comment on all that they had seen and heard during their five-day inspection tour.

Commissioners See Films on Relay

"Television history" was witnessed when the FCC commissioners visited General Electric's plant at Schenectady, N. Y., last Thursday, and saw on local receivers a television program which originated in the NBC studios in New York City. It had been relayed 130 miles and then re-telecast over General Electric's new television station, located in the Helderberg Mountains, 12 miles from Schenectady. The relayed program was a showing of wild animal motion pictures.

Although telecast programs have been received at the Helderberg relay station before in tests, this was the first time such programs were rebroadcast for the entertainment of persons in the area served by the local station. Both image and voice were reported to have been considered excellent by members of the Commission, equally as good as programs originating in the local studio.

So far as known, this is the first time a television program has actually been rebroadcast over any such distance and from a point 7,000 feet below the line of sight.

Among those in the General Electric group accompanying the commissioners on their inspection of G. E.'s television facilities were Dr. W. R. G. Baker, manager of radio and television; Chester H. Lang, manager of radio and advertising; Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, radio scientist; C. A. Priest, chief transmitter engineer, and W. J. Purcell, engineer of broadcasting Station WGY.

With this visit by the Commission, G. E. announced the completion of its new television relay station, located one and one-half miles from the main transmitter atop the Helderberg Mountains. By the use of the new relaying equipment, television broadcasts from New York City will become available to capital district residents within range of the company's Station W2XB.

RCA'S RELAY USES "FM" TRANSMISSION

The Radio Corporation's new system of radio relay for television employs the frequency-modulation method of transmission, it was learned in New York this week, after RCA's original announcemnet on the new system had failed to disclose the type of modulation adapted.

It was stressed, however, that the relay system can also work on amplitude modulation, although FM is more desirable. RCA engineers insist that the company holds many basic patents for FM transmission.

Returning from a weekend trip to Chicago where he addressed a joint meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers, Major Edwin H. Armstrong declared that interest in FM in the Middle West is high.

He pointed out that 12 FM stations now operate on a regular basis, that four additions are expected within the next few weeks and that 10 more have received FM licenses. Mr. Armstrong's own station in Alpine, N. J., now transmits CBS programs from 9 A.M. until 11 P.M., although the regular hours are scheduled to start at 4 P.M.

F. M. Broadcasters, Inc., organization of stations using FM, will hold a meeting in Washington on February 26, prior to the start of F.C.C. hearings on February 28. They will seek the allotment of 15 channels for FM stations instead of the present five with provision for future expansion. Increases of power from the present one kilowatt to 50 k.w. also will be sought. Full commercialization through the granting of regular instead of experimental licenses will be asked.

NBC Presents Data To FCC in New York

National Broadcasting presented its evidence Friday, in New York, to members of the Federal Communications Commission, that television is ready to be graduated from the experimental to the commercial stage. The Commissioners saw motion pictures being broadcast, a television rehearsal of part of the play "June Moon" and varied equipment in the RCA Building in Radio City, then inspected the company's portable equipment and the transmitter at the Empire State Building, which at present broadcasts 14 hours of television programs a week on an experimental basis.

Friday night, the Commissioners looked at city reception, both at the NBC offices and at private homes, as the night before they studied the reception at Poughkeepsie and Newburgh, N Y. Just before they left the RCA Building they saw televised for their special benefit a motion picture taken Thursday by General Electric Company of their visit to that company's new television relay station in the Helderbergs, near Schenectady.

The Commissioners, who held hearings in Washington last week on the question of permitting commercial broadcasting and of establishing fixed standards for television, on Saturday inspected the Cath-Ray Electronic Laboratories and the DuMont Laboratories in Passaic, N. J., and Monday went to the RCA plant in Camden, N. J., and Philco Radio and Television Corporation in Philadelphia. They are expected to announce their decision on permitting commercial broadcasts some time in the next few weeks, if it is favorable.

In welcoming the Commissioners to New York, David Sarnoff, president of RCA and chairman of the board of NBC, absolved the commission of any blame for delay in authorizing commercial television broadcasts. He said that any delay had been due, first, to the nature of the device and, second, to the fact that various elements in the industry has not been in agreement on proposed standards.

RCA, which is said to have spent $10,000,000 on television research and only last Tuesday announced the development of a system of radio relay transmission of television programs which would permit the establishment of a television network, is anxious to go ahead commercially, as is the General Electric Company. Columbia Broadcasting Company, however, and several radio manufacturers, among them Zenith and Philco, contend that television is not yet ready for the standardization that commercial broadcasting would bring.

Virtually all present television broadcasting, however, uses the temporary standards which NBC and GE want adopted for commercial broadcasting.

Captain W. H. Fawcett Dies in Los Angeles

Captain Wilfred Hamilton Fawcett, 55, magazine publisher, died Wednesday, in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles. Captain Fawcett's residence was Minneapolis. He had gone to Hollywood, from New York, three weeks ago, and contracted a cold on the way. His magazine interests included the film-fan, romance, technical, and humorous fields.

Third Feature Cartoon on Screen, with Opening at Center Theatre in Radio City; Rooney at "Edison" Premiere

The motion picture's third feature cartoon reached the screen Wednesday night when Walt Disney's "Pinocchio" restored the Center theatre, at least temporarily, to its original purpose, a theatre for outstanding motion pictures. When Radio City was built with its two theatres, the Music Hall and the Center, the Hall was to be for stage presentations, the Center for first-run pictures. The Music Hall quickly was switched to its present policy and the Center struggled along with films moved over from the Music Hall, stage spectacles and most recently the Ballet Theatre. "Pinocchio" is the first motion picture in almost three years to play the Center theatre. (Reviewed in the February 3rd issue.)

A triple theatre premiere, for which Thomas A. Edison's boyhood town of Port Huron, Mich., turned out in force and in the costumes of the 1860's will mark the opening of "Young Tom Edison" Saturday.

Rivals Top Openings

The opening for "Pinocchio" rivaled the first theatre openings in Radio City. Official New York and industry executives were present to see for themselves if "Pinocchio" was a worthy successor to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and, as advance notices had it, even better than the first feature cartoon which broke all records two years ago. "Gulliver's Travels," Fleischer-Paramount cartoon feature, closed a four-weeks run at the New York Paramount on January 16th.

Practically every medium of publicity had been covered in the advance campaign for "Pinocchio" in the metropolitan area in addition to the overlapping national drive, which included articles and pictures in scores of magazines and "Pinocchio" displays and counters in several million stores.

The New York Times and Herald Tribune will carry a full page of roto pictures on "Pinocchio." On the opening day 20 newspapers of the Macy chain in Westchester gave a full page to "Pinocchio" and a four-page section will be used by several Long Island papers.

Art shows have been arranged in three New York galleries, including a special exhibit of three Walt Disney originals at the Brooklyn Museum. A comprehensive display showing a Disney film in the various steps of production is on view at the New York Museum of Science and Industry in Radio City. Two hundred original paintings from "Pinocchio" are displayed inside the Center theatre.

Flags, Stickers, Arrows

The Sixth Avenue Association has made arrangements for members to fly flags welcoming "Pinocchio" and many merchants are to carry directional window stickers pointing to the Center theatre. A five story head of Pinocchio is mounted at 49th and Broadway, carrying direction arrows pointing to the Center.

Mayor LaGuardia received a group of 25 "Pinocchio" characters on the steps of the City Hall Tuesday morning. The group was introduced by V. Clement Jenkins, president of the Sixth Avenue Association.

Several days before the opening mail and telephone inquiries reached a total of over 1,500, according to John Kenneth Hyatt, managing director of the Center theatre. Seat reservations have been received from many out of town cities, including Washington, Baltimore and Boston. Many of the sales are for blocks of tickets.

LARGE WORLD'S FAIR EXHIBITORS TO REPEAT

All the major industrial exhibitors who own their buildings at the New York World's Fair are almost certain to participate in the 1940 exposition, and more than 95 per cent of them already have signed contracts or announced that they will do so, Edward F. C. Parker, director of exhibits, said this week.

Preparations for other divisions of the Fair, however, have not reached such an advanced stage, a survey indicated. Only four states of the 23 represented at the 1939 Fair have signed agreements to continue their exhibits, and Ohio has formally withdrawn. Eight foreign nations have decided officially to continue participation, while seven have notified the Fair authorities that they will not take part this season.

More than 900 stores in the metropolitan area are featuring "Pinocchio" displays. Through a tie-in with Sheffield Farms Company, 800,000 "Pinocchio" bottle collars have been distributed in New York City, along with 1,500,000 leaflets. Almost every conceivable type of merchandise has been tied-in with the Disney production and dealers and merchants are cooperating fully.

Foreign Coverage

The "Pinocchio" opening Wednesday evening received one of the largest foreign coverages in motion picture history. Sixty-seven representatives of foreign publications, news syndicates and wire services, covering 38 countries with a total population of more than one billion attended. The notices by the foreign writers are expected to be read by over one million persons in 17 different languages. Also 275 secondary languages and regional dialects carried news on the opening of Disney's second feature.

All five of the song hits of the picture, as well as highlights of the action, have been recorded directly from the sound track for a special Victor album of three records. The six scenes that have been recorded are heard exactly as in the picture. Permission to make the records from the film is exclusive with RCA Victor.

The hit tunes, which already have received considerable attention over the radio, are "When You Wish upon a Star," "Little Wooden Head," "Give a Little Whistle," "Hi Diddle Dee Dee, An Actor's Life for Me" and "Three Cheers for Anything." The songs were composed by Ned Washington and Lee Harline.

"Pinocchio" will open in other spots shortly after the New York premiere. The West Coast premiere was held Thursday at the Pantages theatre and is playing day and date there and

Loew Circuit Alone Will Return Rental of at Least $3,000,000 on "Gone with the Wind", Say Officials

Loew circuit officials estimate that the circuit alone will return a rental of between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000 to MGM on "Gone with the Wind." The picture has opened in 40 theatres in the circuit, which has a total of 125 theatres in the United States, including 71 in metropolitan New York.

The estimated rental is figured on a basis of 70 per cent of a box-office intake of between $4,200,000 and $5,000,000.

Neighborhood Openings Delayed

The opening of the picture in about 30 Loew neighborhood theatres in Greater New York, planned originally for this month, has been postponed to Easter, March 23, or a week later.

The first opening in the city after Broadway was held last Friday night at Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn. An advance ticket sale of $55,000 was reported then for evening performances and Sunday matinees.

MGM reports an advance sale of $1,500,000 at 69 theatres which will have opened the film in the week beginning last Friday. This is for evening and Sunday matinee performances and including a dozen two-a-day reserved engagements.

All large circuits, including Warner, RKO, National Theatres (Fox West Coast), Loew's and a majority of the Paramount units, have contracted for "Gone With the Wind."

No deal has been made with the Saenger circuit in the South, although extended negotiations were conducted. Another Paramount affiliate, Balaban & Katz, failed to make a deal for the film in Chicago but has indicated it will book "Gone With the Wind" for subsequent runs in that city. Great States Circuit, an affiliate of Balaban & Katz, as well as Paramount, has booked the film for Illinois and Indiana.

Deals also have been made with Wilby and Kincey, Interstate, Sparks circuit and other Paramount partners.

MGM has arranged a deal with Famous Players Canadian Corporation for "Wind" dates in the Dominion. The first opening is scheduled for Loew's Montreal on February 16th.

350 Prints Received

MGM has received the full order of 350 prints for domestic distribution and all will be in the branches by tomorrow. The prints, in color, cost $1,100 each. Specially constructed shipping cases are used to prevent damage in transit.

A special department has been set up at the home office to handle "Gone With the Wind" contracts and box-office statements and act as liaison on these matters with Selznick International. The department is headed by Douglas Peck, formerly New York office manager, who will work with the division sales managers and their assistants.

"Wind" continues to make records all over the country, according to the distributor, with every all-time house record broken in each of the two dozen new key spots where it opened one week ago. In some theatres the Selznick production grossed four to five times normal business.

at the Hillstreet theatre in Los Angeles. The Disney production opens at the Sheridan theatre in Miami Beach on February 22nd and then follows in the Paramount, Miami; and at the Cinema Casine, Miami Beach, and then in other houses of the Lynch-Publix circuit.

"Young Tom Edison" Opening

With Mickey Rooney, top money making star, in the title role, MGM's "Young Tom Edison' opens Saturday at three theatres in Port Huron, Michigan, the boyhood home of the great inventor. The company is now making another picture continuing the same theme, "Edison the Man," starring Spencer Tracy.

Mickey Rooney will be guest of honor at the opening and make personal appearances. He also is to take part in the specially chartered run of Henry Ford's "Edison train" from Detroit to Port Huron earlier in the day. Among those who will make the trip are Louis B. Mayer, Edsel Ford, Governor Luren Dickinson of Michigan, other governors and mayors and other civic and industrial figures.

Message from Edison's Son

The special train will be met by local citizens dressed in the costumes of the Fifties and Sixties. At a luncheon, a message will be received from Charles Edison, secretary of the Navy and son of the inventor, over the telegraphic apparatus used by Edison as a boy of fifteen. Secretary Edison will be attending a lunch of the Edison Pioneers at the Astor Hotel in New York.

Two showings of "Young Tom Edison" will start at 7:00 P. M. at the Family and Majestic theatres. A later performance is to begin at the Desmond theatre at 8:00 P. M. with Ted Fio Rito and his band providing a supplementary stage attraction. The evening's celebrations will end in a grand ball at which Mickey Rooney will be present.

Others who are to attend the premiere in Port Huron are Mrs. Minna M. Edison Hughes, widow of Thomas A. Edison; Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario; Norman Taurog and John Considine, Jr., director and producer; Alfred O. Tate, representing the Edison Pioneers of New York; William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager; Edward M. Saunders, Western division manager; Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director; Howard Strickling, studio publicity director; William R. Ferguson, exploitation manager, and Les Petersen of the studio.

Mayer Guest in Detroit

Louis B. Mayer, in charge of MGM production, will be guest of honor at a civic luncheon at The Book-Cadillac hotel in Detroit Friday in connection with the opening of "Young Tom Edison" in Port Huron. Mr. Mayer arrived Thursday when the "Edison Days" celebration began.

Film critics from Chicago, Detroit and other cities will be brought to Port Huron for the opening and other features of the celebration.

Barrett Kiesling is in Detroit and Port Huron arranging details for the premiere. He is assisted by Bill Bishop of the Chicago office and Warren Slee of the Detroit MGM branch.

Two Other RKO Openings

The opening of RKO's "Swiss Family Robinson" at the Music Hall on Thursday was to be attended by Dr. Alfredo Wyss, great-great nephew of Johann David Wyss, author of the famous adventure story. A reception was also scheduled for the Swiss leaders of New York.

The following accepted invitations to attend: Dr. Victor Nef, Swiss consul-general; Egbert de Graffenried, Swiss vice-consul; Albert Hoenener, president of the North American Swiss Alliance; F. X. Amrein, editor of Amerikanische Schweizer Zeitung; Fred Eidenbenz, editor of Schweizer; Fred Doseenbach, Eric Von der Gold, Professor E. Howald of St. John College; A. Gogniat, Werner Kern and Albert Daug.

UA SALESMEN SET PERFECT RECORDS

Four United Artists salesmen, having sold every one of their possible accounts for the new season, are now lending a hand to other salesmen in their respective exchanges who have accounts still unclosed, according to word received at the home office this week from Jack Goldhar, midwest division manager, and Ben Fish, far western division manager.

The salesmen with the perfect season's records are Edward Ashkins and Ray Wylie of the St. Louis exchange, Joseph Solomon, Salt Lake City, and Al Hoffman of the Denver exchange.

Terry Kilburn, featured in the cast, and Gene Towne, co-producer with Graham Baker, also attended.

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will have its Radio City Music Hall opening early in March.

Lauded on Floor of Congress

Praise was given the picture from the floor of Congress, when Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma, spoke in the House on January 29th on "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

The Warner circuit in Philadelphia and RKO settled differences over the exhibition of "Lincoln" this week, when it was agreed that the picture would play at popular prices, rather than be roadshown by RKO.

Theatres Report Gross on 'Wind'

Astor theatres again was over $100,000. The Philadelphia gross at the Boyd and Earle theatres was $76,000, while the Carthay and United Artists theatres in Los Angeles took in $50,000. For the first week in Chicago the film took in $16,000 at the Woods and $48,000 at the Oriental. The gross for the first complete week in Detroit was $23,000 at the Wilson and $36,000 at the United Artists.

Other theatre reports from first week situations, according to MGM, are as follows: Palace, Albany, $42,800; Century, Baltimore, $44,900; Great Lakes, Buffalo, $41,000; Stillman, Cleveland, $34,000; Orpheum, Denver, $36,000; Paramount, Des Moines, $23,000; Loew's, Indianapolis, $36,600; Loew's Midland, Kansas City, $41,500; State, Memphis, $34,000; Palace, Milwaukee, $35,000; College, New Haven, $23,000; State, New Orleans, $38,800; Midwest, Oklahoma City, $23,200; Paramount, Omaha, $23,700; Warner Pittsburgh, $32,300; Broadway, Portland, Ore., $26,600; State, Providence, $47,000; Loew's, Rochester, $41,400; Loew's, St. Louis, $47,900; Warfield, San Francisco, $37,500; 5th Avenue, Seattle, $32,000; Yonge Street, Toronto, $26,800; Palace, Washington, D. C., $38,100; Century, Baltimore $44,900.

With announcement over the weekend of 51 additional engagements, total bookings thus far scheduled for the film are 300 in 279 cities.

In 48 of the new situations the picture will be shown twice daily on a reserved seat basis.

The bookings are: February 8, California, Santa Barbara, Cal. (following an engagement at the Granada); February 11, Rialto, El Dorado, Ark.; February 15, Warner, Aberdeen, Wash.; February 16, Texas, San Angelo, Tex.; Ritz, Big Springs, Tex.; Roxy, Lock Haven, Pa.; Sherman, Stroudsburg, Pa.; February 23, State, Nanticoke, Pa.; Comerford, Carlisle, Pa.; Weller, Zanesville, O.; State, Nashua, N. H.; Park, Hanover, Pa.; February 24, Palace, Marion, O.; February 25, Ritz, Muskogee, Okla.; Ritz, Corpus Christie, Texas; February 26, Carolina, Wilmington, N. C.; Carolina, Greenville, S. C.; Carolina, Spartansburg, S. C.; Capitol, Danville, Va.; February 29, Nile, Bakersfield, Cal. (following an engagement at the Fox); Maryland, Cumberland, Md.;

March 1, Paramount, Freemont, O.; Midland, Newark, O.; Beckley, Beckley, O.; Colonial, Bluefield, Va.; March 2, Union, New Philadelphia, O.; Ohio, Marietta, O.; March 3, Ceramic, E. Liverpool, O.; March 4, Center, High Point, N. C.; Wilson, Wilson, N .C.; Center, Rocky Mount, N. C.; March 9, Palace, Ashtabula, O.; State, Findlay, O.; Columbia, Alliance, O.; March 10, Rialto, Hamilton, O.; Peoples, Roanoke Rapids, N. C.; March 23, Ohio, Lorain, O.; Rivoli, Elyria, O.; Xenia, Xenia, O.; Murphy, Wilmington, O.; Logan, Logan, O.; State, Greenville, O.

In the following three situations, "Gone With the Wind" will be shown three times daily with only the evening performances reserved: February 18, Rivoli, La Crosse, Wis.; Feb. 20, Ute, Colorado Springs, Col.; February 26, Webb, Gastonia, N. C.

Although RKO in Cincinnati last week advertised that this would positively be the last week of "Gone With the Wind" at the Capitol, the picture will be continued indefinitely, due to a sudden increase in business.

Members of two Columbus chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, University Club members and members of an Ohio State University fraternity attended the opening of "Wind" at the Loew's Broad in Columbus, Friday night, attired in costumes of the era depicted in the film. Mayor Floyd F. Green and others attended.

The Ritz theatre in downtown Pittsburgh has been converted to a first-run by Warner theatres for the duration of the "Gone With the Wind" run at the Warner theatre. The Ritz will play holdovers from the Loew's Penn and the Stanley theatres and pictures that would play first runs at the Warner. The Ritz seats 900 and recently was remodeled.

Manila Film Act Vetoed by Mayor

A resolution requiring Manila theatres to show at least one domestically-produced film a month which was passed by the city council has been vetoed by Mayor Eulogio Rodriquez.

The measure was modeled after the Mexican decree, which recently gave concern to both distributors and exhibitors there. Philippine studios are now turning out from 50 to 60 pictures of varying lengths annually.

The veto has lessened the pessimism in film circles in Manila although both importers and exhibitors have not fully recovered from the added burden placed upon them by enactment of tax laws in the last several months, including new admission taxes and levies on footage brought in from foreign countries. There is also a current ban on so-called gangster films.

Seeks Deal for Japan with U.S.

A reciprocal trade agreement between American and Japanese film industries calling for exchange of talent and technicians, as well as distribution in the United States of Japanese made films, is the plan of Nipponese producers, according to Morten E. Feiler, Beverly Hills, Cal., attorney, who recently returned from a three months' stay in Japan. He plans to start negotiations with American film executives on the inter-industry proposal shortly, as a representative of Japanese producers.

Mr. Feiler said that under the plan he hopes to bring about an exchange of talent, the production of some American pictures in Japan and distribution of Japanese produced footage in the United States as parts of a program for the fostering of good will.

Despite the war with China, places of amusement are doing good business, Mr. Feiler observed.

In furtherance of his plan, Mr. Feiler averred, one Japanese producer authorized him to seek the services of an American director and technical crew, as well as two American stars, to make a picture in Japan, using Japanese facilities.

Japanese domestic production is split between two cities, the "modern" films being made in Tokyo studios and "classical" at Kioto, center of culture.

Stage Ticket Plan Offered in Suburb

Four plans to make Broadway theatre going easier for New York suburban stage audiences were to be presented to Bronxville, Westchester County, residents at a meeting before the weekend at the Bronxville Public School.

They are a subscription plan, a deposit of $5 which would permit telephone reservations with tickets to be picked up at curtain time, a $5 coupon book which would permit reservations up to 24 hours before the performance, or a plan for mail or telephone reservations with tickets to be picked up 48 hours before the performance.

Brock Pemberton, Elliott Nugent and Adie Williams will address the meeting, and the audience will be invited to present additional plans. The meeting is the first step in a series of moves by the American Theatre Council, Actors Equity and the League of New York Theatres to interest new audiences in the legitimate theatre. A preliminary budget of $2,500 has been set aside for this work.

Quick action in the New York legislature at Albany resulted in advancement of the Mitchell theatre ticket selling and reselling bill to final order in the Assembly this week. It is due for debate and probable passage later in the week. The bill provides that no more than 75 cents can be charged above the printed admission price in the resale of theatre tickets.

SEE COMPLETE LOSS OF JAPANESE MARKET

The complete loss of the Japanese market to American films is seen by industry foreign trade authorities as a possible aftermath of the ending last Friday of the United States-Japanese trade treaty. It is believed a situation, not unlike that in Italy, may arise if anti-American sentiment increases as a result of the lapsing of the treaty.

Current regulations already are proving onerous to the American distributors and several have expressed doubts as to their ability to continue to operate under them for long if concessions were not forthcoming from Japan.

Pittsburgh Club Gets Benefit Share

The Pittsburgh Variety Club, Tent No. 1, earned $4,548.97 as its share of the opening night's proceeds for the "Ice Follies of 1940," which was held Christmas Day in The Gardens, an official accounting revealed this week.

Chief Barker C. J. Latta has announced the first annual Variety Club Movie Ball to be held in Pittsburgh April 7th. Commander Harry Kalmine of the Variety Legion Post has been appointed one of Pennsylvania's two members of the National District Guest Committee for the Legion.

At the installation of Harry Schreiber this week as chief barker of the Cincinnati Variety Club, the retiring chief barker, W. C. Pullin, presented the new head with a gold key to the club.

Plans are being formulated in St. Louis by the Variety Club for a benefit show at the Municipal Auditorium at the end of February to obtain funds for pneumonia serum for the city hospitals.

The Detroit Variety Club held its first Bingo party of the year Saturday in its club rooms with Charles W. Snyder, film censor, who is the new entertainment chairman, in charge.

Freeman Elected Producers' Head

Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president of Paramount in charge of studio operations, was elected president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers at the annual meeting in Hollywood Monday. He succeeds Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, who has been president for the past two years.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, addressed the meeting. The Neely Bill, studio labor and foreign situations were understood to have been highlights of Mr. Hays' remarks.

Other officers elected were E. J. Mannix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, first vice-president; Cliff Work, Universal, second vice-president; and Fred W. Beetson, reelected executive vice-president. Mr. Mannix succeeds Jack L. Warner who asked to be relieved of duties because of studio work.

The board of directors, composed of Harry Warner, Samuel Goldwyn, Hal Roach, Walter Wanger, Mr. Mannix, Mr. Freman, Mr. Schenck, Mr. Work, J. R. McDonough and Jack Warner, remains unchanged with the exception of the addition of James Roosevelt.

After a visitor at his hidden Valley (Cal.) ranch, Mr. Hays will return to New York to preside at the annual MPPOA meeting March 13th.

Loew's 12 Week Net $1,393,456

Loew's, Inc., for the 12 weeks ended November 23rd last, reports a net profit of $1,393,456 as against $2,979,943 for the same period in 1938. The earnings are equivalent to $10.19 on the preferred and 71 cents on the average common stock. A year ago, the preferred paid $21.90, the common $1.74 for the 12 weeks.

In both years, $500,000 was set aside as reserve for contingencies. The statement follows:

Films Credited

A rise of 600,000 in the circulation of books in Chicago libraries is credited to films, in the annual report of Librarian Carl Rode. Motion pictures based on books brought a heavy demand for copies, and, in addition, libraries co-operated with film companies in display material.

Broadway Melody of 1940

(MGM)

Musical Treat

Hollywood waited a long time, too long, before turning out a musical such as this latest and by all standards best of the "Broadway Melody" series, a top caliber attraction of that rare type which is a boon to box offices, large and small.

The talents of the nimble footed Fred Astaire never have been seen to better advantage. Bobby Connelly's dances provide a range which is taken advantage of to the fullest by Eleanor Powell and her co-star. The supporting cast of George Murphy, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Florence Rice and Lynne Carver add considerable to the vehicle's strength, with especial reference to the dancing of Mr. Murphy and the frenzied enthusiasms of Mr. Morgan, as a theatrical impresario.

Jack Cummings, producer, has drawn on his experience with such other films of the musical type as "Broadway Melody of 1938," "Born to Dance" and "Honolulu," and created settings and effects for the dances of his principals which are elaborate without ever becoming topheavy, while mounting the whole picture exceptionally handsomely. Norman Taurog, director, has kept the story flowing smoothly, never forgetting that here the action is expressed in taps and rhythm, as principal components.

From an original story by Jack McGowan and Dore Schary, a screen play has been worked out by Leon Gordon and George Oppenheimer which fits harmoniously into the dancing scheme of things without straining itself or audience credulity. A mixup provides opportunity for the dancer portrayed by Mr. Murphy to co-star in a Broadway show, whereas it had been the dancing and the dance routines of his partner, enacted by Astaire, which first had attracted notice. The mixup and the resultant romance are straightened out, but not before some of the most eye-filling and fast-moving of dance numbers have been enacted.

Highlights include a solo dance by Astaire, done in a mocking vein, the "Pierrot and Pierrette" number danced by him and Miss Powell, and their version of "Begin the Beguine" danced on a huge mirrored set. As was "Begin the Beguine," the other songs were composed by Cole Porter, and include "Please Don't Monkey with Broadway," "Between You and Me," "I've Got My Eyes on You" and "I Concentrate on You," all of which should prove contenders for the popularity already registered by the first named. All of the numbers are to be made subjects of a national exploitation campaign.

Far from being an episodic affair dragging between dance numbers, the picture contains numerous sequences of by-play and comedy which provide a constant tempo in keeping with the dances themselves, such as the excellence of the juggling portions enacted by young Trixie Firschke, or the recurring difficulties of Mr. Morgan in getting back the ermine coat lent to various feminine companions.

Herewith, then, a picture which is all entertainment and has every earmark of being all box office.

Previewed at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood, where, as a whole and in individual sequences, it was received with enthusiasm and applause.—WALTER SELDEN.

Little Old New York

Historical Highlight

Henry King, the director, Raymond Griffith, associate producer, and Harry Tugend, screen playwright, working from a story by John Balderston based on the play by Rida Johnson Young, and the entire cast of "Little Old New York," have created a motion picture which is a memorable addition to the type of large canvased films with which Darryl F. Zanuck has come to the aid of many an ailing box office.

Essentially the same story as the "Little Old New York" starring Marion Davies in 1923, also based on the Rida Johnson Young stage play, this portrayal of life in New York in 1807 emphasizes the final success of Robert Fulton's "Clermont," first steamboat to operate successfully, where the earlier film had emphasized the role of its star, masquerading as a boy to gain a fortune.

Alice Faye is seen as "Pat O'Day," keeper of a waterfront tavern to which comes young Robert Fulton, interpreted by Richard Greene, intent on building a hull for his new steam engine. A series of interruptions and reverses, caused by financial troubles, a rival boat builder and an embargo declared by President Jefferson, delay but do not prevent fulfillment of the enterprise.

In addition to Miss Faye, the cast has the names of Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, who portrays Fulton, Brenda Joyce, Andy Devine and Henry Stephenson to further the telling of a story which constitutes highly merchandisable screen fare.

Vigil in the Night

(RKO Radio)

Hospital Drama

This dramatization of an A. J. Cronin novel is identical in every important respect save story thread with the film made from the same author's "The Citadel." Like that widely acclaimed production, it is at bottom a sincere and purposeful exposition of deficiencies of the English hospital system. Like that picture it is a frank, unrelenting exploration of inadequate financing, venal mismanagement, perfidious behavior in the executive quarters and other causes resultant in unnecessary loss of life. It is a scorching protest, uttered in the dramatic form, grim from start to finish and often violently realistic. It makes its point powerfully.

The producer-director, George Stevens, striking a tragic note in the opening sequence, wherein a nurse's carelessness permits a child to die, has sustained that pitch throughout, directing his players with a sure hand, keeping his tragic story moving remorselessly forward. Fred Guiol, P. J. Wolfson and Rowland Leigh provided a straight-line screen play delivering inevitable dire consequence in the wake of lamentable cause with impressively deadly regularity. These men of films have taken Dr. Cronin's indictment of a system at its full face value and translated it with fidelity into the far fiercer language of the motion picture.

"Vigil in the Night" is splendidly produced and inescapably effective as a document. It is not in any way a pleasant picture, nor is it intended to be. Because of the seriousness of its objective, its candor and its subject matter, it comes directly under the heading of adult entertainment.

Carole Lombard gives a commanding portrayal of the austerely fervent nurse who shelters her sister and struggles on to exemplify the ideals of her profession. Brian Aherne is splendid as the courageous doctor fighting for improvement of hospitalization standards. Anne Shirley is excellent as the weak sister, Julien Mitchell as the miserly chairman of the hospital committee and Ethel Griffies as a dour but diligent matron of nurses.

Previewed at the Filmarte Theatre, Hollywood, to an audience entirely from press and professions, which accorded the film rapt attention.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

My Little Chickadee

(Universal)

Comedy Western

This blandly frivolous blending of the completely congenial Mae West and W. C. Fields talents is an entertainment item of comedic consequence. Brandishing their carefully uncultured humor singly, dually, and sometimes in concert with tribes of Indians, throngs of townsfolk, the stars divide the footage and the laughs about evenly, jostle the proprieties playfully now and again, but refrain from violating them. The film stacks up as uniquely and unstintingly amusing stuff, hilarious in spots and roughly subtle in others, but always amusing.

The screen play in which they collaborated offers Miss West as a rakishly fascinating and wholly unpredictable belle of the Old West, run out of her home town because of a suspected escape from a masked bandit kidnaper and compelled to acquire a husband before she can settle down in another. It presents Fields as a glib, bibulous and raffish person of similarly undocumented past whom she pretends to marry but doesn't quite. Following loosely the outlines of several staple western plots, the story provided plentiful incidental situations for free exercise of the West and Field varieties of humor, a traditionally melodramatic ending leaving all the moral equations answered and the several characters reasonably well extenuated, including the bandit.

Like the previous pictures of both stars, this one is episodic and no more tightly routined than a West or Fields picture should be. Resort is had to slapstick, to anachronism, to all the useful, unorthodox but expeditious comedy devices in which these stars are expert. The producer, Lester Cowan, and the director, Edward F. Cline, have proceeded with altogether showmanly wisdom to turn out a film designed solely for the purpose of presenting their stars in the way the customers have learned to expect to have them presented. The result is a picture that lives up to its billing far more literally than most that come off the Hollywood production line.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, to an audience that laughed at some sequences so loudly and long as to drown out whole sections of dialogue, toned down to a passive acceptance at times, and then rebounded, finishing on a note of general satisfaction.—W. R. W.

Charlie Chan in Panama

Spy Melodrama

This latest episode in the adventures of "Charlie Chan" is done in the best tradition of the Sol M. Wurtzel style, a maximum of entertainment with a minimum of extraneous matter. "Charlie Chan in Panama" presents the famed Earl Derr Biggers character first in a disguise as a vender of hats in Panama, intent upon finding the saboteurs attempting to blow up the locks of the Canal while the United States fleet is passing through, and then as himself, in the role of the adage-quoting detective.

Sidney Toler again plays "Chan," with Sen Yung as his son, "Len Yung," supplying most of the comedy. Others in the cast are Jean Rogers, Lionel Atwill, Mary Nash, Kane Richmond, Chris-Pin Martin, Lionel Royce, Helen Ericson, Jack La Rue, Edwin Stanley, Don Douglas, Frank Puglia, Addison Richards and Edward Keane.

The original screenplay, which emphasizes suspense, was written by John Larkin and Lester Ziffren. Norman Foster did a capable job of direction.

"Chan," his disguise ruined by an outburst of his son, tracks down the saboteurs, and by the ruse of getting all suspects together in the power plant which is to be bombed, forces the master criminal to reveal himself.

Previewed at the Fox Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles, to a heterogeneous audience which gave every indication of enjoying the offering thoroughly.—V. K.

Produced and distributed by 20th Century-Fox. Executive producer, Sol M. Wurtzel. Directed by Norman Foster. Original screenplay by John Larkin and Lester Ziffren. Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet

(Warner)

Biography

This is a fine filmic biography of Dr. Paul Ehrlich, discoverer of 606, the specific for treatment of syphilis. It is from the directorial hand of William Dieterle, acclaimed for his presentation of the generically kindred "Pasteur" and "Zola," and resembles these films more than any others in production method and manner. It presents Edward G. Robinson in the title character, an assignment discharged with distinction, and a long roster of picked players in powerful support.

The life of Dr. Ehrlich was an eventful one, rich in human values, sternly dramatic. The screen play by John Huston, Heinz Herald and Norman Burnside deals fully with the final 35 years of it, 1880 to 1915, providing a rounded and documented portrait of the scientist in the course of his earlier triumphs and travails as well as in his ultimate success in quest of a cure for syphilis and his subsequent defense of it.

Produced in the Hal Wallis tradition, with Wolfgang Rheinhold as associate producer, the picture is authentic in its handling of the many clinical subjects concerned, markedly painstaking in the interests of scientific accuracy, professionally candid in dialogue references to syphilis, tuberculosis and other diseases pertained to by the story. Laboratory and hospital practices, often misrepresented on the screen, are depicted here with manifest fidelity to source information obtained by careful research.

The subject is, of course, grim, for neither syphilis nor the other two diseases principally dealt with, tuberculosis and diphtheria, are pleasing topics. "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" is not to be contemplated, therefore, as amusement—an error into which the title, unexplained, might lead the uninformed or the young—but rather entertainment in the serious, studious sense of the term as applied to earnest, important biographies and similar factual works.

Sidewalks of London

(Paramount)

Early "Scarlett O'Hara"

Some Paramount crystal gazer must have had an uncanny insight message to keep this British production of almost two years vintage on ice until the appearance of "Gone with the Wind." The inconsequential London drama of a pair of sidewalk entertainers has become first page screen exploitation news because of the real life Cinderella story of its leading woman, Vivien Leigh, known so widely now for her "Scarlett O'Hara."

"Sidewalks of London" originally was labeled "St. Martin's Lane" and it was under this title that Aubrey Flanagan, in his review from London in MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of July 9, 1938, noted that the feminine lead playing opposite Charles Laughton was "a young lady who looks and behaves attractively but whose Cockney characterization will not deceive the Cockney."

The plot is rather slight, a bit drawn out and on the side of improbability. The acting is the thing in this case, with a natural tendency to try to discern indications then of Miss Leigh's talents for playing her famous Civil War belle. In the role of "Libby," street gamin, she manifests early traces of "Scarlett" in the flash of an eye, a flip of her head. The characters, too, have a bit of parallel in that "Libby" is more intent on fame than on morality. Befriended by "Charles" and given a part in his sidewalk entertainment act, she makes the most of her opportunity, becomes the toast of Piccadilly, and forgets her "Limy" benefactor, until the last reel.

Louise

(Mayer-Burstyn)

French Opera

Grace Moore and Deems Taylor are the American names that figure in the French production from the opera "Louise." Miss Moore is the singing star, and Mr. Taylor, the eminent commentator on matters musical explains in a foreword that "'Louise' is not 'grand opera' dealing with the ways of upholstered kings and queens," but "the simple story of the simple people of yesterday, today and tomorrow, now retold in terms of their favorite medium, the screen." Its larger appeal will be to persons familiar with opera.

The best known arias of the opera are presented in a play adapted by Gustave Charpentier, with the orchestra and chorus of the Grands Concerts Symphoniques.

Seen at the premiere showing in the cozy Little Carnegie Playhouse in New York City, where a dressy first night audience applauded the credit listings. Miss Moore had sung the title role at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York the night before.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

The Lone Wolf Strikes

Melodrama

The best known fictional character of the late Louis Joseph Vance, "The Lone Wolf," is once again in circulation. The gentlemanly crook, who is as hardy a perennial as the screen has known since the first of the films dealing in his exploits appeared in 1917, has been revived from a self-inflicted retirement as an amateur ichthyologist—fish fancier. A string of purloined pearls causes the "Lone Wolf" to ride again, and before the proceedings are over a couple of murders are committed.

Warren William portrays the smooth "Michael Lanyard" or "Lone Wolf," a role he has essayed before. Eric Blore plays his valet and right hand man. Joan Perry is the girl and the opposition includes Alan Baxter, Astrid Allwyn, Montagu Love and Robert Wilcox. Sidney Salkow directed from a screen play by Harry Segall and Albert Duffy.

The plot is not complex and the story moves along at a fairly even and rapid pace. For a mystery there is probably too little suspense and too much comedy, but that is a trend of the day.

"Lanyard" is fidgeting about his private aquarium when "Stanley Young" arrives to enlist the "Lone Wolf's" aid in recapturing a string of pearls and discovering who murdered "Philip Jordan," owner of the pearls and friend of "Young." "Lanyard" is hampered in his quest by the misguided help of "Delia," daughter of "Jordan" but gets the pearls and turns them over to "Young." "Young" is murdered and the pearls are stolen again and the chase continues. The fight ends on a New York ferry boat with the "Lone Wolf" in control.

Community Sing No. 5

(Columbia)

Gypsy Songs

The fifth of the "Community Sing" series brings to the screen, with titles, a group of old gypsy airs sung by Donald Grayson and a troupe of balalaika singers. "Two Guitars," "The Gay Merchant," "Dark Eyes" and "The Volga Boatman" are presented, winding up with "Abul Abulbul Amir."—Running time, 10 minutes.

Old Natchez

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Southern Nostalgia

The globe-trotting James A. FitzPatrick has turned to America for his most recent travelogues. The Old South is kept alive in Natchez, Miss., where once a year the Garden Club holds a brilliant pageant. It is this pageant that the FitzPatrick cameras have recorded in color, living tableau of persons garbed in the crinolines, pantalettes and whatnots of the pre-Civil War days, happily engaged in re-living what has passed into history.—Running time, nine minutes.

Africa Squeaks

A Looney "Looney Tune"

This time porcine Porky is a leader of a safari into the darkest regions of the Black Continent. Particularly productive of funny bone tickling in the spoofing of the Stanley search for Dr. Livingstone. There are additional sights of the strange behavior of animals and natives. In fact, the whole fun and frivolity piece is good.—Running time, seven minutes.

Following the Hounds

20th Century Fox Hunt

Excellent color photography by Jack Painter makes this subject one of the best of the season. Following days of patient waiting for good weather conditions Mr. Painter took his camera and made a thorough study of the training of horses used in fox hunting, from the first steps in overcoming obstacles in the field until the horse is ready for his test at a real hunt. Background and scenery and the graceful riding combine to make an outstanding subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Teddy the Rough Rider

Or Roosevelt the First

Slices from the robust political career of President Roosevelt, the First, are compiled into a dramatic and patriotically inspiring chapter for Vitaphone's series of great men and moments of American history. Teddy and his "big stick" are first met in the year 1895, in the office of Commissioner of Police for New York City. Then in rapid succession he is pictured as assistant secretary of the navy, leader of the Rough Riders, governor of New York and vice-president of the United States. The climax comes with Roosevelt's succession to the office of the Presidency upon the assassination of President McKinley. Sidney Blackmer, who had played Roosevelt in 1937 in "This Is My Affair," again tackles the picturesque personage of rough riding Teddy.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Vacation Diary

(RKO Pathe)

A Trip to Bermuda

"Vacation Diary" combines the documentary and travelogue styles of camera reporting in recording the day to day experience of two office girls on a winter vacation trip to Bermuda. Starting with that day in the office when the two girls pore over travel brochures the camera follows them in their packing, the boat trip, the arrival in Hamilton, their meeting with two young men on the beach, bicycling excursions, dancing and a sailboat ride by moonlight. It is an interesting subject highlighted by excellent camera work. The girls are Elizabeth Rice and Patricia Murray. Frederic Ullman, Jr., produced and Frank Donovan supervised the subject.—Running time, nine minutes.

Fashion Forecasts, No. 6

Feminine Fashions

The sixth of Vyvyan Donner's "Fashion Forecasts" brings a timely and zestful pictorial of the latest in feminine styles at the more swanky resorts. Sports and lounging apparel as well as styles for evening are modeled, and by beauties. Humorous off-screen commentary by Ilka Chase and color photography by Jack Painter make this an appealing subject, especially for women. —Running time, 10 minutes.

The Heckler

Charley Chase Comedy

Bespeckled Charley Chase here plays an amateur heckler at sporting events. When two professional gamblers see how his tactics decide the results of a baseball game they take Charley into their employ. That night at the hotel the baseball team doses Charley with ice and the dreaded sore throat results. Charley suffers a worse fate at the hands of the gamblers.—Running time, 17½ minutes.

The Threads of a Nation

Cotton

Columbia has made a thorough study of the uses of cotton, and how it is manufactured, in "The Threads of a Nation." Starting with Eli Whitney's invention of the cotton gin, the producers trace the various stages the cotton passes through to become cloth. Narrated by Basil Ruysdael, the subject is interesting and educational.—Running time, 10½ minutes.

MORE LABOR, THEATRE GROUPS HIT NEELY BILL; TWO VOICE APPROVAL

Cooperative Buyers in Michigan and Oregon Independents Attack Measure; Ohio Churchmen, Dr. Wilbur For It

The fight over the Neely anti-block booking (S. 280) rode merrily along this week, with both sides looking to the outside and inside of motion pictures for support.

Lining up this week with opponents of the bill were the Screen Writers Guild, first Hollywood talent group to come out with a stand in this Congressional session's contest; two more exhibitor groups, Cooperative Theatres, an independent buying circuit in Michigan, and independent owners in Oregon; labor groups in New York and New Jersey; Philadelphia's Motion Picture Forum.

Arraying themselves with proponents were Ohio churchmen and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, California educator, who, as president of the Motion Picture Research Council, reiterated the stand of one of the strongest "outside" groups to lend support to Allied States Association for passage of the measure.

Screen Writers Voting on Bill

The Screen Writers Guild took action this week to oppose the Neely Bill, following a debate before it by George J. Shaefer, president of RKO, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of the board of Allied States Association. A special committee unanimously adopted a resolution urging members to oppose the Neely Bill.

The directors of the Guild, on Monday, authorized the mailing of questionnaires to all members. Three questions were asked: "Do you oppose the Neely Bill because of censorship?"; "If you oppose the Neely Bill, do you think we should take a stand against monopoly practice?"; "Shall the Screen Writers Guild take any stand at all?"

In the debate held last Monday Mr. Schaefer pointed out the threat of government regulation contained in the bill and declared that the bill constitutes an attempt to impose an impossible and uncertain price regulation upon distribution. He held that every worthwile picture is shown in 10,000 to 11,000 theatres and challenged those in favor of the bill to show that exhibitors had taken advantage of the 10 per cent cancellation clause to discard pictures they considered of questionable moral content.

Mr. Myers said that the three elements of the bill are the settlement of a clearcut issue of right and wrong, an enlarged opportunity for creative talent and a bowing to the inevitable decentralization movement already underway in the industry.

Committee Named

The Screen Writers Guild appointed the following committee to consider the Neely bill: Ralph Block, chairman; John Howard Lawson, Sidney Buchanan, Dore Schary and Wolfe Kaufman. Three of the members of the special committee are also members of the executive board, and the resolution condemning the Neely bill was considered certain sure of adoption.

In the resolution it was pointed out that though there are many evils in the industry, including block-booking and monopoly, the Neely bill does not offer the proper remedies.

The Screen Publicists Guild, the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors and other organizations indicate that they would take action similar to that of the Screen Writers Guild in connection with the bill.

Michigan Exhibitors Against Bill

The members of the Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan, buying and booking organization representing 100 independent exhibitors, have gone on record opposing the Neely bill. Action was taken by the board of directors and a statement explaining the association's position was made public last week. The Co-operative Theatres of Michigan listed four points on which the stand against the Neely bill was made, in a statement issued by Thomas McGuire, public relations director.

The first point was that the independent would be left worse off than today. "Two, Cooperative Board members, after theoretically applying provisions of the bill to individual setups, felt they had nothing to gain, on the contrary, they felt their investments would be in jeopardy if the act passed. Three, result of enactment would be three to four years delay of action, as the act would not become effective till Spring or Summer next year. . . . Many independents could not survive these years of uncertainty, especially those competing with

Pacific Coast, Connecticut, Ohio Theatre Owners Call Meetings

Trade problems and practices, one of the most important of which is block booking and its relation to the Neely Bill now in Congress, are on the agenda of meetings called by the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, Allied Theatres of Connecticut, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

Trustees of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners were scheduled to meet February 6th and 7th at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles to formulate plans for the first annual convention to be held this Spring. Those scheduled to attend included: L. O. Lukan, William Ripley, Robert White, A. West Johnson, Rotus Harvey, Ben Levin, Hugh Bruen, Jack Y. Berman and Robert Poole, executive secretary.

Allied Theatres of Connecticut will meet Tuesday, February 13th, at the Hotel Garde in New Haven for a special luncheon-meeting which will continue the important industry discussions began last week, and in addition, will inaugurate a new operating setup for the reorganized and augmented unit. Various committees will be appointed and policies will be determined. A. M. Schuman will preside and Frank Lydon, regional vice-president, and other Boston visitors will speak. The recent campaign, headed by E. Thornton Kelly, trebled the membership.

The Connecticut MPTO has called a luncheon-meeting for February 20th at Ceriani's in New Haven. Arthur H. Lockwood will preside. Herman Levy, executive secretary, will deliver a report on the problem of the federal regulation against placing theatre circulars in post office boxes. Exhibitors in the outlying districts are particularly affected by this regulation.

George H. Wilkerson, Jr., has been elected treasurer of the Connecticut MPTO, succeeding his father, George H. Wilkerson, recently deceased. The new officer operates the Wilkinson, at Wallingford.

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has announced that the annual convention will be held in Columbus on February 28th and 29th. The convention was postponed from the regular meeting date in November. Directors were scheduled to meet Tuesday to discuss arrangements. Also a final decision was to be reached on the proposed campaign to combat the "Pot o' Gold" radio giveaway.

Mr. Wood urged exhibitors to determine the amount of net profits on pictures of various companies played in 1939, and forward the result to him on unsigned postcards, which information will be relayed to other exhibitors. In the organization's current service bulletin Mr. Wood outlined the daily percentages of expense to be used in calculating the net figures. He said, "I have found that a vast majority of theatre owners do not really know the final profit and loss on the 'lines' they handled and it seems to me that the time has arrived for all theatre owners to analyze their intake and outgo to know exactly where they stand with respect to their product buying."

CHARGES PROPAGANDA BY INDUSTRY

affiliated theatres, which would be enjoying good business, unmolested by the Neely act."

The fourth point against the Neely bill was that one of the greatest evils today is overseating and good pictures would always go to the big theatres. The difficulty presented by a promoter announcing a big new theatre next door to an existing theatre was pointed out. It was said that the theatre man would either have to buy out the promoter or the theatre after it was built or he would lose top product.

Bill Opposed in Oregon

The Oregon theatre owners of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners went on record in a resolution as unalterably opposed to the Neely bill. The 80 theatre owners and operators from key spots in Oregon and from centers in Washington along the Columbia River expressed the opinion that the enactment of the bill would mean further Governmental regimentation of their industry. They held that if there are any abuses in the film business, they should be corrected by those within the industry, rather than by individuals or groups on the outside who know nothing about the business.

More Against the Measure

The Central Trades and Labor Council of Rochester and the New Jersey Federation of Labor have joined the ranks of the many other labor groups which already have gone on record officially in opposition to the measure.

The action in Rochester was taken at the instigation of the local Theatrical Protective Union. The Council adopted a resolution opposing the bill and asking Congressmen to vote against it. The resolution said the bill "would solve none of the problems of the industry" but would "do great damage to a major American industry."

Louis P. Marciante, president of the New Jersey Federation of Labor, and Newark City Commissioner Murphy have written the New Jersey congressional delegation that "if the bill is enacted it will have a possible devastating effect on the popular American movie industry."

Film Forum Against Bill

The Motion Picture Forum of Philadelphia, a public better-films group, at its last meeting adopted a resolution opposing the passage of the Neely bill.

Pastors Attack Block Booking

The Ohio Pastors' convention, in session at Memorial Hall, Columbus, approved a resolution condemning block booking and blind selling of motion pictures. Pastors also were urged to embrace every opportunity to denounce bank night as "a definite feeder of the gambling mania."

The motion picture committee praised the work of Joseph I. Breen, Production Code administrator, but reported that a study of conditions in the industry revealed that "the preponderance of pictures portray mixed or inverted ethics, over-exciting scenes, the condoning of sex irregularities and glorification of the criminal."

Research Council Continues Fight

The Motion Picture Research Council, one of the most active proponents of the Neely bill, continued to push its fight this week when Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the Council and also head of Stanford University, charged that the industry was using the very same methods of propaganda it attacked in the picture "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." Dr. Wilbur addressed the annual meeting of the Council held in San Francisco. He said that the methods used by the motion picture industry in opposing the Neely block booking bill were "more than irresponsible."

The speaker asked "whether we should leave in the hands of those who stoop to such attacks, the education of our citizens through the medium of motion pictures." Dr. Wilbur also said, "the trade papers report that a campaign is under way for industry employees to secure letters opposing the Neely bill from the tradesmen they patronize, without presenting copies of the bill for study. Paid spokesmen of the industry have spoken before women's clubs and other groups, calling organizations sponsoring the bill 'sore spots on democracy'."

One of the foremost endeavors in the campaign conducted by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America against the Neely bill is to inform everyone within and without the industry of the actual provisions of the bill. Speakers have presented an explanation of the actual bill in order that individuals and organizations may know what the Neely bill really means before they take a stand on the question.

RUN "CLEARANCE SALE" ON FILMS

A "clearance sale of films" was featured recently by the Jensen-VonHerberg circuit's Liberty Theatre, in Seattle, the matinee prices being 10 and 15 cents, instead of 25, and evening prices 25 instead of 40 cents.

The "sale" was announced in newspaper advertisements, explaining that the theatre had several program pictures, not previously run because of extended playing time on big pictures. The advertisements said the program "is not the greatest show in town, but offers big entertainment value for the money."

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, seven were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classication follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "British Intelligence," "El Gairlan" (Spanish), "Marines Fly High," "Northwest Passage," "Overture to Glory," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Village Barn Dance." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Buried Alive," "The Grapes of Wrath," "The Lone Wolf Strikes," "Wolf of New York." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Torture Ship."

Alliance in Deal

Alliance Films Corporation has closed a franchise deal with H. J. Peskay, of the Majestic Distributing Corporation, for release, in the California area, of 12 Alliance features and several shorts.

Musicians and Warner Impasse In Philadelphia

Efforts of the Philadelphia musicians' union, Local No. 77, AFM, to effect a settlement with Warner Brothers' circuit in Philadelphia again reached a standstill after a meeting last Friday, between the union's executive board and circuit officials. Both sides, having given in on many points of dispute, say that a settlement, however, is "very close." Meanwhile, the musicians started a third month of picketing at the downtown Earle and Fox theatres and at five Warner neighborhood houses.

Instead of hiring musicians at theatres when and where needed, as Warners originally hoped to do on the basis of U. S. Attorney Thurman Arnold's recent investigation of anti-trust union activities, it is understood that the circuit again is agreeable to set aside a minimum budget figure for the year's music, regardless of how expended during the year. However, the sum suggested doesn't allow for a pit orchestra at the Fox or Earle in addition to the five neighborhood houses and the union is determined that an orchestra be employed at both downtown houses, regardless of the fact that vaudeville is shown at only one of the theatres.

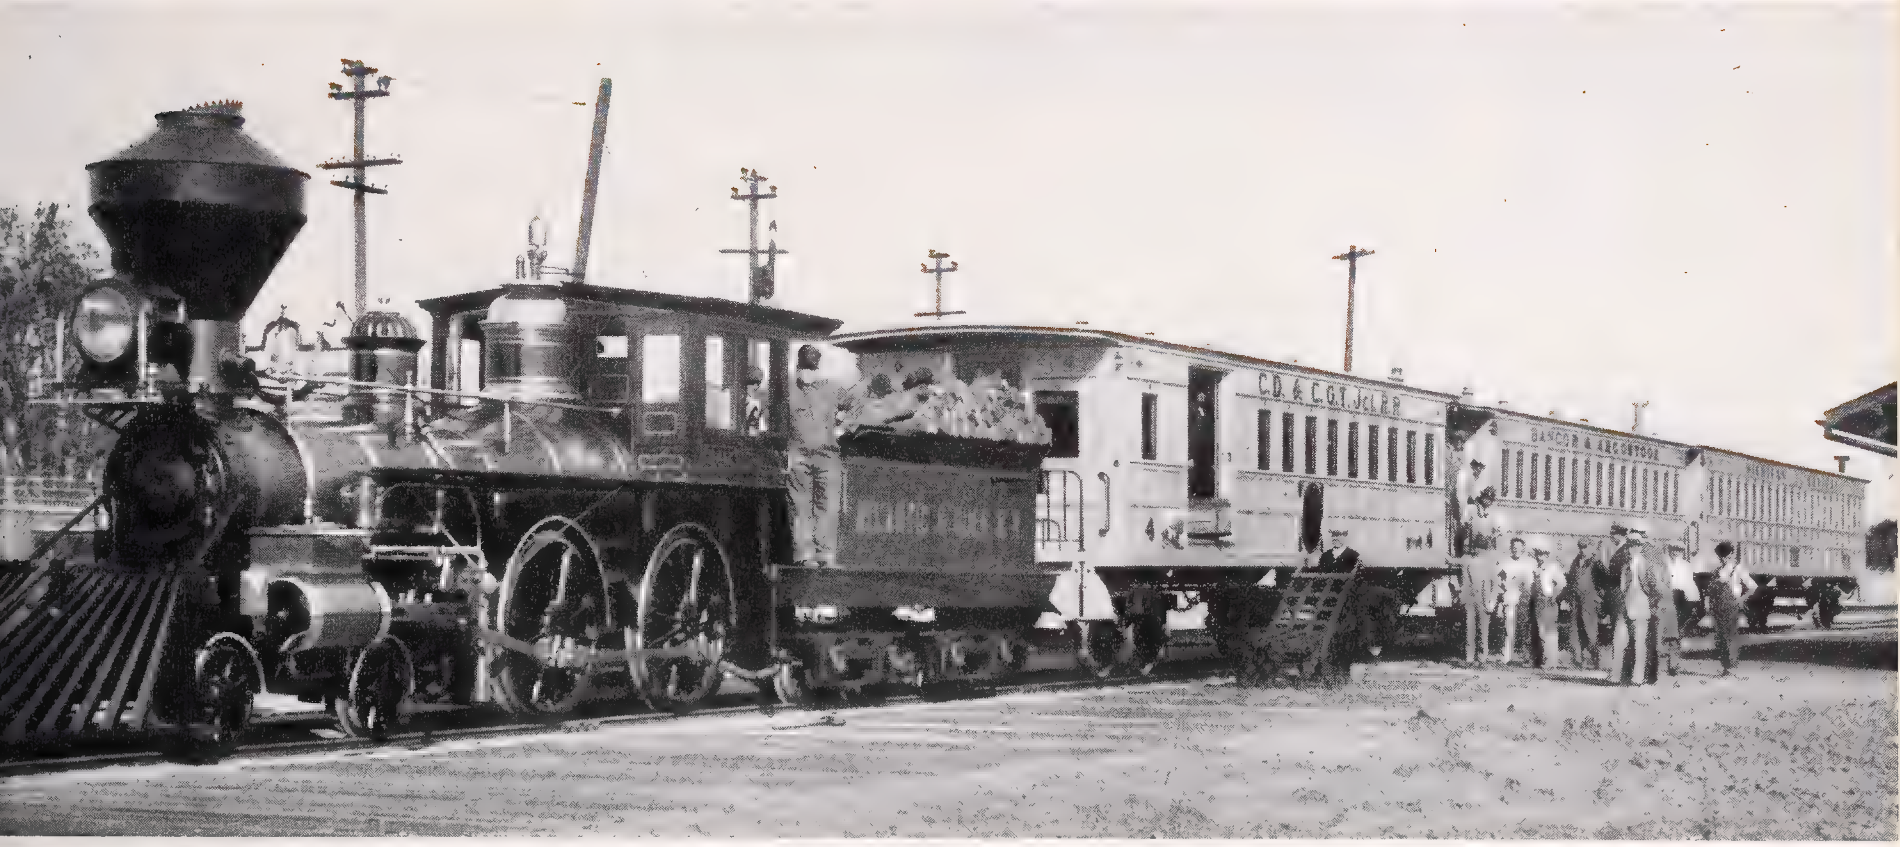
The Earle, which played vaudeville before the impasse, is intended to become a first-run house for Class "A" and special pictures. And if the strike is settled, the stage shows would play at the Fox, which previously used an orchestra only for an overture. "Gone With the Wind" is currently finishing its third week at the Earle, scheduled to remain for three more, and "Grapes of Wrath" has been booked in to follow, which precludes any plans to return vaudeville to the Earle for some time. The Earle seats 4,000 as compared to the Fox's 3,000.

Further, picture business in the downtown area has held up well in the past weeks. And with "Gone With the Wind" playing to capacity at both the Earle and Boyd, total grosses have been hitting new highs. Picketing has not made any impression at the box-office, a local ordinance limiting pickets to one at each theatre.

The local union, determined to come out on top, has been soliciting the aid of the American Federation of Musicians to carry the strike to Warner houses in other parts of the country and even to the Warner studios in California. There is little likelihood, that the Federation will make a national issue of this local impasse, Joseph N. Weber, AFM president, having gone on record that the strike was strictly a local matter. However, the Federation last week did promise financial aid to the local union and already $7,500 has been given out of the national theatre defense fund to take care of local strike benefits.

The union is also picketing the independently-operated Carman theatre, the bone of contention there being that the house wanted to re-employ the pit orchestra for 40 weeks during the year, planning on a straight film policy for the summer months, whereas the union is holding fast to a 52-week play-or-pay contract. There is a general feeling among the union's membership, however, that an arbitrative number of weeks will be reached with the Carman management.

ALL ABOARD!



THE FAMOUS TRAIN ON WHICH THOMAS A. EDISON AS A BOY WORKED AS A "TRAIN BUTCHER" FOR THE GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILROAD . . . Including a restoration of the baggage car young Edison nearly burned down as a result of one of his youthful experiments, the train once again will traverse the route between Detroit and Port Huron on Saturday, February 10, when "Young Tom Edison," first of two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures dramatizing the life of the celebrated inventor, will have its preview in Port Huron, where Edison passed his childhood. The train is now owned by Henry Ford.

Mickey Rooney, who portrays Edison as a boy in "Young Tom Edison," will make the trip in his film character and will act as "train butcher" for Edsel Ford, Governor Luren D. Dickinson of Michigan and many other dignitaries of the political and business world who will also be aboard the train. On their arrival in Port Huron, they will participate in a mammoth Edison Day celebration. Men and women of the city will wear costumes of the 1850 period as part of the celebration. Continuing the story of the great inventor, Spencer Tracy will be seen as "Edison the Man" in the M-G-M picture of that title now in production at the Culver City studios.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER is engaged in filming the life of Thomas A. Edison. The project has fallen naturally into two divisions and accordingly two important productions are on their way. The first dealing with the youth of the great inventor, entitled "YOUNG TOM EDISON", a complete narrative in itself which shows episodes in the life of a boy which led directly to the final flourishing powers of "EDISON THE MAN", which is the title of the second film.

"YOUNG TOM EDISON" is portrayed by Mickey Rooney. He gives a serious and careful characterization of the struggles of a great American during his early days in Port Huron. Directed by Norman Taurog, "YOUNG TOM EDISON" is an exciting and authentic story of a great mind in its formative stages groping in the dark before the dawn of modern progress.

It is a story typical of American opportunity, perhaps not concerned with widening the territorial frontiers of the Continent, but definitely indicative of steps that have been made in broadening the horizon of our daily life. There is something of Horatio Alger in it; something of Mark Twain, something of Tarkington, and above all, something essentially American.

We see a family as it lived its life during the time when the Union itself was a question mark and when the era of witchcraft and superstition had not yet been completely discredited. "YOUNG TOM EDISON" is simply a great story and it is a great story simply told. We suggest that you see "YOUNG TOM EDISON", as portrayed by Mickey Rooney and later on we urge you to watch for "EDISON THE MAN" as carried forward by that unquestionable artist, Spencer Tracy, under the direction of Clarence Brown.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Fame Sans Film

Orson Welles, prodigal and prodigy, whose record of entertainment includes such diverse offerings as a stage version of "Macbeth" with a Negro cast and "War of the World" broadcast which startled a great number of Americans into believing in an invasion from Mars in October, 1938, is rapidly assuming the proportions of a Hollywood legend.

Mr. Welles, it will be remembered, finally agreed to investigate at first hand the art of the film, for a return reported to be worth $150,000 per picture made, and a percentage. He was to produce, direct and write, in addition to acting.

The young man (age 24) has continued an object of journalistic interest since appearing on the Hollywood horizon with a beard of imposing proportions and a group of his own actors from the Mercury theatre, which he had started in New York. The beard, lush even last August, was for his role in the first all-Welles picture, from Conrad's "Heart of Darkness." Work on this project has now been postponed, and it is to be supplanted on the schedule by "The Smiler with a Knife," set to start about the middle of the month. Additionally, RKO Radio, which also will release the other films, has contracted with Mr. Welles for the delivery of a third picture this year, in a deal closed last week.

The latest episode in the growing list of Wellesian legend concerns the Andrea Importers, of Beverly Hills, interior decorators. Slightly extending the scope of their activities, the firm recently sent Mr. Welles a black crocheted chenille snood, for his famous beard, with, at the bottom of the appurtenance usually used to hold in unruly feminine hair at the back of a hat, a fringe with mothball containers.

Mr. Welles has found art in Hollywood.

At Ciro's

Gene Towne and Graham Baker, whose madcap approach to the writing of screen plays has earned for them a certain local name in addition to the farther-reaching renown of their box office touch, as evinced in the stories of "Stand-In," "Ali Baba Goes to Town" and "The Joy of Living," celebrated the completion of their first work as producers last week with a party at the new Ciro's, on Hollywood's Sunset Boulevard.

Mr. Towne and the be-spectacled Mr. Baker were much, and smilingly, in evidence. George Schaefer, RKO Radio president, and Harry Edington, studio chief, also attended—the Towne-Baker Play's-the-Thing-Productions releases through that organization. Even more evident was Ciro's itself, a study in shades of green, cerise and silver.

The Towne and Baker forces then proceeded to tighten their hold on the week's activities by holding the press preview of their "Swiss Family Robinson" the next afternoon.

PRODUCTION HOLDS LEVEL AT SIX FILMS

Hollywood finished six pictures this week, as it had the week before, and put another six in work, compared to the eight started last week. There were 27 shooting and 16 being prepared, the same as in the prior period, and 62 were being edited, four under the number of the earlier week.

Universal finished two, "The House of Seven Gables" and "Enemy Agent". Columbia wound up "Too Many Husbands", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "The Ghost Comes Home", Monogram "The Cheyenne Kid" and Warner Brothers "Three Cheers for the Irish".

Started were "Pride and Prejudice", MGM; "The Romantic Mr. Hinklin", RKO Radio; "Forgotten Girls", Republic; "Charlie Chan's Cruise", Twentieth Century-Fox; "Ma! He's Making Eyes at Me", Universal, and "The Sea Hawk", Warners.

Six films were shooting at Twentieth Century-Fox, a greater number than had been before the cameras there in one week in a year. Columbia had one, MGM five, Paramount one, Principal Productions one, RKO two, Republic one, and Universal and Warners two apiece.

Four short subjects were completed, MGM and Warners each accounting for two. An equal number was started, two by Warners and one each by Columbia and MGM. The two last-named each had one shooting.

Six were being prepared, two by Columbia and MGM, and one by RKO and Warners. Thirteen were being edited: four by Columbia, three by MGM, and six by Warners.

CANADA FILMS, RADIO, PRESS ARE WAR WEAPONS; TORONTO CLEARANCE UP

Many Pictures to Follow "Call to a Nation"; Brockington Aids Dominion Board During Absence of Grierson

by R. J. LEARY
in Montreal

Motion pictures, radio and newspapers are all to be transformed from vehicles of entertainment and information to weapons of war by the Canadian Government, according to announcement from Ottawa.

These three most important methods of communication will be used more extensively and in closer coordination to inform the Canadian people of their war efforts, the tasks which lie before them and the need for a lasting peace at the end of the war. So says W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King appears to be solidly behind the move and is said to believe that benefits will come from making more effective use of the film, the radio and the press as instruments of public relation—or propaganda.

Many War Films Planned

The National Film Board, under the impetus given by John Grierson, government film commissioner, already has been responsible for creative work of importance. The film, "Call to a Nation," is an example of a concrete contribution to the war cause. This war short played in 700 theatres across the Dominion last weekend and is given some credit for the fact that the Government's first war loan of $200,000,000 was oversubscribed by 25 per cent, in two days, with orders for bonds still coming in.

Many other pictures which will keep the people informed of Canada's part in the war are being completed. Pictures recording troop movements, training, etc., are also being compiled across the country and with Canadian Army units overseas.

This work, which is considered highly important by the Canadian Government, will not be allowed to lag in the absence of Mr. Grierson, who, as a government film commissioner, has left for Australia to spend three months showing the people of that Dominion how to produce lively and interesting "documentary" films. This is the same chore he has done for Canada.

In the absence of Mr. Grierson, Colonel John Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors Association of Canada, will be acting commissioner, announcement being made by Mr. Euler, who heads the National Film Board.

Brockington Special Advisor

It is also learned from the same source that Leonard Brockington, former head of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and now the country's official war recorder and in effect director of public relations, will serve as special advisor to the National Film Board, during the Grierson jaunt to Australia. Mr. Brockington will be concerned chiefly with creative work now being done under the Film Board's auspices and direction.

Prime Minister King is reported to be pleased about the whole affair. He has, Mr. Euler reports, warmly acceded to Mr. Brockington's association with this work for the National Film Board.

WARN EXHIBITORS ON CENSUS TAKERS

A warning to exhibitors to beware of impersonators of federal census takers has been issued by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Members have been advised to ask for credentials and to turn impostors over to the police.

Mr. Brockington is directly responsible to the Prime Minister in his work and is expected to make full use of all facilities for telling the people what Canadians are doing to help win the war—and what support they are getting from citizens of alien birth.

The work of compiling Canada's "History of the Second World War" is proceeding apace. Motion pictures and radio are being utilized to the fullest possible extent, in addition to the printed word and "still" photographs.

Reports from Ottawa disclose that Ernest Wilson, who took part in the Canadian cavalry's charge of Mereuil Wood, in 1918, is now attached to the Dominion Government Motion Picture Bureau. He recently accompanied the troops of the First Canadian Contingent to England and shot 2,500 feet of film, which will be "preserved for posterity". Thousands of words descriptive of the movement have been recorded by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

March of Time, Other Films Producing

Another important war picture is in production and soon will parade dramatic episodes depicting Canada's war efforts upon the screen before 40,000,000 British subjects in 11,000 theatres throughout the world. This film, which will be entitled "Canada at War," is being made by the producers of The March of Time. Enough film is being exposed to require five full hours of running time, but in the cutting room it will be reduced to 25-minute showing time. It is hoped that it will pile up into a massive general effect all the drama and energy and planning that lie behind this nation's war effort.

The National Film Board has organized the production of a "national film" under the title, "The Undefended Frontier," dealing with the neighborly peace between the United States and Canada. The board also plans the production of short subjects for school children, and a group for adult educational purposes.

A regular series of films will be brought out, portraying the life of Canadian soldiers in England and France during the war. The board also will send films to military theatres in the overseas war zones.

The National Film Board is not concerning itself entirely with the war, however, although that part of its work is receiving most public attention at the moment. The Board, which was inaugurated a year ago, describes its purpose to be "the eyes of Canada; to see Canada and see it whole—its people and its purpose." The Board has set itself the task of helping Canada to see itself and realize itself by giving everyone in Canada the vision of Canadian life which only the film can bring.

The Board is now reaching out with a production program which includes films for children and for national education generally; films on the peoples, frontiers and economic fronts of Canada and as a strong part of Public Information.

Since its founding a year ago, the Film Board has been surveying the country to find what it needs most from a motion picture standpoint. The Board now thinks it knows the requirements and is ready to supply documentary films of national importance and international interest.

A preview of the French war film, "France Is Ready," was given at Montreal's His Majesty's theatre, Tuesday, for M. Aufossy, French Consul, and Mr. Jicks, British Trade Commissioner.

Produced with the approval of French military authorities, the picture was made to show the French fighting machine in full action, with all France the stage. French airplanes meeting the enemy, banking, diving, looping at more than 300 miles an hour, and spraying the skies with lead, are part of the action. The only submarine in the world said to have a watertight hangar for seaplanes and the "world's greatest tanks," weighing 70 tons and manned by a crew of 12, are also included.

The picture will be shown to the Montreal public beginning Friday.

Clearance Reform Group Studies Revision Plans

A conference is scheduled for Toronto on Friday by the Clearance Reform Committee, representing the circuits, independent exhibitors and exchanges, to consider proposals for revision of the clearance-and-protection code throughout the Dominion. Chairman of the committee is Colonel John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada.

The independents, through N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario, have asked for regional conciliation boards in the six key cities in the Dominion and an appeal board in Toronto to pass on decisions. The suggestion has been made that the personnel of a board comprise two independent exhibitors, one film exchange representative and a member from the theatre circuits.

N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has expressed opposition to a plan for regional committees but favors one general board to deal with all trade problems involving circuits and independents.

No New Taxes

The Dominion Cabinet has decided against the inauguration of a federal amusement tax as a war time measure to be applied to tickets for all forms of entertainment throughout Canada, it is understood.

The new levy was slated for consideration at the session of Parliament which opened at Ottawa, January 25, but the idea has been dropped because it would duplicate the amusement taxes imposed by Provincial Governments.

Theatre Building Off

The number of new theatre construction contracts for the whole of Canada in 1939 showed a decline of 24 per cent as compared with the previous year, the reduction being attributed to the European tension during the first eight months of the year and the actual declaration of war in September. The 1939 total was 82 theatres, having a valuation of $1,418,500 as compared with 103 new theatres in 1938, with a value of $1,867,100, the reduction in money involved being 26 per cent.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Westerner

(Goldwyn-UA)

Homesteaders and Cattlemen

Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner" is the film with which he has been attempting to break away from his United Artists releasing deal; latest reports, however, have it included in the UA schedule. More important to theatre men than the problem of who sells them this film are those facts about it which in turn will help them sell it to their public.

The fact that "Wuthering Heights" won the New York Critics' Award for the best picture of 1939 accentuated the exploitation values of the names of Mr. Goldwyn and William Wyler, who directed that film and this. Then, too, there is the star, Gary Cooper, whose latest vehicle, "The Real Glory," was predicated on action as is "The Westerner."

Here is a story about the feud between the cattlemen, original settlers of the land, and the homesteaders seeking to till that land which lies west of the Pecos river in Texas. Walter Brennan plays the Vinegarroon judge whose interpretation of justice hinges upon his whims. Most outstanding of those whims is his reverence for Lily Langtry, here portrayed by Lilian Bond. Other castings include Fred Stone, Doris Davenport, Forrest Tucker, Paul Hurst and Chill Wills.

Based on an original story by Stuart Lake, the screen play was written by Jo Swerling and Niven Busch. Swerling collaborated on "The Real Glory," Busch on "Battle of City Hall."

Release date: To be determined.

Rhythm of the Rio Grande

(Monogram)

Tex Ritter

Tex Ritter, seventh in the poll of the 10 leading money-making Western stars taken yearly by QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, is here cast, with his familiar partner, Frank Mitchell, as a righter of wrongs sustained by ranchers whose places are being destroyed to force them to sell their land.

Produced by Edward Finney, the picture was directed by Al Herman, as was "Down the Wyoming Trail." The original story and screen play was the work of George Martin, Robert Emmett and Roger Merton.

The cast includes Martin Garralaga, M. Rodriguez, Juan Duval, Tristram Coffin, Warner Richmond and Suzan Dale.

Release date: To be determined.

Down Went McGinty

(Paramount)

Political Corruption

Marking Brian Donlevy's first leading role, "Down Went McGinty" casts him in the title role of a grafting Governor who flees to Latin America when his crimes and the public catch up with him. The political boss is portrayed by Akim Tamiroff. The cast includes Muriel Angelus, William Demarest and Allyn Joslyn.

Written and directed by Preston Sturges, in his first directorial effort, the picture was produced by Paul Jones, who also performed similarly on "Untamed."

Release date: Aug. 9, 1940 (Tentative).

Karloff and Lugosi

Co-starred here are those two first-line members of the school of horror, Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi. Karloff appears as a surgeon whose experiment in brain surgery leads him to his own death, Lugosi as a gang leader. Neither resorts to the type of makeup with which their previous roles usually have been associated.

Seen with them are Stanley Ridges, Anne Nagel, who appears in "My Little Chickadee"; Anne Gwynne, Virginia Brissac and Edmund MacDonald.

An original story, the screen play was written by Sam Robins and directed by Arthur Lubin, whose most recent work was "The Big Guy." Burt Kelly, currently producing "The House of Seven Gables," is associate producer.

Release date: To be determined.

The Woman from Hell

(Paramount)

Woman Gangster

Blanche Yurka, famous these many years for her stage work, here makes her second film appearance, as a tough and renegade woman outlaw who trains three of her four sons to follow in her footsteps, in the manner of the late "Ma Barker," whose exploits several years ago were the subject of much attention. As "Ma Webster," she ends up riddled by federal bullets, after one of her sons has renounced her activities and become an attorney.

The cast includes Ralph Bellamy, William Henry, Jean Cagney, Hedda Hopper, also known as a columnist, and J. Carrol Naish. Directed by James Hogan, who also handled the assignment on "The Farmer's Daughter," the picture had Edward Lowe as associate producer.

Release date: June 28, 1940 (Tentative).

Judell Company Creditors Plan Assets Conservation

Creditors of Ben Judell's Producers Pictures Corporation met late last week in Hollywood to plan the conservation of the company's assets. Robert Benjamin, attorney representing Pathe Laboratories, Inc., which holds first lien on seven productions which Mr. Judell made, called the creditors together and told them that Pathe would not foreclose, but would do all in its power to liquidate the films in an effort to pay off all indebtedness of the corporation.

Appointed to the creditors' committee were Gus Barth, Agfa official in Hollywood; A. J. Gursey, International Studio Equipment Company, and Adolph Fleischman, Cinema Props Company. The total indebtedness of the corporation is $125,000.

Harry Rathner, eastern representative of Mr. Judell, is in Hollywood studying possibilities of revamping the corporation in order to continue production.

'SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON' LAN
I broke off several portions with a pickaxe, and, carrying them to our fireplace at
When these were cold, I reduced them to powder, which, when mixed with water, made a beautiful white plaster.
My first attempt at plastering was to cover the sides of the herring tubs, to prevent the air from penetrating through the cracks.
The remaining four I left untouched, as I wished to try my hand at smoked herrings as soon as possible.
With the help of the boys, who were always ready for any new experiment, I constructed a hut of reeds and branches of trees closely twisted together.
Across the interior of this hut, and very high up, were placed ledges, one above another, and on these the herrings were laid. Under them we lighted a fire of brushwood and damp moss, which threw out a dense smoke. The hut was then closed to make it as nearly as possible air-tight.

FOUR BOARDS REPORT FILM CENSORINGS

Nineteen Films Rejected by Chicago Group; Fewer Are Turned Down in Detroit

The official motion picture censor boards of Chicago, Pennsylvania, Detroit and Ohio this week made public the state of their activities in making elimination in and absolute prohibitions of pictures—Chicago and Detroit reporting for a full year, Pennsylvania, for six months, and Ohio for a single month, January.

Chicago Rejects 19 Films

Nineteen pictures were rejected by the Chicago Censor Board in 1939. The censor group, a part of the Crime Prevention bureau of the Chicago Police department, reviews all films shown in the city. During the past year the board viewed 7,190,000 feet of film from which 390 cuts were made.

In the year, 1,626 film subjects, including features, short subjects and newsreels, were viewed by the censors. Out of this number of films 44 were given "pink tickets" or adult permits which prohibited their being shown to juveniles. Each print distributed here by both major and independent exchanges has to have a permit from the city. The total number of prints issued in 1939 was 15,950.

In the last ten years the Chicago censor board, which comes under the supervision of the Commissioner of Police James P. Allman, has viewed 86,306,000 feet of film, made 13,900 cuts, classified 375 pictures as "adult entertainment only" and rejected 243 pictures.

The latest picture to be "barred" by the censor group was "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," which more recently has been named "Goose Step." Efforts are being made to get the picture through under this title.

Attempts in the past year to have the censor group abolished have been made by the Civil Liberties League. This organization was particularly aroused when "Prof. Mamlock," a foreign film, was barred by the censor board, later to be passed by Commissioner Allman, and when the Hitler picture was banned.

The Chicago censor body, headed by Lt. Harry Costello, is composed of four women and one man. When the regular group fails to agree on a picture Lt. Costello is called in.

Detroit Rejections Decline

Only two films were rejected last year and 3,442 feet of film cut against five pictures rejected and 8,915 cut last in 1938, according to the annual report of Sergeant Charles W. Snyder, Detroit censor.

A total of 5,698,000 feet was reviewed last year against 5,733,000 in 1938. The number of features rose from 495 to 521 and the number of shorts from 762 to 863. The number of foreign films passed dropped from 177 in 1938 to 98 in 1939 which represented a drop from 1,363,000 feet to 1,153,000 feet.

Chinese and French films increased to a marked degree. Finnish pictures appeared for the first time and other changes were caused by the war. Russian films lost favor and the Cinema theatre refused to show them. Spanish and Mexican pictures lost an outlet when the Latin theatre closed. Polish, German, Hungarian, Swedish, Greek and Slovak films decreased in number. Special benefit performances had a great effect on the number and kinds of foreign pictures shown in Detroit during 1939.

The Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors approved without change 215 or 79.3 per cent of the 271 feature pictures reviewed during the last six months, according to Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman. Cuts were ordered in 52 films or 19.2 per cent and four or 1.5 per cent were entirely banned.

Mrs. Carroll left for Hollywood this week to visit the picture studios "to see what makes it tick." At a meeting of the Philadelphia Federation of Women's Clubs earlier in the week, she told the civic group that she was convinced of the need for movie censorship. She said that censorship should be based on good taste, and "what is good taste in Pennsylvania is good taste anywhere."

However, she gave assurance that a new spirit of liberal tolerance pervades the State Censor Board and that "the scissors aren't and won't be wielded by a Mrs. Grundy." She said, common sense and the provisions of the state law are the guides for herself and the other two members of the board, John Clyde Fisher, of Sharon, and Mrs. Lucy Love, of Johnstown.

"Censorship scissors shouldn't be wielded by a Mrs. Grundy, who is easily shocked, doesn't keep up with the times, is narrow-minded or has an ax to grind," she asserted. "The Act says we can approve what is moral and decent and disapprove what is sacrilegious, indecent, obscene or that which tends to corrupt morals. We take the attitude that Pennsylvanians are grown-ups who enjoy fast, snappy, modern wise-cracking dialogue. But when scenes and dialogues are in bad taste, we cut them out."

Mrs. Carroll said at the dinner that the producers were paying her expenses on the trip to the Coast. Miss Florence Averill, of the local MGM exchange, is accompanying Mrs. Carroll on her trip.

"The Mulatto," much-discussed play, will be barred in Camden, N. J., either as a legitimate production or as a motion picture, Mayor George E. Brunner informed all local theatre owners and operators this week. The mayor said he had been advised that the play, which was banned over-the-river in Philadelphia, was being prepared for exploitation in this city. Several ministers and citizens, he added, also had protested prospective showing of the play here.

"This play, I am told, offends decency and depends on vulgarity to attract theatregoers," Mayor Brunner said. "If an attempt is made to present the play on any Camden stage or in motion pictures, I will immediately close the show."

Ohio Orders 51 Cuts

The Ohio censors reviewed a total of 644 reels during the five-week period of January, from which 51 eliminations were ordered. Six reels were rejected for the week ending January 12, and seven for the week ending January 19. In December, 1939, there were 602 reels and 39 eliminations. Figures for January, 1939, were 621 reels and 51 eliminations.

Los Angeles Plan Protested

The Municipal League, composed of leading Los Angeles citizens, had read Tuesday in a session of the city council a letter expressing the League's opposition to a proposed ordinance empowering the police commissioner to censor motion pictures and stage shows.

Atlanta Censor Chairman

Troy Stone, a member of the Carnegie Library board, has been named chairman of the Atlanta Board of Film Review. He succeeds Sherwood Astin, who has been appointed chairman of the board of the Carnegie Library.

UFA INDEPENDENT OF FOREIGN MARTS

The Ufa Film Company is no longer dependent on foreign markets, its General Director Klitzsch points out in Ufa's annual report, according to word received from Berlin by the German Railroads Information Office in New York. Formerly 40 per cent of the production costs were absorbed by purchasers in other countries, much of this coming from the United States.

The number of patrons at Ufa theatres in Germany increased to 47 million in the past year, according to the report, as against 27 million in 1933 and 40 million in 1938. The year's production included 36 features, among them six foreign language films, also 15 sound short subjects. 28 German and 32 foreign language educational films, 156 weekly reviews and 125 industrial pictures.

Film Executives Named to Drives

Four charity and other forms of relief drives this week added motion picture names to sponsoring committees.

Frank Walker, head of the Comerford Circuit, has been appointed treasurer of the Archbishop's Committee of the Laity for 1940 in the Catholic Charities Drive in New York.

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO Radio, and John J. O'Connor, head of RKO Theatres, have been named as chairman and vice-chairman of the Motion Picture Committee.

Jack Connelly, former general manager of Pathe News, has been appointed in charge of publicity of the motion picture division of Herbert Hoover's Finnish relief campaign. Leslie Thompson is chairman and Vincent Hart director.

Mr. Hoover has addressed a letter to 6,000 independent theatre owners in this country, naming February 17th and 18th as the dates for collections to be made in theatres. All of the major circuits have agreed to cooperate with Mr. Hoover and word has been received at the New York headquarters from more than 4,000 independent theatre owners, accepting his invitation to take part in the drive, it is said.

Morris Wolf, counsel for the Warner Brothers circuit in Philadelphia, has been appointed a member of the advisory committee of the United Charities Campaign in Philadelphia.

The following figures in the entertainment world are among the 44 signers of an Open Letter to the American Public urging support for the Rescue Ship Campaign for Spanish Refugees inaugurated by the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign: Helen Hayes, Philip Merivale, Paul Robeson, Paul Muni, and Louis Bromfield, author of "The Rains Came" and other stories.

Bachman with Warners

Harry Bachman, formerly Monogram's branch manager in Washington, has succeeded Roger Mahan as salesman in the Warner exchange in Philadelphia. Mr. Mahan recently was promoted to New Haven branch manager.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

WHEN that grand old man of the stage, Mr. James T. Powers, first went to the footlights, he went as James T. McGovern, in a team with another young "Mick," named Fagan, as "The Acrobatic Micks," in a knockabout act. For their entrance, Jimmy was to knock off his partner's hat with a ponderous blackthorn stick, and hit him in the face with a newspaper, just to get things going. Jimmy pranced on to the stage, out of joy with facing an audience for the first time, but instead of following the scheduled affront, he knocked off Fagan's hat with the newspaper, and smashed him happily in the face with the blackthorn. The partner, strangely, went out cold, and was carried prostrate off the stage. It was then that Jimmy made a classic gesture, as now recalled in his autobiography, "Twinkle Little Star" (Putnam, $3.50). . . .

"Believing I had killed Fagan, I walked down to the footlights with tears in my eyes, and said . . . 'Please excuse me, I think I have killed my partner. Thanking you for the kind applause which you would have given us had you seen our whole act, I remain yours truly, James T. McGovern, formerly of the vaudeville act, Fagan and McGovern.'"

For its new "Hunchback of Notre Dame," now playing, RKO had its Paris office make a true sound track of the bells of the famous Notre Dame Cathedral over there. When it arrived at the Hollywood studio, the producers didn't like it—"not realistic enough," they said—and so they went out and recorded the tolling of bells in a little church on the east side of Los Angeles, using that in the picture instead.

The newsreels might look into the story of a friend of Meyer (New York Times) Berger, who ambles around town copying and photographing odd and comical signs, including subway pillar and washroom inscriptions, which are usually neither odd nor comical, but vulgar. Anyway, Meyer Berger's friend dug up, for his latest, a sign in a shop window in 114th Street, New York.

The store window was decorated with assorted jars topped by vari-colored stoppers, advertised as "Ritualistic Supplies," and including general products for godly favors and "Spirit-Commanding." Listed were "Numbers Candles and Incenses," "Perfumes, Oils and Aromatic Salts and Planetary Perfumes," "Astral Herbs," "Lucky Charms," "Magic Inks," "Mystic Quills," "Magnetic Stones"—inducements, no doubt, for members of Harlem's Negro numbers playing fraternity.

Producers of motion picture short subjects who are looking for something really batty for filming might turn to some of the subjects appearing on Dave Elman's "Hobby Lobby" NBC network broadcasts, such as Milton Campbell of San Antonio, who cultivates bats, and James Bannon, Fulton, N. Thirty persons of Pasadena, California, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Irving, announced, the other day, that they were leaving this country to colonize the isolated East Caicos Island in the West Indies as a cooperative group, making their future homes on the place, choosing, of their own volition, a new way of living. Upon learning of their planned exodus, someone of RKO Radio, in Hollywood, at the eleventh hour, thought that it might be nice, publicity-wise, of course, to show them his company's new "Swiss Family Robinson." The 30 must have relished the film's sights of the Robinsons shipwrecked and marooned on an island that looked like the East Caicos, scrapping for food, worrying over their rescue, etc., etc.

TWO names appearing in the public prints in recent weeks, entirely unrelated today, were linked mighty closely in motion pictures of a quarter-century back—Theda Bara, languorous siren of early sirens who enchanted male moviegoers with her heavy-lidded glances as she writhed from one picture to another, for the delight of Mr. William Fox; and, Frank Powell, who directed Theda Bara in her first "vamp" role, likewise for William Fox. Miss Bara appeared the other week in a Ken Murray radio skit over CBS, giving "Seven Ways to Be a Vamp." Mr. Powell was a-visiting New York from his recent business of banking in the midwest.

Mr. Powell was directing as early as 1910, when he did "His New Lid," for old Biograph Pictures, in which the late Thomas Ince, who later rose to lofty heights in production, made his one and only appearance as an actor—the film disclosing that Ince was not of the architecture of which stars of the screen are made.

'Twas Powell who gave Theodosia Goodman, later billed as Theda Bara, her first opportunity, turning out "A Fool There Was," for Fox, 25 years ago. This production became a big box office hit in no time. Theda Bara was made famous overnight. Then began the building of the great Bara myth, as described so vividly later in Terry Ramsaye's "A Million and One Nights." Plotters and compounders of iniquitous publicity fictions appeared in the persons of Johnny Goldfrap and Al Selig, broad press agents and ex-newspaper men. Selig was until recently a press agent, turned film distributor for a feature on the French Maginot Line.

By mid-1915, the Theda Bara (Goodman) found by Frank Powell, began to acquire a most atmospheric past. Conscienceless typewriters plied the motion picture and other columns of the press with the announcement that Theda Bara was the daughter of a French artist and an Arabian mistress, born on the sands of the Sahara. They said that "Bara" was indeed a mere cypher, being Arab spelled backwards. That proved the rest of the story. They said that "Theda" was just a rearrangement of the letters of "death." In reality, Theda was a contraction of the real name, Theodosia, and the Bara was derived from a relative's name of Barranger.

This "deadly" Arab girl was made to appear as a crystal gazing seeress of profoundly occult powers, wicked as fresh red paint and poisonous as dried spiders. The stronger the copy grew the more it was printed. Little boys read it and swallowed their gum with excitement.

She posed with skulls and crossbones, glass balls, and all the trademarks of Oriental desert mysticism. She received reporters and newspaper critics in darkened parlors draped with black and red, in the tone of her sweeping gown. She was white, languid and painfully polite. The air was heavy with tuberoses and incenses. Mr. Powell's Theodosia Goodman soon made Mr. Fox's money-box heavy with gold and silver.

U. S. CRITICS NOMINATE 10 FILMS, 60 PLAYERS; ACADEMY NOMINATIONS

First Poll of Newspaper Film Critics of America Follows Nominations by 50 Reviewers on Committee

Ten pictures and 60 players have been nominated for the first poll of the Newspaper Film Critics of America, formed last September. The critics are asked to vote on the list submitted by special committee of 50 critics. The poll is being directed by Merle Potter, film editor of the Minneapolis Times-Tribune.

The idea of a national film critics' association was formed last July. The many junkets of critics to world premieres all over the country was credited with being the cause of the movement for a national group. Through the courtesy of several of the motion picture companies the film critics from all over the country were brought together and out of the meetings came a move for a national unit.

All Reviewers Eligible

The organization was formed under the name "Newspaper Film Critics of America" at the end of August and temporary officers were selected. All the motion picture editors and reviewers, nearly 1,000 in the nation, were declared eligible for membership. In addition to a convention the chief activity of the association is to make awards for the "best" pictures and players. It was for this annual poll that the nominations were made this week.

(MOTION PICTURE HERALD annually polls exhibitors to select the ten biggest money making stars. The list of the 1939 Box Office Champions was publishel in the issue of Dec. 23, 1939.)

The U. S. Film Critics encountered little difficulty until they tried to include the New York critics and appoint one of them to the temporary board of governors. The first district of the national association, New York and New Jersey, has gone without representation in the national body because the metropolitan critics decided not to join the U. S. critic's association. The 18 members of the New York Film Critics decided not to become affiliated with the new national organization because they wished to continue their own motion picture awards and did not wish to lose their position by joining the other 900 odd critics in the nation.

With Complications

On January 7th at a ceremony in the Rainbow Room, Rockefeller Center Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia presented the New York Film Critics awards. The affair was not without complications for some days before the ceremony the National Broadcasting Company had refused permission to the Mayor to speak. The order was later changed. During the broadcast the Mayor forgot to mention the winning foreign-film, "Harvest" and that occasioned more apologies and counter-apologies.

The New York Critics selected Samuel Goldwyn's "Wuthering Heights" as the best picture of the year. Awards also went to James Stewart for the best male performance; Vivien Leigh, best female performance and John Ford, best direction.

The Newspaper Film Critics of America nominations were made in seven different classifications: best picture, best performance by actor, actress; best masculine and feminine supporting player and best young actor and actress. The last two classifications are to determine what players, in the opinion of the crtics, are likely to make the most progress in 1940.

The nominations in each group are as follows:

Pictures—"Dark Victory," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Love Affair," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Ninotchka," "Pygmalion," "Stagecoach," "The Women," "Wizard of Oz," "Wuthering Heights."

Performance by actor—John Barrymore in "Great Man Votes," Robert Donat in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Henry Fonda in "Young Mr. Lincoln," Leslie Howard in "Pygmalion," Charles Laughton in "The Beach Comber," Paul Muni in "Juarez," Laurence Olivier in "Wuthering Heights," Mickey Rooney in "Babes in Arms," James Stewart in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Spencer Tracy in "Stanley and Livingstone."

Performance by actress—Ingrid Bergman in "Intermezzo," Bette Davis in "Dark Victory," Marlene Dietrich in "Destry Rides Again," Irene Dunne in "Love Affair," Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka," Wendy Hiller in "Pygmalion," Anna Neagle in "Nurse Edith Cavell," Merle Oberon in "Wuthering Heights," Rosalind Russell in "The Women," Norma Shearer in "Idiots Delight."

Masculine supporting player—Brian Aherne in "Juarez," Richard Barthelmess in "Only Angels Have Wings," Walter Brennan in "Stanley and Livingstone," Brian Donlevy in "Beau Geste," John Garfield in "Juarez," Cedric Hardwicke in "Hunchback of Notre Dame," Wilfred Lawson in "Pygmalion," Gene Lockhart in "Blackmail," Thomas Mitchell in "Stagecoach," Akim Tamiroff in "Disputed Passage."

Feminine supporting player—Alice Brady in "Young Mr. Lincoln," Jane Bryan in "We Are Not Alone," Billie Burke in "The Wizard of Oz," Geraldine Fitzgerald in "Dark Victory," Greer Garson in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Edna Mae Oliver in "Drums Along the Mohawk," Maria Ouspenskaya in "Love Affair," Flora Robson in "We Are Not Alone," Rosalind Russell in "The Women," Dame Mae Whitty in "The Lady Vanishes."

Young Actor—Eddie Albert, Richard Carlson, Robert Cummings, William Holden, John Howard, Jeffrey Lynn, Victor Mature, Edmund O'Brien, Robert Preston, Robert Stack.

Only pictures that have been generally released are included. Thus roadshows, as "Gone With the Wind," are not eligible for the 1939 awards.

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture starring Robert Donat with Greer Garson, was the best picture of 1939, according to a radio poll conducted by Sam Taylor, film commentator for Station WHN, New York, on the "Hollywood Sound Stage" program. Mr. Taylor had specifically requested that "Gone With the Wind" be not considered, as it had not been shown throughout the area.

CROMWELL HONORED FOR "LINCOLN"

The department of secondary education of the National Education Association has awarded a special trophy to John Cromwell for his direction of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." The educational organization also named Mr. Cromwell a member of its Film Advisory Board. The announcement was made by Dr. William Lewin, chairman of the motion picture committee of the association. David O. Selznick is the only other film personality on the board.

The educational body said that it had been looking to Hollywood for the assistance of visual education by means of motion pictures.

Academy Names Eligibles for Voting in Color and Black-and-White; for Shorts, Music, Sound Recording

Nominations were made this week for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards for color and black-and-white cinematography; for short subjects and music achievements. Also the nominations for the sound recording award have been made.

Color Gets Equal Award

The Academy has decided that color merits an equal award with black and white cinematography, so two regular statuettes will be given. All directors of photography will vote on these two awards after viewing all the nominated pictures during the next four weeks. Pictures nominated for the black-and-white cinematography awards are: "First Love," "The Great Victor Herbert," "Gunga Din," "Intermezzo," "Juarez," "Lady of the Tropics," "Of Mice and Men," "Only Angels Have Wings," "The Rains Came," "Stagecoach" and "Wuthering Heights."

Productions nominated for the color award are: "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Four Feathers," "Gone With the Wind," "The Mikado," "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" and "The Wizard of Oz."

The competition was so keen in the two divisions for short subjects that four pictures were nominated instead of three. The four shorts named are: "Busy Little Bears," Paramount; "Information Please," RKO; "Profit Without Honor," MGM and "Swordfishing," Warner Brothers. In the cartoon division four were also chosen: "Detouring America," Warner Brothers; "Peace on Earth," MGM; "The Pointer," Disney and "The Ugly Duckling," Disney. The two reelers named were "Drunk Driving," MGM; "Five Times Five," RKO and "Sons of Liberty," Warner Brothers.

Music Nominees

The following are the classifications and nominees for the music awards:

Best original score: "Dark Victory," Max Steiner; "Eternally Yours," Werner Janssen; "Golden Boy," Victor Young; "Gone With the Wind," Max Steiner; "Gulliver's Travels," Victor Young; "Man in the Iron Mask," Lud Gluskin and Lucien Moraweck; "Man of Conquest," Victor Young; "Of Mice and Men," Aaron Copeland; "Nurse Edith Cavell," Anthony Collins; "The Rains Came," Alfred Newman; "The Wizard of Oz," Herbert Stothart and George E. Stoll and "Wuthering Heights," Alfred Newman.

Best scoring regardless of source of music: "Babes in Arms," George E. Stoll and Roger Edens; "Elizabeth and Essex," Eric Wolfgang Korngold; "First Love," Charles Previn; "Great Victor Herbert," Louis Lipstone; "Hunchback of Notre Dame," Al Newman; "Intermezzo," Lou Forbes; "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Dmitri Tiomkin; "Of Mice and Men," S. S. Van Keuren; "She Married a Cop," Cy Feuer; "Stagecoach," Richard Hageman, Frank Harling, John Leipold and Leo Shuken; "Swanee River," Louis Silvers; "They Shall Have Music," Alfred Newman and "Way Down South," Victor Young.

Best song: "Faithful Forever," "Gulliver's Travels," by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger; "I Poured My Heart into a Song," from "Second Fiddle," by Irving Berlin and "Over the

DEADLINE THURSDAY ON STUDIO PAY; SPLIT THREATENS "FOUR A'S" RANKS

Large Companies' Auditors Insist That Producers Cannot Bear Burden of 10% Increase Any Longer

Backed by data compiled by the large companies' auditors, showing they cannot bear any longer the burden of the 10 per cent wage increases granted to the studio unions last Fall, Y. Frank Freeman, newly elected president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, and head of the Paramount studio, will meet with representatives of the studio unions next Thursday on a possible rescinding of the increases, acting in behalf of all the large producers. The unions, led by William Bioff, West Coast representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, had promised such a rescinding, if the necessity for such could be shown to them. Some 13,000 workers are involved.

Comprehensive Report Awaited

At the time of granting the ten per cent wage increases, first to the IATSE studio unions, then to other American Federation of Labor studio unions, and, finally, to the "Big Four" unions in the basic studio pact, the producers, led at the time by Joseph M. Schenck, past president of the MPPA, and chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, claimed the increases would be ruinous, because of a decline in foreign revenues, arising from the European War. They protested each increase.

Bioff's reply, consistently, as IATSE representative, and as chairman of the AFL Conference of Studio Unions, was that the unions welcomed an examination of financial schedules, because that would prove the unions' contention that executives, stars, directors, and the like were receiving "top-heavy" salaries, in proportion to the wages paid to technicians and laborers.

The record of studio labor costs which Mr. Freeman will show to the unions will be one of the most factual, most comprehensive, ever made, it is said. The majors, always chary of revealing cost structure, have parted with the information, in this case, only at Mr. Freeman's insistence that he needed it conclusively to prove the studio's case, it was reported.

Labor's Share Studied

The report provides a study of the share of labor in the production dollar, a contrast with those of executives, technical and talent groups. It is in rebuttal of the IATSE contention that labor does not receive a fair share of production expenditure, observers said this week, in speculating upon facts revealed. Even the Alliance's contention that the average studio union worker receives only $900 a year, despite high wages, is also refuted, it is said. The average wage is called twice that amount, despite unsteady employment.

Audited reports of production and distribution earnings during the first 13 weeks of the European war, and ending December 1st, will also be carried by Mr. Freeman to the conference. These reports are individual, for the eight large companies, and cover production and distribution only.

It was reported that an examination of the reports revealed that, with theatre operation earnings excluded, the facts showed that companies such as Warners, Loew's, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox were not able to carry the wage increase load.

BIOFF FEDERAL CASE MAY 28TH

William Bioff, West Coast representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, will be tried, on May 28th, in Los Angeles Federal Court, on an indictment, charging evasion of Federal income taxes in 1936 and 1937. Federal Judge Ralph Jenney set the trial date on Monday in Los Angeles.

Bioff also faces extradition proceedings, on February 13th, from California to Illinois, to serve out an unfinished 1922 Chicago jail term. Governor Culbert Olson, of California, set the extradition hearing date, after hearing pleas by Bioff counsel, that neither Illinois nor California could exercise jurisdiction until disposal of the Federal case. Judge Olson said the states had jurisdiction, and quoted a statement by United States Attorney Ben Harrison, of Los Angeles, that presence of Bioff at the Federal case could be arranged with Illinois authorities.

"Frozen" Revenues Cited

The reports also point at the "frozen" revenues of the majors in foreign countries, especially Great Britain, as noted on page eight of the February 3rd issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The freezing of $1,500,000 to $4,000,000 of individual company revenues in Great Britain would be equivalent to, or would exceed, total earnings of some companies in production and distribution.

"In such cases," the article then said, "those companies still may show good profits as a result of theatre earnings, which, however, have no bearing on the ability of production and distribution to bear the burden of the wage increases."

Arbitration Seen

Few observers thought the financial facts would impress the IATSE and other studio unions, to force them to relinquish the wage increases. The result may be, it was thought, that the whole subject will go to arbitration, as provided in the agreements which brought the wage increases.

Mr. Freeman will represent the producers, not only as their president, but also as acting chairman of the producers' negotiating committee.

Technicians Sign Pathe

Obtaining of a closed shop at the New York City plant of the Pathe Film Company, was reported this week by the Laboratory Technicians' Union, Local 702. The one year contract provides for a one week paid vacation, 10 to 25 per cent wage increases, six paid holidays, and time and a half for overtime, the union said.

Actors' Parent Union Seeks to Avert Schism Over One Big Union Issue and Variety Artists Guild Problems

Even as its many union members awaited an accountant's report on the feasibility of a "one big union" plan to eliminate useless overhead, and duplicate dues payments, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, actors' parent union, this week attempted to to prevent a growing split. The schism is the result of delay in adopting the "one big union" plan, and over organization difficulties of the parent group's new variety actors' union, the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Actors Guild Ruffled

The Screen Actors Guild, reportedly the most powerful and largest union in the group, and said to have loaned money to Actors' Equity and to the American Federation of Radio Artists, this week appeared ruffled over delays.

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, who had been in New York several weeks, investigating the AGVA, and inquiring about the progress of the "one big union" plan returned to Hollywood to make his report.

Emily Holt, executive secretary of the AFRA, George Heller, her assistant, and Walter Greaza, of Actors Equity, flew to the coast from New York, over the weekend, and conferred with Mr. Thomson, and other Guild officials. The latter appointed a sub-committee, of Lucile Gleason, Walter Able and Noel Madison.

Late Tuesday night, the confreres issued a statement declaring all to be in complete accord.

Mason Publicists' Head

Leslie Mason was elected president of the Screen Publicists's Guild, in Hollywood last Wednesday. The producers contract with the Guild, which was approved by the Motion Picture Producers Association Monday and which covers minimum wages and working conditions for publicity men in studios, has gone to members.

Jean Muir Resigns

Jean Muir, who had been acting executive secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists, in New York, since the illness and resignation, several weeks ago, of Mrs. Dorothy Bryant, resigned last Wednesday, to begin work, shortly in an MGM picture, on the coast.

Another IATSE Suit

George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees; William Bioff, its international representative; the Alliance itself; the Hollywood Studio Photographers, Alliance Local 659; and Hal Mohr, its president—are defendants in a suit, by Ben Wetzler, New York photographer, in Hollywood Superior Court. The suit, which will be a test of IATSE by-laws, alleges that Mr. Wetzler, member of the New York Photographers' Local 644, had been prevented from obtaining certain Hollywood positions because of inability to have his membership transferred from Local 644 to Local 659, though the Alliance by-laws permit.

Nick, Weston Still Out

The St. Louis court of appeals on Tuesday affirmed the ousting last April of John P. "Big" Nick and Clyde Weston from control of projectionists' Local 143. They have been indicted on a charge of extortion from theatre owners.

Davidson Named Receiver for Educational

William Bondy, federal judge in New York, this week appointed James A. Davidson as receiver for Educational Pictures under a $5,000 bond. Mr. Davidson was authorized to take immediate possession of all Educational's assets pending further court order. Creditors of the company are restrained from interfering with company assets. James F. Dealy was appointed attorney for the receiver.

Inactive Since 1938

The appointing of a receiver followed the company's filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy last Wednesday listing liabilities of $577,923 and assets of $352,422. Hearings on the bankruptcy plea have been referred to Referee John E. Joyce.

Educational, one of the oldest and best known short subject producers and distributors in the industry, has been inactive since 1938 when a five-year deal for the distribution of its subjects by Twentieth Century-Fox expired and was not renewed.

Since that time Educational had been attempting to rebuild Grand National Pictures, control of which it purchased last year. Educational's 10 months of effort to refinance itself, and through it Grand National, collapsed last month when the Reconstruction Finance Corporation rejected a $450,000 loan application.

The petition, signed by E. W. Hammons, president and founder of the company some 25 years ago, listed Electrical Research Products, Inc., as the largest creditor with a claim of $241,673 against the company secured by a mortgage of Educational Studios, Inc., on studio property in California. Loyd Wright, as trustee in bankruptcy of Grand National Films, Inc., is listed at $200,000.

Other large creditors are Mr. Hammons, $50,000 for salary due; Jeremiah D. Maguire, $38,409 due on a lease; National City Bank, $18,251 due on a guaranty on Grand National notes, and Snider, Duke & Landis, $12,501 for legal fees.

Educational's principal asset, estimated at $250,000, is a mortgage of Educational Studios on studio equipment. Grand National Pictures and Educational Studios are listed as debtors of the bankrupt for $90,021 and $12,370, respectively. Other assets set forth are stock held by the company in Educational Films of America and Educational Studio.

Hammons Hearing Continues

Examination of Mr. Hammons in the Grand National liquidation continued on Friday in federal court in New York with Mr. Hammons testifying as to the details of a $9,000 loan made by Sally Hammons, his mother, to Grand National. This loan, after $3,000 had been repaid, Mr. Hammons said, had been assumed by Educational, the parent company. The examination was then adjourned to next Thursday.

Harry G. Fromberg, G. N. trustee, on Wednesday filed an affidavit disclosing net assets of $28,000 for the company after payment of administration expenses. He estimated total gross assets at $60,000.

On last Thursday F. G. Holleran, vice-president of the National City Bank, testified before Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr., about a loan of $25,000 granted to Grand National before the inception of bankruptcy proceedings.

Hollander & Bernheimer, English solicitors, were designated by Referee Olney to collect Grand National assets located in Great Britain.

Academy Nominates Awards Candidates

Rainbow" from the "Wizard of Oz," by Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen.

The nominations for the sound recording award are: "Balalaika," MGM; "Daytime Wife," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Gone With the Wind," Selznick-International; "The Great Victor Herbert," Paramount; "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," RKO; "Man of Conquest," Republic; "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia; "Of Mice and Men," Hal Roach; "Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," Warner Brothers and "When Tomorrow Comes," Universal.

Approximately 3,500 actors, writers, directors, producers and technicians have received ballots for nominations which close February 7th. The counting will be done by Price, Waterhouse certified public accountant firm. All pictures shown in the Los Angeles area up to midnight January 11th or nationally during 1939 are eligible for the awards.

New Radio Music Firm Begins Soon

Headed by Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, directors of Broadcast Music, Inc., met on Thursday at the New York offices of the corporation, 580 Fifth Avenue. They discussed financing of the corporation, and its possible starting operations, by March as the NAB's music source.

The corporation is the result of the NAB's decision, last summer, to stop paying fees to the American Society of Composers, Publishers and Authors. Building of a music publishing source was necessary. Mr. Miller, in a tour of the country's radio stations, obtained the pledges, it was said, of about 360.

"Slavers" Bought

Gennaro Rea, Sunday review editor of Il Progresso, of New York, a foreign language newspaper circulated in America, has sold an original screen story entitled "The Slavers" to a newly organized American motion picture company that will produce films at Cinecitta in Rome, Italy. Alessandro Blasetti, one of Italy's foremost directors, is slated to direct the picture.

Fan Publicity for Michaels

Tess Michaels of the United Artists publicity department in New York left Tuesday to work on fan magazine publicity and tieups with Frank Seltzer, head of publicity and advertising for the Hal Roach Studios in Hollywood.

"Louise" Record Claimed

A record for attendance at the Little Carnegie Playhouse, New York, over last weekend at the American premiere of Grace Moore's "Louise," was claimed by Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn, who are distributing in the U. S.

Steffes Better

The condition of Al Steffes, Northwest Allied leader now confined to the Providence Hospital in Washington, D. C., was reported to be much better this week. Steffes was stricken while attending the Allied board meeting last month.

Films Provide Emotional Purge, Says Dr. Brill

The motion picture provides an emotional purge for the public, its actors are scapegoats for the emotions of the people, Dr. A. A. Brill, psychiatrist and newly chosen chairman of the National Board of Review, told 400 delegates at the 25th annual luncheon of the organization Saturday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, closing a three-day convention.

Films for Escape

Motion pictures "commit adultery for us, they lie for us, they do everything for us; they can live so much better lives than we, the ordinary people, can," said Dr. Brill, who has been professor and lecturer on psychoanalysis at Columbia and New York University and at Post-Graduate Hospital, and president of the American Psychoanalytic Association. Films, he continued, provide an escape whether the ending be happy or tragic.

Defending the screen against the socalled intelligentsia with their charges of "Hollywood trash," Dr. Brill declared: "I am convinced that there are few movies that come from Hollywood that do not serve a social, rather than a vicious or empty purpose." Though he called stage technique still superior to that of the screen, he said that "we have every reason to be proud of what the motion picture producers have done; we feel certain they will go on advancing, as a great beneficial force for all mankind."

Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, chairman of the Board's school committee, demanded that children be permitted to see the truth in motion pictures. "We don't want censorship," she said. "That should be the job of parents. If our children do not see good pictures the fault is ours, as parents." She said she felt most adult pictures were good for children for from 10 to 14 years.

Early Industry a Topic

Speakers at the opening session Thursday were Francis Doublier on "Travels of a Cameraman in the Nineties"; Robert Gessner on "The Story Content of Early Films"; Norbert Lusk on "Dominant Personalities of the Silent Screen"; Elissa Landi on "An Actress and Her Work"; and Richard Griffith on "The Art of the Silent Film."

On Friday morning, the delegates saw "The Grapes of Wrath," and then sent a congratulatory telegram to Darryl Zanuck, producer, saying in part:

" . . . The National Board of Review will do everything in its power to make the public aware of so outstanding a film, and to urge box-office support of it."

Arthur Mayer, distributor and operator of the Rialto theatre, New York, a guest speaker, said the public did not support topical pictures. He said he favored them, and criticized reviewers who intimate the public is being deliberately deprived of "worthwhile" films.

Other speakers were Hans Burger, teacher at the New Theatre school and a director of the film "Crisis"; Albert S. Howson, scenario editor of Warner Brothers, and W. W. Whittinghill, Detroit educator.

OUTSIDE PRODUCERS FOR WARNERS; 11 "NAMES" IN NEW STUDIO JOBS

New Assignments for Capra, Riskin, Hubbard, Dietrich, Morosco, Cummings, Lloyd, Welles, Keaton, Stahl, Hughes

Production personnel placements figured largely this week in Hollywood happenings, involving 11 of considerable potential effect, on the type and quality of product for the season just ahead. With 1939-40 also in mind, Warner Brothers, at a special mid-winter convention in Chicago, decided to open its feature ranks to outside producers.

While Warner Bros. also was directing new effort to cleaning up this year's sales, besides acting on much other business, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Universal and Monogram were engrossed in sales drives, booking-and-billing campaigns.

New "big name" production personnel designations this week found Warner Brothers confirming the acquisition of the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin team for its production staff; Twentieth Century-Fox signing Lucien Hubbard, Ralph Dietrich and Walter Morosco as associate producers, besides increasing the scope of Sol Wurtzel's production activities and renewing the directorial contract of Irving Cummings.

RKO and Harold Lloyd designated the former comedian's first to be produced for that company, and the same company signed to continue Orson Welles. Columbia signed Buster Keaton to continue; Howard Hughes has decided to return as a producer, with Howard Hawks, and at United Artists a three-film producing arrangement was near the signing stage with John M. Stahl.

Warners Welcome Outside Producers

Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, commenting on the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin deal said that Warner Bros. is open to negotiations with leading outside producers. Warner Brothers formerly released Marion Davies-Cosmopolitan productions.

"This, however, means no slackening in pace of our own producing organization, which is definitely committed to negatives ranging in cost from $350,000 to $2,500,000," said Mr. Warner.

At the company's mid-winter district meeting in Chicago this week, Gradwell L. Sears, distribution head, said that the first Capra-Riskin release would be "The Life and Death of John Doe." Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, and Norman Moray, Vitaphone short subject sales manager, also spoke. Before leaving New York Mr. Moray gave his views on the results of a poll of 3,800 exhibitors, circuit and independent, by the company.

"We asked exhibitors," he said, "to catalogue, from one to 10, in order of preference, their liking for types of subject. The interest in, and response to, historical shorts is tops. The poll also indicates that the exhibitor is more shorts conscious than he's ever been, despite double bills."

The trend towards longer pictures is a factor in short subject popularity, Mr. Moray asserted.

"To my mind, the program can't take these bigger pictures, and support them with a small feature. They've got to use shorts."

He said Warners will make as many shorts as last year.

Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, telegraphed the Chicago sales meeting that the current schedule was the best ever, and singled out "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" for special mention.

SPANISH RECORDINGS ON "HUNCHBACK"

What RKO considers an innovation in Latin American picture exploitation is a series of six 15-minute 33⅓ r.p.m. electrical transcriptions in Spanish dramatizing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" with music and sound from the picture and the voices of nine Spanish-speaking radio actors.

Sets of recordings have been shipped to RKO's Latin American offices to arrange for local playing time over long wave stations, the first chapter to be broadcast six days ahead of the local opening. The air dramatization takes the place of six-chapter novelizations sent out to the Latin American press on leading productions.

The work was done by Russell Spaulding at the Reeves Laboratory, New York, with RKO's chief of foreign publicity, Mike Hoffay, assisting.

Twentieth Century-Fox Production Changes

Darryl F. Zanuck signed Lucien Hubbard, formerly with MGM, Warners and Paramount, to be an associate producer, and elevated Ralph Dietrich and Walter Morosco from production assistants to full rank associate producers. Mr. Dietrich and Mr. Morosco will jointly produce the next "Cisco Kid" and "Charlie Chan" productions.

Sol M. Wurtzel is to continue supervision of "B" product, but will devote more time to high-price pictures.

Mr. Zanuck renewed the contracts of Irving Cummings, director, and of players, Alice Faye, Richard Greene and Mary Healy.

William Kupper's Month began this week, the first of three months honoring Twentieth Century-Fox division managers in revenue campaigns. Mr. Kupper is Western division manager. March is designated for W. C. Gehring, Central, and April for William Sussman, Eastern.

RKO Signs Welles, Lloyd

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, signed a contract with Orson Welles to produce, direct and act in a third picture for RKO.

"Three Girls and a Gob" will be the first Harold Lloyd production to be released by RKO. Mr. Lloyd will not appear in it.

In the Ned Depinet drive, after a five-week trip covering 38 exchanges, Captain Herb MacIntyre arrived in New York to meet the New York exchange personnel, headed by Bob Wolff. The drive closes on May 10th.

March has been designated Smith Month by RKO and Smith will compete against Smith—Cresson Smith, western and southern division manager, vs. Andy Smith, eastern and Canadian.

Columbia Signs Keaton

Columbia Pictures has signed Buster Keaton for two more comedies on the 1939-40 "all star" schedule. This will bring his season's total to four.

Hughes To Make Two

Howard Hughes, millionaire oil man and air record speedster, plans to return to production within 90 days. He has signed a two-picture agreement with Howard Hawks. One story will be one by Ernest Hemingway and another by Ben Hecht. The pictures will be made at the General Service studio and probably will be released through Warners.

UA To Release "Westerner"

Samuel Goldwyn informed United Artists this week that he would deliver "The Westerner." Other pictures in work, including "The Little Foxes," "Black Gold" and "Tahiti," were not mentioned. Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour are to be co-starred in "Tahiti." Arthur Tuckerman is adapting the story.

John Stahl is in New York for home office conferences on his first independently produced picture, to start in Hollywood after two weeks.

Republic Holding Meetings

Discussions with regard to a closer working arrangement of Republic's sales and production departments were to be had Thursday in New York as the second series of quarterly sales meetings of the company opened at the New York Athletic Club. On Saturday there will be a similar meeting in Chicago, to be followed by regional meetings in Atlanta, Dallas and at the studio. James R. Grainger, president, will be in charge of the sessions.

Monogram's "Rip Van Winkle"

A budget of $350,000, said by Monogram to be its new high, has been allocated to "Rip Van Winkle." Camera work is to begin in March.

The Denver Exchange has climbed to top place, passing Charlotte, in the second week of March for Monogram playdate drive, according to Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, who was to leave Thursday on a six weeks tour of 15 cities in the interest of the drive.

Universal Officials Tour

Universal's executives are visiting the company's branches.

W. A. Scully, general sales manager, went to Boston; F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, went to Nashville and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, to Kansas City. Leo Abrams, short subject sales manager, is touring branches.

Elson Back from Coast

Norman Elson, sales manager of Film Alliance of the United States, returned to New York on Monday, after a two-week trip to the Coast, involving several deals. Intermountain Theatres, of Salt Lake City, has booked "Torpedoed" and "The Challenge"; the Esquire theatre, in Minneapolis, has bought the entire schedule; the World, Chicago, bought "Port of Shadows" and "Citadel of Silence"; Consolidated Amusement Corporation, of Honolulu, booked "Treachery on the High Seas" and "Spy Bureau."

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FACE BATTLE FOR PAY RAISE AND CAN'T PASS IT ON

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Called upon to foot the bill for all manner of film trade expenses, already paying heavily as taxed victims of the Chancellery, British exhibitors are faced with the prospect of another financial riddle, and the problem of paying Paul without the remotest possibility of robbing Peter to help in doing so.

Theatre Workers Ask Raise

Provoked by the swift rise in the cost of living, a rise estimated in the most reserved circles as at least 15 per cent, theatre workers, through their union, the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, already have launched a nationwide campaign for a wage increase, discreetly identified as a "war bonus." Exhibitors, through their Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, so far have not expressed objection to the principle, in some instances, in fact, have approved the idea. One circuit, the Granada Theatres group directed by Sidney Bernstein, gave its employees an all-round bonus as a Christmas box. For various reasons, however, a general wage increase does not seem likely to be forthcoming from the exhibitor camp. Trouble is not unlikely as a result.

The plain fact, one which will color the whole situation, is that whether he approves it or not, and for the most part he does, the British exhibitor will not find it economic to bear the brunt of further wage payments, for the simple economic reason that he will not find it possible to pass it on. Complications of the economic law, and of the admission price in its relation to the theatre tax, stand in the way. As a merchant selling a commodity to a consumer public he is in a unique position, selling at a price schedule dictated by other considerations than those of supply and demand, of market elasticity and so forth which govern trade in normal goods. The acuteness of the economic problem thus is likely to provoke, certainly it is unlikely to prevent, a difficult labour situation.

Demand "War Bonus"

Already the employees' union has launched its campaign by demanding a war bonus from the CEA branches up and down the country in areas in which their members are employed. No action has been taken on a national scale by the CEA, and it is not likely to be taken unless a very general and emphatic demand is forthcoming from the branches themselves. The wage rates and working conditions vary. The 38 wages and hours agreements achieved by the CEA and the union differ widely in detail. It would be difficult if not downright impracticable to do anything in regard to wage bonuses on a national scale. So the General Council, having been consulted by the local branches, has passed the buck back to them for their own individual solution.

Despite the superficial amicability between exhibitor headquarters and the leaders of the labour union, despite joint junketings and mutual professions of goodwill, this is not likely to satisfy the labour leaders. Indeed, a diehard attitude, notable in more than one exhibitor district, with hotheaded expressions of enmity to all things syndicalist and socialist may aggravate the plebian camp.

Meanwhile the reasons which impel the exhibitor doubts are not without logic or economic point. The backing which the Trades Union Congress, official pivot of the British labour unions, has given the theatrical union move, and the support it has been promised in Whitehall and in Parliament, do not affect the facts of the case.

The most obvious thesis, say the exhibitors, would be that if a wage increase were granted the employees, the exhibitor would have to increase his admissions in order to pay for it. This is easier in appearance than in fact. The most popular reigning price in British cinemas today is sixpence, the tax-free "tanner." Halfpennies are out of the question, for various reasons obvious to the British purchaser of entertainment. If the sixpenny admission were raised to sevenpence the admission tax would be applied at once. The extra penny would go to the Government. If the sixpence were raised to eightpence the tax would be three halfpence. The exhibitor thus, out of a twopenny increase, takes a halfpenny—less than a cent in American values—to pay the wage increase. This, the exhibitor affirms with Euclidian finality, is ridiculous.

Prices Found Unstable

This assumes, too, that if prices were raised from sixpence to eightpence the patronage would remain stable. Experience long has shown that it would not remain stable; it would just fade away. The round "tanner" is the price the British working class like to pay, though a vast body pay even less because they cannot afford to pay more. Exhibitors already facing the rise in the cost of living, carrying heavy taxation burdens, would not court that possibility. They are aware that the rise in living costs and the increase in taxation is having a very definite and deterrent effect at the theatre box office.

The more the exhibitor makes at the box office, the more he is called upon to pay the chancellor of the exchequer. Any increase of admission prices would call for him to pay equivalent tax increases. Kenneth Nyman, former president of the CEA, a bachelor of science, and a skilled economist, throws an even darker hue over the scene. He suggests that if the sixpenny admission were raised to ninepence, superficially the lowest figure at which the process becomes economic, three halfpence would go in theatre tax. After rentals had been paid the exhibitor would be left with fivepence. In view of the price increase, at least a penny of this would be considered by the revenue authorities as increased profits. Three farthings of this penny would be demanded in taxes, leaving him with a farthing to pay his wage increases!

DEUTSCH BLIND-BOOKS WITH BOARD BLESSING

Oscar Deutsch, chief of Britain's Odeon circuit, a director of United Artists and backer of British films—he gave "Stars Look Down" a conclusive financial fillip—has thrown the cat among the Quota pigeons by declaring that he not only has been blind-booking films for many months but has had the Board of Trade approval in doing so.

What is more, the Board of Trade, administrator of the Flms Act with its unequivocal and prohibitive clauses against advance booking in any shape or form, has gone on record that it has given Mr. Deutsch its consent to book films in advance and that it would be prepared to give a like blessing to others on similar terms. Precisely what these terms are is not known at the moment.

According to Mr. Deutsch, he has been guaranteeing circuit bookings in advance to British films. "Half a dozen producers have availed themselves of this arrangement," said the Odeon chief.

His arrangement was not to advance money but to approve stars, story and script. Finance easily was obtained by the producers with this guarantee.

Producer-exhibitor circles have been working for months on a scheme of cooperative production based on exhibitor guaranteed playdates. The greatest snag has been that of getting 'round the advance booking clauses of the Act. If Mr. Deutsch's scheme is as easy as it appears to be, an entirely new avenue may have opened to independent producers.

Trailer-Made Accounts To National Screen

Trailer-Made, Inc., organized two years ago by E. Schwartz, is liquidating and is turning over all its accounts, said to be 1,100, to National Screen Service. Existing contracts will be serviced by National Screen on the prevailing terms of the Trailer-Made contracts until they expire. Mr. Schwartz in a letter to customers said that there are not a sufficient number of theatres who favor "our type of trailers exclusively to make it possible to carry on our business."

Advertising Accessories, Inc., subsidiary of National Screen, has taken over the independent poster renting service of Billy Bein, Cincinnati, and that of Homer L. Blackwell in Kansas City, according to Charles L. Casanave, vice-president and general manager. Mr. Bein will assume an executive post in the New York office and Mr. Blackwell, head of the Independent Poster Agency in Kansas City, will hold an executive post in the midwestern city.

Donovan Firm Retained by RKO

Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard has been retained by the new RKO company for defense of the Government anti-trust suits, despite the fact that the law firm of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett is counsel for the company. The Donovan firm was retained as special counsel for RKO in the Government anti-trust proceedings while the reorganization was continuing. The Donovan firm was the counsel for Irving Trust Company, trustee for RKO while the company was being reorganized.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—Swell picture. Couldn't suit my crowd any better than his one. Above average business.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—Fast, snappy comedy. Comments good. Enjoyed by everyone. This series definitely demanded here. Business good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 22-27.—Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AND HOW THEY GREW: Edith Fellows, Dorothy Peterson—Good program picture from well known story. Will please. Played December 25.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Adolphe Menjou, Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Joseph Calleia—This was a very fine picture but we suffered from the cold wave too much to enjoy good business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: William Holden, Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia—Good. Holden is truly a golden boy. Has plenty on the ball. Does a splendid job in first picture but somehow this didn't do business. Played January 26-27.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

RIO GRANDE: Charles Starrett, Ann Doran—Our customers enjoyed this immensely on the weekend. But didn't do as well as we might have. Weather too cold.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THOSE HIGH GREY WALLS: Walter Connolly, Iris Meredith—Here, gentlemen, is a picture. One of the best we have played for tops in audience appeal. Think of it, a prison picture without a riot. Astounding. Do not be afraid of this one any day of the week. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—A good story and excellent acting, not to forget Max Steiner's appropriate musical accompaniment which added appreciably to the picture, all combined to make this stirring and unforgettable drama one of the best productions we have screened for a long, long time. There seems to be little question but what the persons who have to do with the issuing of the Academy Award will have to seriously consider Miss Davis for the honor. Her excellent portrayal of the wealthy and spoiled "Judith Traherne," who was transformed from a young flippant to an unspoiled wife and who learned to conquer fear in the face of certain death is the best bit of acting Hollywood has given us for many months. In order to alleviate the feeling of depression which was bound to ensue, we deviated from the usual routine by showing the short subjects last. Even with this change in procedure, many an eye that shed tears was discernable as the men left the auditorium. If your audience likes touching stories and the best in acting, arrange for them to see Bette Davis at her best; Geraldine Fitzgerald, who gives a performance that definitely stamps her as a future star; George Brent, the tactful understanding doctor and husband, et al. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 27.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Very good picture. Just the kind that goes over big in small town. Played December 10-12.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, May Robson, Frank McHugh—Wonderful production. Don't see how it could go wrong in any town. Played to better than usual business.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Again it proves that it takes stars to bring them in. Mr. Leo has the stars. That's the answer to this picture. The story is only fair but Powell and Loy draw them in in droves, so give this your best playing time, as it will not let you down. Be sure to run the last reel out, as there is a teaser on "Balalaika" that does you no harm. Running time, 102 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—I think Eddy fans will be a little disappointed in this one. A little too sophisticated for small town. I think we would have appreciated Ilona Massey in her first big production in a different type of story.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—If your patrons don't enjoy this one, they are hopeless. I would say this picture will please 100 per cent of your audience. Miss Sothern is perfect in this type of picture and a couple more like this should establish her as a definite box office attraction. Business was off on the engagement but that is usually the case with our midweek shows and I cannot truthfully find any fault with the picture. Running time, 73 minutes. Played January 17-18.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HELL BELOW (reissue): Robert Montgomery, Robert Young, Walter Huston—This film played here on chance date. Believe first in N. America reissue. Comments excellent. Business very good. Film in good shape. Outside of love scenes, was up to date. Action terrific. Should clean up any place with good campaign. Running time, 105 minutes. Played January 8-13.—Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Virginia Weidler, Frank Morgan. Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Much the same as other Hardys, and pleased. Believe our patrons would have liked it better if lighter scenes had been substituted for the sick room scene. Quite a few commented that the Hardys were practically all alike. Business average, weather bad. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 3-4.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Lew Ayres, Greer Garson—Divided opinions on this one but no serious complaints. Business 'way below average. Weather bad. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 8-9.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Had fewer good comments on this than any of the other Kildares. Ayres well liked and with good pictures should develop into a leading star. Weather bad, business slightly below average. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 15-16.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Jack Haley, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Nice business. Beautiful picture. More for children than adult patronage. It is a top picture. Played January 18-20.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—Fine for Class A trade. Small situations will starve with it. Rosalind Russell does a grand job. Played December 25-26.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

ROLL, WAGONS, ROLL: Tex Ritter—Doubled with "I Stand Accused." Average western business with bad weather. All of the western fans seemed well satisfied with this one. Autry and Rogers are still ahead of Ritter in our town but we could still use a lot of westerns good as this series. Running time, 52 minutes. Played January 12-13.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

STREETS OF NEW YORK: Jackie Cooper, Marjorie Reynolds, Dick Purcell, Martin Spellman—Played with "The Kansas Terrors." Especially liked by children and young people. Fair picture and good support for double Attendance slightly below average with bad weather. Played January 5-6.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

STUNT PILOT: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, Milburn Stone—Very good for a double bill but no business. We think the cold weather was the answer. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Good picture. Too rough for ladies. Played December 24-26.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Very disappointed on this one. Fell flat at box office. Had big church Beano around the corner that didn't help any. Played January 28-30.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Oh, when will Paramount learn what the people want at the box office. The biggest flop since we opened the theatre over four years ago. Duck this one if you possibly can. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Einar T. Bank, Rialto Theatre, St. Charles, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SOME LIKE IT HOT: Bob Hope, Shirley Ross, Gene Krupa and His Orchestra—Pleasing little comedy with music by Gene Krupa's orchestra. Double featured with "Bad Lands." Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 12-14.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—As fine a picture as we have played in some time. Although old and a bad print, we enjoyed above average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

KANSAS TERRORS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hattan, Duncan Renaldo)—Played on double bill with "Streets of New York." The Mesquiteers series has slightly less than average western draw for us. The new cast not as pleasing as the original. Pleased the western fans. Business less than average. Weather bad. Running time, 57 minutes. Played January 5-6.—J. F. Hobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—A good action picture which should go over well on a Friday-Saturday playdate. Entire cast did fine work and the picture should satisfy the fans. However, it is not the big picture RKO would have you think it to be, and it does not compare with "Drums along the Mohawk." I made the mistake of playing this one on a Sunday opening date. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 14-16.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

CONSPIRACY: Allan Lane, Linda Hayes—Thin, impossible story, unconvincing acting, crudely produced, and your patrons will wonder why they passed up a good radio program to come and see it. Just one of those things that incites Neely bills, etc. Running time, 59 minutes. Played January 19-20.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—This looks like the beginning of a successful new series, although I am not in favor of the series idea. Everyone seemed to enjoy its homespun flavor and there is some very good humor in it. The young girl should go places. This is just right for you ruralites who complain about "class" pictures. I imagine the other feature, "Hollywood Cavalcade," was the draw that brought good receipts, however. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 26-27.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, May Robson, George Sanders, Zasu Pitts —This is very well done but didn't draw too well. Those who saw it seemed to like it. Some of the night scenes are just a little too dark to suit me. Contact hospitals if possible; they'll surely like it. It isn't too full of propaganda, so don't worry about that angle. Germans in general are not portrayed as villains, only one or two of them. In fact, it is a very good plea for peace. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 25.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—The polo-playing, race-going gang out in Hollywood, according to all the dope you get in the movie pulp mags, might be the reason for such pictures as the above, as to which there have not been worse for some time, and that they did to Warner Baxter who, if given half a chance, can put a performance with the best of them. No wonder they are squawking about business. That is just a zephyr to what the public do on pictures such as these. Absolutely no excuse for releasing or the exhibitor for running it if the booking could have been filled with another feature. Lay it out; you will be better off.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver, Virginia Field—Good picture; good business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Another light, enjoyable rib tickler. We took an awful licking on this one due to the weather and our playing position, but I can vouch for the fact that those present had a good time and I am in favor of more pictures being made with that end in view. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 21-23.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Less than average attendance due entirely to bad weather. Feature was very pleasing and seemed to be enjoyed by everyone. There was just enough skating to add to the interest of the picture. Believe Sonja would still be tops without the skates. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 24-25.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr., Cliff Edwards—Best Jane Withers to date and should help Jane along toward the top. Very entertaining, especially for the young folks. Withers' have been only slightly better than average draw here. Attendance off due to bad weather. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 1-2.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr., Cliff Edwards—Not big but good entertainment and got by nicely on Sunday and did fairly good business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 21-23.—Einar T. Bank, Rialto Theatre, St. Charles, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr., Cliff Edwards—The same old story. Jane gets better every time. It sure was good to see Cliff Edwards back again. He is just as good as he ever was, if not better. It is a shame that Fox won't give Jane some of their best stars for a supporting cast. It seems like Jane has to pull the crowd in alone. Some day I guess they will be putting her in big color pictures with cast such as Don Ameche, Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson or some of their other big actors. I am looking forward to her next picture, which I think Gene Autry plays with her. This ought to be a knockout. She can sing, dance and act. I can't see what else Fox wants her to do before they give her a real supporting cast. Double billed with "Laugh It Off." Business bad, zero weather. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 25-26.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Interesting story, good color, good cast and a knockout Keystone Cop sequence, but there was something the matter with it. My crowd would go for comedies similar to the one shown in this. Why don't they try making some of them again? I doubled this with "Meet Dr. Christian" and did very well at the box office. I think the trouble with "Hollywood Cavalcade" is that some of the dialogue is overlong with not enough changes in camera angles to keep up the interest. However, I still say it is worth seeing for the old fashioned parts alone. Running time, 96 minutes. Played January 26-27.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This seemed to please but I have not used the Jones family pictures. Therefore, they are not established in my house and did not draw very well. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 5-7.—Loyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—Another big one shot by the weather. We just can't make them come out when the thermometer gets around zero, but who could blame them? This should be a natural in Kentucky and especially good anywhere in the South, although the small attendance ruined my appetite for entertainment on that night. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 24-25.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—Good picture; good business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOO BUSY TO WORK: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Joan Davis—I think I'll vote for the Neely Bill just to get rid of this series of imitations of a popular family picture. It seems as if each gets worse. Certainly my public are not going for them and they are not taking in the film rental.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Ann Gillis, Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Again we went back for want of better product and used this on a weekend. The results were excellent. A good picture for all. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: David Niven, Loretta Young, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—This film definitely enjoyed. Stars good. Business good. Every woman raved about this film. Personally thought it just fair, but receipts count. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 15-20.—Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—Very good. Done in color from a good story. Needs to be sold as it does not have box office names to bring them in. Running time, 115 minutes. Played January 9-10.—Loyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Silly, ridiculous, but plenty of laughs. We did very good business. Comments generally poor but still they kept coming for six days and midnght. With campaign should gross well any place. Running time, 86 minutes. Played Jnuary 1-8. Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—Good action picture which should do extra business in small towns. Bad weather hurt us. Played January 1-3.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronge.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Jascha Heifetz, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—Will please the music lovers, especially. The action fans will not care for it. Played December 29-31.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—This was the first Durbin we had played and cannot see where she will be box office for us. Singing is too much toward the classical side for our patrons but feature was generally liked. Business below average, weather bad. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 10-11.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—Perhaps not as big as some of the Durbins but will please. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 16-17.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

LAUGH IT OFF: Constance Moore, Johnny Downs, Edgar Kennedy—Double billed with "High School." Just fair. Business bad, below zero weather. Played January 25-26.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, C, Aubrey Smith—Excellent picture. Not a good drawing card here but if you can get them in the house this sure will please. Played December 22-24.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, Beulah Bondi, C. Aubrey Smith—Gloria Jean has real ability. Beautiful voice and irresistible personality. Swell picture. Played January 21-23—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Played this one late. Was short Sunday date so put it on and packed the house. Running time, 78 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Strictly for adults only, but failed to draw them. Might please the doctors and nurses. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey. Okla. Small town patronage.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, John Payne, Gale Page—Very interesting. Plenty of action. Good cast. Played January 21-23.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffry Lynn, Gladys George—Fair picture. Not much at B. O. Warner putting out too many of this kind. Public fed up with gangsters. Played December 3-5.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BUILDING OF BOYS: Happy Hour, No. 2—All city theatres should play this, especially if there is a Boys' Club in town. Let them know about it and they'll bring their parents. It is interesting anywhere but is especially so in large places. It shows what the Boys' Clubs are doing for the youth of America. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 9: Songs of the West—Believe it or not, the audience sang so loud that it was difficult to keep sufficent volume coming from the screen. Since playing this one, we have had numerous requests for these subjects.—Lloyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLLYWOOD GRADUATION: Color Rhapsodies—Just a filler. The cartoon market is being overcrowded.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S RODEO: Scrappy Cartoons—These Scrappy Cartoons are not so hot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1—Film fans will enjoy this as it shows how makeup on well known stars is applied. It would be very appropriate on the same program as a "Blondie" or "Disputed Passage" as it is concerned with makeup for those characters. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A natural, easily sold and gives splendid satisfaction. Don't miss it. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOBBIES: MGM Miniatures—Entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LAND OF ALASKA NELLIE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Average travel talk. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LET'S TALK TURKEY: Pete Smith Specialties—Amusing. Running time, 10 minutes—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialties—Amusing short on bowling. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOUR ADD NAMES TO REPORTING LIST

This week's issue of "What the Picture Did for Me" marks the first appearance of reports from four showmen hailing from as many states. They are:

Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis.

Einar T. Bank, Rialto Theatre, St. Charles, Minn.

J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky.

Loyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Colo.

Read the reports of these exhibitors.

Paramount

MOMENTS OF CHARM OF 1940: Headliners—My patrons (?) have requested that I render a complaint to Paramount regarding this picture, so here goes: It was too, too short. The beautiful settings, numbers and musical renditions, vocal and orchestral, are excellent, so book it now and be prepared to receive the compliments of your patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: We had not used March of Time for quite some time. Have played "The Movies March On," "Soldiers with Wings," "Battle Fleets of England" and "Metropolis." We believe these are all subjects that should be shown in all theatres. Running time, 20 minutes.—Loyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

RADIO HOOKUP, A: Nu-Atlas Productions—This is terrible. Don't play it, even if they give it to you. After you see it, you will feel the same as your patrons do.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

WICKY-WACKY ROMANCE, A: Terry-Toons—There is no doubt about it. Terry-Toons are coming out of their rut. Some very original gags manage to earn plenty of laughs from the audience. The color is good and the animation is decidedly improving. Play it. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Universal

ANDY PANDA GOES FISHING: Lantz Colored Cartunes—Very good cartoon for the kids. Not very funny but instead it is cute. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SLAP HAPPY VALLEY: Lantz Cartunes—At last Universal has made a good cartoon. This one drew plenty of laughs and is excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SNOW FOLLIES: Lillian Roth—It was a folly to make this musical as it is no good in all respects. Pass it. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 66—This series is very good and this one especially so. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED, NO. 1: Color Parade—A diversified program makes this a very interesting short. Good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SNIFFLES AND THE BOOKWORM: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN COURTS

Appeals Court Upholds Verdict Against Patron

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week upheld the decision of a lower court in dismissing the appeal of Miss Cora L. Hart, a patron, who was held up and robbed of her pocket book in the ladies' room of the Paramount theatre in Times Square, New York. The court ruled that a motion picture theatre is not responsible for the assault and robbery of a woman patron in its secluded ladies room even though no matron or usher is assigned to furnish protection.

"To assume that the presence of a matron in the ladies' room would have prevented the assault is merely to speculate upon the degree of criminality possessed by the thief," the court wrote. "Human expereince proves that the presence of two or more women does not prevent a thief from plying his calling, nor protect from assault and injury one who courageously attempts resistance."

The court added that the assault upon the plaintiff could not have been foreseen nor could it be said to be "the reasonable or probable consequence of the absence of a matron from the ladies' room or an usher from that particular passageway."

Pathe News Victor In Recording Case

A suit involving the recording of music filed by Floyd Hynes, an orchestra leader, against Pathe News has been denied a rehearing by the appellate division of the New York supreme court. In 1938, Pathe News shot scenes of the rehearsal of the annual Circus Saints and Sinners banquet. The Hynes orchestra played for the rehearsal and the music was recorded and incorporated into a regular newsreel release. Mr. Hynes sued Pathe seeking $20 per musician on the grounds that the music was used in a motion picture.

Following a trial in a New York municipal court on January 11, 1939, the case was dismissed. It was appealed to the appellate division which affirmed the action of the lower court and subsequently denied a motion for rehearing.

Mae West Suit

After a delay of three years the suit brought by Mark Linder, playwright, against Mae West for $1,000,000 damages was started in superior court in Los Angeles this week. In addition Mr. Linder asks for an accounting of the profits earned by the film "She Done Him Wrong" and half of Miss West's profit from the sale of the screen play and her appearance in it. The complaint charges that in 1928 the playwright gave Miss West permission to use "Chatham Square," which was produced as a stage play called "Diamond Lil." The understanding was, the complaint claims, that if the play was sold for a motion picture she was to share all profits equally with him. It was filmed as "She Done Him Wrong," the complaint states.

Sonja Henie To Testify

Sonja Henie has been directed to testify before trial on application of Dennis R. Scanlan, plaintiff in a suit for $92,000. Mr. Scanlan claims to have placed the defendant with Twentieth Century-Fox as an actress and seeks 15 per cent of her earnings with that company under a contract he claims to have made with Miss Henie.

Supreme Court Denies Stirn Rehearing Plea

The United States supreme court this week denied the petition of Ernest W. Stirn for a rehearing in the RKO bankruptcy case. The high court had previously denied Mr. Stirn's request for a review of his petition. Mr. Stirn represents minority stockholders.

Weigh Brady Motion

Thomas Rowe, circuit judge, in St. Louis this week took under advisement a motion to dismiss the extortion indictment against Edward M. Brady, state representative, which grew out of the charged payment of $10,000 to him in October, 1936, when St. Louis motion picture theatre owners were negotiating a new wage contract with Local 143 of the Moving Picture and Projection Machine Operators Union, an International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees affiliate.

Building Henderson Theatre

Moon Theatres, Inc., of which H. J. Stallings is president, and S. S. Stevenson, secretary-treasurer, has begun construction of a theatre in Henderson, N. C., to seat 700 at a reported cost of 75,000. It will be the fourth house operated by the circuit in Henderson.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE PROOF OF IT

Selection by the judges for the 1939 Quigley Grand Awards is a happy illustration of the wide horizon covered by the Competitions. Ray Bell, Silver Grand winner, answers for the big city first run. Lige Brien, the Bronze Grand winner, typifies the small town subsequent. What distinguishes both men is the quality common among top theatremen, regardless of situation—the week-in and week-out ability to milk a date dry for all the exploitation cream there is to be had.

As such, Bell and Brien represent the fullest expression of what the Awards are intended for—to provide inescapable proof that hard-hitting showmanship applied 52 weeks every year is the answer to many of the industry's ills; to honor the theatremen who do the best job of proving it.

In further support, the sixth annual Judging and luncheon saw the largest turnout yet of industry executives. As one, they endorsed the confirmation of these purposes by the speakers.

EVIDENCE TO BE CREDITED

It happens that a member changes jobs. Previously, he contributed frequently. In the new spot he drops out of club activities. More often than not, the Round Tabler explains his new bossmen are ag'in' it, just don't care for managers to have their names in print.

You sit back, waiting for things to change, for the headmen to see the light. They often do, as, for instance, the following from a valued but "silent" member who sends along a fat campaign with this significant notation that does a lot of speaking for itself:

"Long absent, an old-time Round Tabler returns to the fold. Our powers that be have got rid of a phobia that managers' exploitations sent to your department were a bid for personal glory. Now they rightly believe that it is an evidence that a manager is selling his pictures and giving attention to exploitation. Orders have gone forth that we must send in our campaigns and get our names into your Fortnightly Mentions and make our bids for your Awards—or else."

Never figured your Round Table's service to include "ridin' herd" on members. But we're willing to take over for the above outfit since the boys themselves seem eager enough to use these pages to produce the "evidence" of their worth at the boxoffice.

SHORT, SHORT STORY

Long noted for frigidity in the matter of picture tieups, one of the dailies in St. Cloud, Minn., last season put on a football score-guessing contest. None of the theatres were invited to cooperate. So Manager Joe Ryan, of Minnesota Amusement's Eastman, offered admissions to his house as extra prizes, in exchange for the usual publicity credits.

The paper finally decided to try it. Immediately, interest picked up. Entries grew each week, the theatre tiein admittedly helping no little to make a success of the project. Ryan is already set for the same, next fall.

"What is more important however," Joe writes, "is the fact that we have broken the ice with the paper and will be right on the job when they are ready for their next promotional idea. They have indicated their readiness to count us in."

THANK YOU, HARRY MANDEL

The 'phone rang, and it was Harry Mandel, RKO Theatres advertising and publicity director, able theatreman who had come up from the ranks. While he knew that RKO managers were frequently mentioned in these pages, Mr. Mandel desired wider representation from the circuit. To encourage this participation, the executive asked to have his Round Table membership renewed and publicly announced as an expression of approval of this department's value in building grosses and manpower.

In addition to the pictorial background of the Warner, Memphis, front for "Brother Rat and a Baby", the display carried an audible effect produced by an imitation of an infant crying at intervals. This was obtained by mechanical combination of motor, eccentric working a bellows forcing air through toy whistle, the responding effect controlled by tin cup and rubber bands. Credits go to "Ole" Davenport, artist; Jean Dearth, electrician, according to A. B. Morrison, manager.

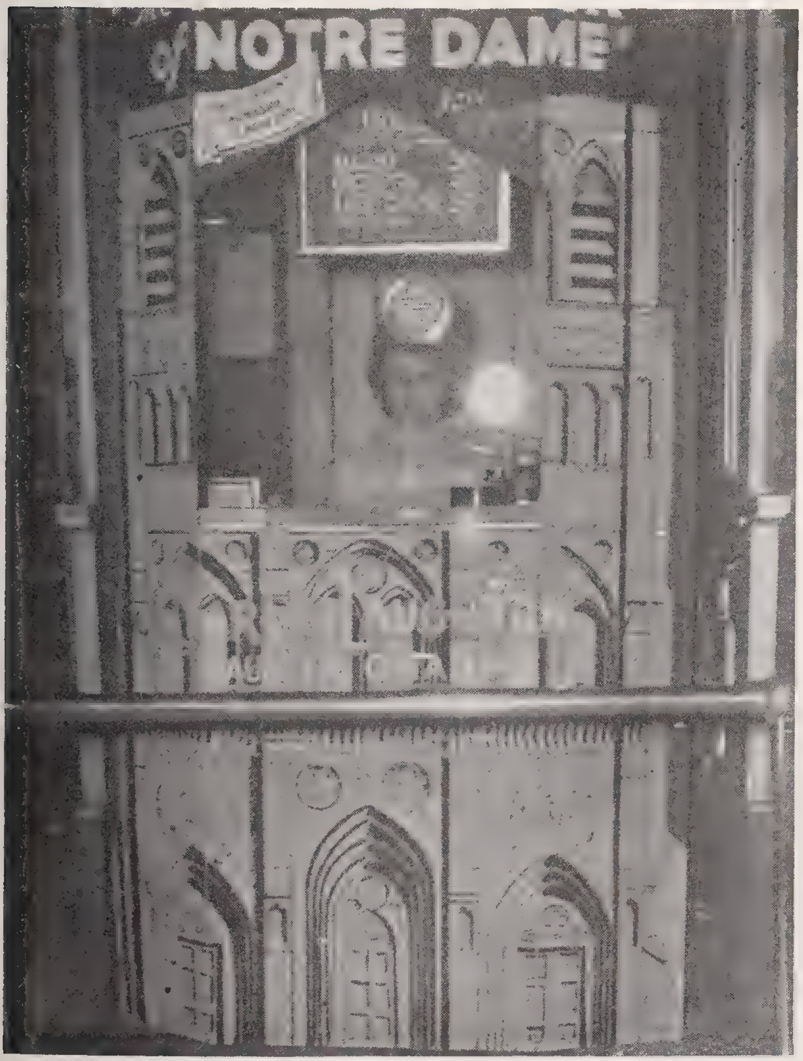
Entirely promoted from local dealer and awarded from stage was bannered car illustrated above, advertising Francis J. Faille's "Judge Hardy and Son" engagement at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass. Merchant also paid for herald distribution, car being driven about town six days ahead and also parked in front of theatre.

Compoboard replica of the famed Notre Dame Cathedral entirely covering the boxoffice, cashier working through window, was the attractor conceived and executed by George Laby for that date at the Calvin Theatre, in Northampton, Mass. Display was also used by the theatreman at the Victory, in Holyoke, from which spot he was recently transferred.



Signs with appropriate copy pinned to the backs of skaters on the lake at Central Park selling "Everything Happens at Night" was the stunt arranged by Manager Ansel Weinstein of the RKO 58th Street Theatre, New York. Copy included cast, playdates and title.

Shepherd Arranges Election For "Little Old New York"

The excitement last week in Miami Beach was over an election. It wasn't to select city officials. The wide publicity gained had to do with the voting for Mayor and Mayoress of "Little Old New York," engineered by Sonny Shepherd, with the local Daily News for the premiere of the Twentieth Century-Fox date, at Wometco's Lincoln.

To insure citywide attention, Sonny garnered as candidates, every topnotch stage, radio, screen and nightclub name in town. A raft of votes were cast with interest kept high by the daily building given by the cooperating paper. In keeping with the atmosphere of the picture and campaign, Shepherd arranged for an old-fashioned fireworks display and a bannered parade led by the Mayors of Miami and Miami Beach. Fife and drum corps and other units were in line.

Planes flying premiere pennants covered the entire area, as did the famed Goodyear blimps. Political ballyhoo speeches were made at night clubs, theatres, and other prominent spots, the picture and theatre being plugged in every pitch. For the attention of the thousands at the Hialeah track, a race was named after the title.

Utilities Tieup Made By Smith for "Light"

Planted in two daily newspapers was City Manager Clyde Smith's serialization for "The Light That Failed" at the Paramount in Hot Springs, Ark. Tieup was effected with local light company whereby three attractive window displays were secured each tied up with good lighting equipment that does not fail, company also taking ads in two papers.

Animated lobby display week ahead consisted of rotating bulb, causing light to go on and off every five seconds, heralds were inserted in regular house organ which received wide distribution and 60-foot banner was strung across entire building.

"Herbert" Openings Coincide With Birthday of Composer

February first was the birthday of Victor Herbert. It also was the opening of "The Great Victor Herbert" around the Loew's New York neighborhood circuit. This coincidence resulted in an exploitation field day for Oscar A. Doob's exploiteers.

Representatives of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, an important singing society of which the composer was the founder, together with Fritzi Scheff, famous prima donna, made a pilgrimage to the Herbert monument in Central Park, where a memorial service was held. Miss Scheff sang "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life."

At the Paradise Theatre, Bronx, a special Herbert program was staged on opening night. The St. Nicholas of Tollentine glee club of 72 voices, and the Evander Childs High School band appeared on the stage. At the Valencia, Jamaica, the Jamaica Chorale Society, together with the star of the Composer's "Eileen" appeared on the stage. The New York College of Music, the St. Agnes Cathedral Choir, and a number of other musical organizations, made appearances at other Loew's Theatres.

St. Valentine's Day will coincide with later showings of the picture. Special window streamers, photo enlargements, and Valentine heralds have been prepared. Some theatres will stage special amateur contests, only requirement being that contestant sing or play some Victor Herbert composition.

Father Murray Sees Press For Unterfort on "69th"

Harry Unterfort of Keith's Theatre, in Syracuse, for "Fighting 69th" arranged to have Father Murray, who succeeded Father Duffy as Chaplain of the 69th, meet several prominent people at the theatre and give a press interview and told of knowing Cagney as a boy, both living in the same neighborhood. Interview was good for several newspaper stories with art. Picture was sponsored by the American Legion, Knights of Columbus and Catholic Women's Club.

Leading Club Tied By Hal Sheridan for Benefit Drive

Seeking about for an idea to sell "Ninotchka" at the Paramount, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for an early December date, Hal Sheridan, Tri-States city manager, worked out a benefit idea with the Young Men's Bureau of the chamber of commerce, the complete details of which are currently reported here. Composed of some 225 members, including the leading and most active young professional and business men, the Bureau tied in with Sheridan on a cooperative ticket selling and promotional campaign. Twenty-five per cent of these outsides sales were set aside for the benefit of the local winter sports club, to provide seasonal facilities for local children.

Week ahead, a "kick-off" dinner was held to inaugurate the drive, with all members in attendance. Banquet hall was decorated with picture advertising, also placed at all plates. Drive chairman, majors, captains and teams were appointed, and services of the chamber of commerce office staff donated to handle daily reports and accounting. Dinner was a pep meeting, with Sheridan explaining the merits of the picture and its selling possibilities. Each worker was supplied with tickets and heralds. Chamber of commerce also put on a telephone campaign to help the ticket sale and the newspapers gave valuable support.

Director Gives Gift Case

In all, over 2,000 extra tickets were sold which was celebrated at another dinner after the drive. This occasion was featured with the presentation of an engraved silver cigarette case from Ernst Lubitsch to member selling greatest number of tickets.

Outstanding in Sheridan's added exploitation in advance of the date was a midnite screening for a good cross-section of locals. At the close, comments from many of those attending were recorded, the record later used over WMT, local station, to plug the date.

SELLS POWER HEADS ON HALF-PAGE AD

It took a special meeting of the heads of the Bridgeport, Conn., utilities company to accomplish it, Matt Saunders reports, but after he explained the value of co-op advertising the power people went for a five-column, 16-inch layout for "Little Old New York" at Loew's Poli.

Title, star and scene cuts ran across the top, tiein copy reading: "It makes little difference whether you live in Little Old New York or our own bigger, better Bridgeport, electricity plays a most important part in our lives." Theatre and picture credits were prominently listed.

Young Holds Radio Court at Theatre With 'Quiz' Hour

Sponsored by local furniture company and held at theater on Sunday afternoons, immediately before the first show, is a broadcast termed "Quiz Court" and arranged by Manager Leo Young, Strand, Portand, Me. It's an audience-participating program with cash and tickets given for correct answers, the procedure being as follows:

The Presiding Judge, a locally known announcer, takes his place behind the judge's bench on the stage, as the court is called to order by "Bailiff Hay," who is Harlan Taylor, assistant service chief of staff. Broadcast opens with a plug for the theatre and sponsor, plus explanation of the quiz. Ushers with microphones work the aisles as questions are asked. Patrons answering incorrectly, are judged "guilty." Those answering correctly are found "not guilty" and given awards of from one to five dollars, depending on the importance of the questions asked, as determined in advance.

Audience Supplies Questions

Each week questions are solicited from the audience who are asked to furnish answers and proof of same. Question selected weekly by the Judge as the most difficult and offered as the most important of the broadcast, wins for the sender a wrist watch furnished by the sponsor and presented from the stage. Half-way in the program, a question regarding star of current picture at the theatre is asked which allows for another commercial, repeated at the end of the program.

Broadcast runs 25 minutes at the end of which the judge announces dismissal of court and announces a five-minute news broadcast from NBC in New York to be followed by the regular theatre program. All through the program, judicial terms are used in keeping with the court idea.

Theatre doors are opened at two o'clock, broadcast starts at 2:30, and regular show at three.

Heralds in the form of summons and checks, printed and paid for by the sponsor are distributed by mail to the store accounts and to theatre patrons, week in advance. Young carries posters on the tiein, in the inside and outside lobbies, the store contributing signs in windows. Program is set for 26 weeks and if interest continues, is to be extended by the sponsor.

Andrews' Straight Flush

Residents of Guelph, Ontario, who were quick on the draw, received guest tickets to "Reno" through the courtesy of Manager Stan Andrews of the Capitol Theatre. Street stunt arranged by the theatreman was card table set up in front of empty store on main street on which were laid out two card flushes in hearts and spades. Passersby were invited by an attendant to draw a card from a deck and if either an ace of hearts or spades matched the flushes, prizes were awarded.

ATTENTION, PLEASE

Complete campaigns are not necessary for consideration in the Quigley Awards.

This is again printed for the information of you men who desire to take part in the Competitions but hesitate because you believe that the campaign of many parts is still a "must" for Awards attention.

It isn't so. It hasn't been so for the past year. The 1940 Awards are based on single ideas or promotions—the "meat" of a campaign. That "meat" may be in the form of an individual contest, tieup, display, front-page story or stories, or what have you. All that has to be done is to send along that one idea, with the usual evidence. There's no need to be fancy about it, either. Just do it. Stick it in an envelope. Then mail it.

The members who desire to send along complete campaigns are invited to do so. If meant for the Awards, please make sure the top individual ideas or promotions to be considered are clearly indicated.

The rules of the 1940 Awards were run in the issue of February 3, on page 76. Please read them. There is nothing difficult about joining in. Just keep in mind that the theatremen who score oftenest in the two-week Fortnight periods in each Quarter obviously stand a better chance for the Quarter Awards.

Now, you folks had better place this box under the glass top of your desk, or paste it to the wall close to where you work. And that's that.

—MIKE.

Ford Promotes Merchants On "You're Right" Tieins

Complete tieup with the local Lucky Strike distributor highlighted the exploitation arranged by Manager Fred Ford of the Malco Palace, in Memphis, Tenn., for "That's Right, You're Wrong." The company donated thousands of giveaway packs of cigarettes which were distributed at the theatre by girls in caps and gowns week ahead of opening.

Other features of the campaign included a tiein with the Canada Dry Company which distributed material for window strips and setpieces to all their outlets in the territory; the theatre bought radio announcements ahead of Kyser's program; 24 sheet stands were posted in downtown locations and a "safety campaign" started with street intersections being stenciled with the slogan: "That's Right—Be careful—You're Wrong—To be reckless."

Local, Who Saw the Fight, Guest at Rose's Showing

Discovering that a Bridgeport boxing commissioner had been present at the Dempsey-Willard fight in Toledo, Manager Harry Rose arranged a newspaper interview with the local, in advance of the Dempsey-Willard pictures shown at Loew's Poli Globe. The commissioner was also introduced from the stage during the engagement as was another resident, a former Dempsey sparring partner.

Sport pages all carried material on various phases of proceedings and attention was called to the date at local wrestling matches with banners, ring announcements, herald distribution, and presentation by Rose of championship belt to winner.

Diaper Herald Top Stunt For Utica "Born" Date

Series of gags used by Arnold Stoltz for "Child Is Born" at the Avon, Utica, N. Y., featured an imprinted novelty diaper herald, pinned up in the conventional manner and held together by large safety pin. Copy on flaps read: "The world's oldest puzzle. Can you solve it?" On bottom flap, with arrow pointing to pin, was lettered "Unpin here," with rest of copy apparent when diaper was unfolded.

Local diaper service which paid the cost of Arnold's idea, thought enough of it to send out samples to services in other cities where the stunt was duplicated in theatre tieins on the picture.

Announcement under "births" in classified page read: "Mr. and Mrs. Avon are happy to announce A Child Is Born," plus starting date. Doctors and nurses were informed of the booking and promotion with baby shop provided complete outfit of infant material and furniture for lobby.

News Bulletin Board Sells "All Quiet"

In advance of "All Quiet" at the Ben Ali Theatre, in Lexington, Ky., Lew Hensler set up a news bulletin board of the type used in front of newspapers. Blackboard was marked with the latest war news with news flash effect. Copy was also carried reading: "For news of the last war, see."

Ingenious street bally consisted of a tank, constructed out of beaver board which was mounted on a bicycle which was completely sealed, giving the tank the appearance of moving on its own power. Hensler says the bally created considerable excitement as it toured through the main streets.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

To build interest in "U Boat 29" at the Royal Theatre, in Fort William, Ontario, Manager Gordon Carson built a giant compo board U-boat which was used for his street bally float. Sides were painted with title, theatre and playdates. Bulletin board was stationed in front of theatre with headlines from various leading Canadian newspapers as well as local dailies.

With his local high school band trying to raise funds for new uniforms, Richard Williamson, Cliftona Theatre, Circleville, Ohio, contacted members and urged them to undertake the selling of tickets to a special show. Fifty per cent of the money received went to the band and Dick says he more than doubled his receipts on a usually bad night.

For "Return of Dr. X," at the Ohio, Canton, O., Bill Harwell had a man on the street dressed in surgeon's outfit—white smock, skull cap and nose guard. Teaser atmosphere was supplied with back card reading "Back from the Grave. Dr. X."

The clothes-line gag for a lobby display was worked out successfully by Warren Butler for his date on "Little Accident" at the Tri-States Princess, Sioux City, Iowa. Overprinted diapers were strung across the foyer, carrying star names, title and starting day.

As a goodwill gesture, Manager Bernard Stewart at the Gorman, in Framingham, Mass., contacted a local basketball league that will play until the end of March and formed a Gorman Theatre team. By promoting suits with theatre name on jerseys, showman is assured of a double mention in the local newspapers every week and each time the team steps on the court to play.

As a plug for his stage shows each Friday night, Bernie tied up with the Chairman of the Policemen's Ball by offering to select a couple of specialty dancers for a stage appearance. Not only did the theatre garner goodwill from the police, but landed on the front page as well.

Circularizing history teachers of the local high school, John B. Gardner at the Mound, in South Charleston, West Va., invited them to a special screening of the Warner short, "Lincoln in the White House" with their students at a 10 a.m. showing day ahead of opening. Instructors made announcements to all classes recommending the picture and Gardner reports an unusually heavy attendance of high school students.

Excuse It, Please

In the issue of January 27, newspaper ad page, the four-column co-op ad promoted for "Four Wives" at the RKO Orpheum in Kansas City by Larry Lehman was inadvertently credited to Jerry Zigmond at the Newman.

Wheeler Promotes Weekly On Classified Contest

Situated on the South Side of Chicago with no opportunity for tieins with the downtown dailies, Manager J. R. Wheeler, at Indiana-Illinois' New Lex, is working with his neighborhood weekly, "The Woodlawn Booster" to build local interest. Found successful is the classified contest wherein a quarter-page is devoted to questions regarding advertisers on the want ad page. Readers are requested to look over classified notices for best answers. Passes are given to best 25 replies and paper supports the tieins with front page notices.

Leading neighborhood department store was also promoted by Wheeler for a pre-Christmas giveaway of merchandise. Numbered coupons were distributed at theatre and store with drawing held at theatre. Fifty thousand coupons were used with all costs including trailer paid by the merchant.

Cohn Circularizes Societies on "Quiet"

Contacting heads of various educational organizations, Artie Cohn for his "All Quiet" date at the Roosevelt, in Philadelphia sold them on the idea of personally plugging the picture at their respective meetings and letters were sent to peace leagues, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy Scouts, etc., calling attention to the opening.

Two members of the American Legion senior color guard stood in front of the theatre in colorful uniforms, bulletin board was planted in the lobby containing war news, maps of all countries engaged in the present conflict, color pages from Sunday papers, headlines, etc., in addition to full pages from the World War and scene stills from the picture. These were used two weeks in advance with some of the material changed daily.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Directional Arrows Sell "Dodge City" for Pappas

In advance of his date on "Dodge City," at the Point Theatre in Powhaton, Ohio, Manager George Pappas used directional arrows carrying title, playdates, etc., all over town. In addition, gun display of old vintage was featured in his lobby and special heralds on the picture were distributed.

For the opening of "Honolulu," Pappas received a letter from Eleanor Powell, who was appearing in Cleveland, congratulating him on the booking of the picture. Letter was used to good advantage by the showman, who blew it up and used it for publicity and exploitation purposes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Muchmore's Benefit Show

With Bobby Jordan, one of the Dead End kids visiting locally, Tom Muchmore, at the Vogue Theatre, in Louisville, Ky., promoted the lad for a personal appearance and a gratis show at orphans' home. Also promoted by the theatreman was a 15-minute radio show over which Tom interviewed the kid on his forthcoming picture to be shown soon at Vogue.

NEWSPAPE

(1) Because it was found to contain all the necessary "who" and "what" in copy and art to sell "Little Old New York", the pressbook 170 lines on 3 col., was used by both the Fox Esquire and Upton, Kansas City, for the day-ahead announcement of date.

(2) Confinement or star and title benday panel well within the two-column measure to provide for margnial white space was aimed for in this 135 lines on 2 col., by United Detroit Theatres on "69th" at the Michigan. Reverse slug below title was used to balance slugs above for ad balance and to emphasize division of space for second feature, the cut of Hersholt at bottom and masthead at top holding the whole together.

(4) Writing it as Manny Pearlstein tells it, the reasons-why for this 110 lines on 3 col., for "69th" at Warners Hipp, Cleveland, are as follows: "Simplicity and swing of spiral composition carries the eye rapidly around the entire ad, from the three star heads, through cast and title, and back to start, thus giving action without elaboration". Manny credits Jack Southe, of his department, for layout and execution.

(5) To emphasize the power of copy slant created by Charley Bierbauer and Nick Todorov, for "Invisible Stripes" at Wilmer & Vincent Colonial, Allentown, Pa., only the 70 lines on 4 col., that topped the pressbook 110 lines on 4 col., is here reproduced. Twenty-line reverse theatre slug was carried across bottom.

(6) Five distinct copy units with varying benday backgrounds were used by Dave Idzal to build the holdover on "Hunchback" at the Fox, Detroit, in emphasizing title and illustration. Panels for extra attractions were placed for visual convenience and "no advance in price" line at top used to avoid and confusion with reserved-seat ad on "Bluebird" playing currently.

(7) The vogue light type face and generous provision for white space that Joe Feldman uses frequently as trade-mark distinction of ad copy for Warner's Stanley, Pittsburgh, is in evidence in this 90 lines on 2 col. Box lines are set to carry the eye easily from theatre slug to head-cuts and copy on main attractions.

(8) To spotlight the new Warner downtown Pittsburgh first-run, Feldman used an unique boxed type layout for small-space program listing and theatre policy. Size: 40 lines on 2 col.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

STARRING BIGELOW CARPETS FOR THEATRES

The new Avon Theatre, Stamford, Connecticut, is Bigelow-Carpeted throughout!

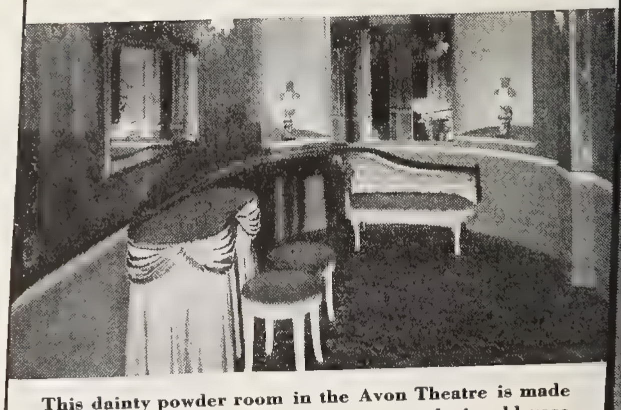
When the architect, Mr. William I. Hohauser, came to consider the carpet for this American Colonial theatre, he turned to Bigelow Carpet Counsel.

And Mr. Hohauser was unusually discerning, we feel, in his choice of qualities and patterns . . . particularly in his use of a delightful floral Axminster carpet, a Bigelow Imperial with beige ground, for the lobby, auditorium and mezzanine.

Why not let Bigelow Carpet Counsel help you on your next job? It's a big service at no extra cost per yard. It includes expert advice and counsel as to the right grades for the right spaces—the right colors—in keeping with your budget.

We are at your service for counsel, special designs, delivery on time. Get in touch with your dealer, who will bring you to us. Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., 140 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

See how much charm is added to the Avon Theatre mezzanine by this floral carpet! Imperial Axminster, by Bigelow; beige ground with multi-color flower groups. Also in lobby and auditorium aisles.



This dainty powder room in the Avon Theatre is made luxurious underfoot by Bigelow Crescendo in old rose . . . a very deep-piled fabric.

(Not illustrated)

On stairs: Bigelow's Varsity Lokweave in beige.

In Lounge: Bigelow's Gropoint Lokweave in cedar.

"Black Light" Developments

AFTER MORE OR less experimental applications here and there during the past year, "black light" now appears ready for widespread use by theatres as a decorative device. Since Francis Falge's article in BETTER THEATRES last April, on methods of using it in theatres, further development work has been conducted, at the General Electric Nela Park laboratories, by the Continental Lithograph Corporation of Cleveland, the Keese Engineering Company of Hollywood, and others, while the illuminating engineering field in general regards luminescent decoration and advertising as a new trick of the trade ready for intensive promotion.

Effected with fluorescent lacquer-enamels and near-ultra-violet light energy, "black light" (so-called, of course, because the energy making the materials glow is not itself discernible as light) is being used or installed, it is estimated, in about twenty theatres in the United States. These installations range all the way from "spotting" ornamental effects into the general decorative scheme (such as outlining certain architectural forms or "highlighting" decorative figures) to coating the main areas of ceilings and walls so that they glow faintly during the performance.

As Means of Illumination

Some engineers point to such overall use as the logical means of providing motion picture theatre auditorium running illumination, not only because it continues decorative effect when the auditorium is darkened, but because the glow of the wall and ceiling surfaces supplies sufficient room illumination for proper level of visibility during performances, and can be so distributed as to do this without any spottiness or interference with screen light.

Such use, of course, would make "black light" more than a decorative medium for film theatres, suggesting it for general adoption as a method of illuminating their auditoriums. Other opinion holds that it is too soon to make predictions along that line at this time.

► Cost, however, does not appear to be an adverse factor, according to the reported experience of installing engineers, who say they are finding that solid applications of very heavy coatings cost as little as 12c a square foot, while the cost of light sources is comparable to that of regular lighting equipment that otherwise would probably be required.

Recent Use Decoratively

At least decoratively, an effective method of introducing "black light" into the auditorium is illustrated in the recent application of it in the Uptown theatre in Minneapolis. Here (incidentally, this is pictured in the advertisement of the Celotex Corporation on page 23) the architects, Liebenberg & Kaplan, provided a luminescent mural from arch to balcony on either side. The walls are finished in perforated mineral fibre tile, and the figures were formed in relief by cutting, or engraving out, the tile. The figures were then coated with fluorescent lacquer, which is energized by light sources concealed in opposite boxes.

$90,000 Remodeling on Roxy-Music Hall Lane

A remodeling project which has for its purpose the creation of another prominent New York "premiere house," or outlet for notable pictures for which no suitable theatre is now available—so runs the explanation—is that now definitely planned to transform the Waldorf on 50th Street, low-price subsequent-run house, operated by Myron Robinson, into one of luxurious appointments.

According to Joe Hornstein, New York equipment dealer who will supervise the work, little more than the walls of the building will remain, with the whole job representing an investment of about $90,000. That the auditorium will be completely carpeted, throughout the seating area as well as aisles, indicates the character of the plans.

The theatre is located a couple hundred feet from Radio City Music Hall, about twice that distance from the entrance to the Roxy, on a street that has become a link between the Times Square area and Rockefeller Center.

Probably the most elaborate use of "black light" yet made is that underway in the Hawaii theatre which Albert A. Galston and Jay M. Sutton are building on Hollywood Boulevard in Los Angeles. With a general treatment indicated by its name, the Hawaii, according to reports, will have, in addition to luminescent murals, ceiling effects simulating a moonlit Hawaiian night (and very reminiscent, it would seem, of "atmospheric" theatres!)

Nor is carpeting to be left out of the rapidly developing picture. Changes made in the lighting of the fluorescent carpet installed last June in the aisles of Warners' Kennedy theatre in Washington, D. C., have now brought enthusiastic approval of the operators, and Alexander Smith & Sons, carpet manufacturers who introduced it, plan to hold trade demonstrations of such carpeting shortly.

Fluorescent Carpet Lighting

Originally, the Kennedy aisle carpeting was lighted by argon glow lamps installed in end standard light boxes. These lamps, of only 2½ watts, did not supply enough energy to get full luminescence. "Black light" is now supplied for this purpose by 100-watt mercury lamps located (on a 3-foot ledge forming an architectural feature) above the rear of each aisle (the Kennedy is a one-floor house). The transformer equipment required for mercury lamps is in the projection gallery. Contrary to what you might expect, people passing down the aisle do not shut off the glow of the carpeting in front of them.

More Light Magic

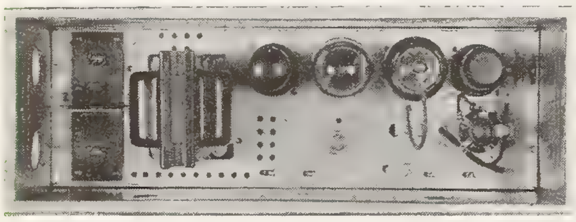
THOSE WHO WERE around when the electric lights came, happily amazed at getting light with the press of a button, have lived long enough to be told that now even the button can be eliminated! RCA has announced the marketing of an electrical device which, responding to static electrical charges of the human body, will turn lights on or off, sound signals and do a lot of things.

The announcement was so casual—just a little press release accompanied by a circular—that the writer of these paragraphs dispatched to the manufacturer an inquiry, suggesting that this device either was the most magical invention since Aladdin's lamp, or it was just another gadget, to which reply has been made that associating it with Aladdin's lamp is quite in order.

► Called the RCA Electronic Control, the device nevertheless does not employ a photoelectric cell or related actuator. It is a capacity-operated relay, with the relay responding to a change in the electrical capacity taking place when a person approaches and connecting or interrupting an electrical circuit according to the performance desired.

Some Things It Could Do

The manufacturers themselves cite such applications for it in the theatre as lighting up lobby displays at the approach of a patron, and opening doors (this method would not require posts or gateways in front of a door, making it adaptable to the opening of doors to lounges); it is also suggested that the relay could be used to sound a warning on the approach of anyone to potentially dangerous equipment, such as switchboards, generators, etc.



All there is to it.

▶ The control itself can be completely concealed—only a tiny antenna wire needs to be exposed—in display structures, door jambs, and so on.

Each unit (which costs around $25 or a bit less) is capable of operating electrical equipment burning up to 150 watts or so. For heavier loads other relays of much more expensive type must be added.

Broader Program

THE ENLARGED and revised group through which the Society of Motion Picture Engineers hopes to set up standards in theatre planning and engineering practices, has begun functioning. The studies of theatre planning which the SMPE inaugurated a few years ago, as well as the work of the long-established Projection Practice Committee, are now co-ordinated through a new general Committee on Theatre Engineering, headed by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, noted consulting engineer and former president of the society. The other groups have become subcommittees, with Harry Rubin retaining the chairmanship of the projection committee, and Ben Schlanger that of the committee on theatre design.

The purposes of the new arrangement, according to Dr. Goldsmith in a statement made following the initial meeting, is both to extend the studies and to co-relate them so that such matters as projection room layout and construction, screen lighting, acoustics, sound, auditorium illumination, seating plans, architectural forms, etc., will be considered in their natural bearing upon each other.

"It has been recognized," said Dr. Goldsmith, "that the technical aspects of theatre design, construction and operation, affect audience satisfaction, ease and economy of operation, and the final theatre balance sheet. The time is now ripe for an even broader study of the problems of theatre engineering than we have been making and which have already resulted in recommendations of major value to exhibitors and designers."

"The activities of the new Committee on Theatre Engineering will be conducted mainly through the two sub-committees. The general committee will advise them and co-ordinate their programs. Widely representative membership has been selected for both sub-committees, and it is expected that steady progress in the improvement of theatre design and operation will result from this work."

Besides the chairmen, members of the subcommittees are as follows:

PROJECTION PRACTICE COMMITTEE: T. C. Barrows, president of the projectionists' local union in Boston; H. D. Behr, supervisor of projection, Wilmer & Vincent circuit; F. T. Bowditch, National Carbon Company; F. E. Cahill, Jr., supervisor of projection, Warner Theatres; C. C. Dash, Hertner Electric Company; A. S. Dickinson, MPPDA; J. K. THEATRE DESIGN: Dr. Keron C. Morrical, RCA; I. L. Nixon, Bausch & Lomb; C. C. Potwin, Erpi; A. L. Powell, General Electric; A. L. Raven, Raven Screen Company; E. S. Seeley, Altec; Robert F. Ross, State of Pennsylvania; Messrs. Sefing, Horstman and Morin.

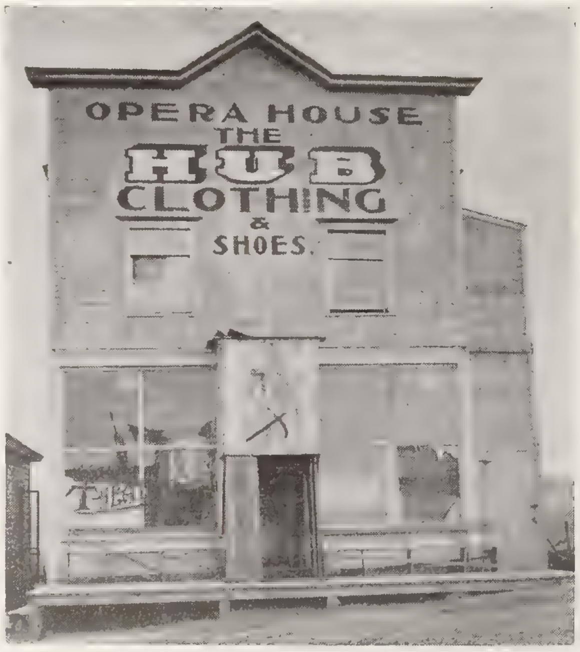
Any Ideas for This One?



Along about the time your editor was thinking about this issue, the annual Remodeling Number, this photograph came to light. Removal of the dust disclosed the legend: "Opera House, Sweet Grass, Mont. Projecting structure over entrance is projection room." But that was written in 1917. For later developments in motion picture theatre design, please see exhibits in the following pages.

Squabbles, Et Cetera

DRIVE-IN'S still increase in number, one by one, and continue to get themselves called names by neighboring "regular"—or shall we say, legitimate?—exhibitors and neighboring residents alike. Connecticut people have recently endeavored to prevent such an establishment near their homes. Now the Greater Cincinnati Exhibitors Association has protested the construction of a drive-in contemplated by William Sobel, president of Midwest Drive-In Theatres, Inc.

In Cincinnati, Mr. Sobel has indicated his intention to make a straight charge of 35c per occupant, no initial charge for the car and driver, with children going in free, more or less, it may be, as ballast. This arrangement is particularly annoying to Wess Huss, Jr., president of the Cincinnati exhibitor organization.

In general, however, the drive-in idea has not taken on as it was expected to. It is already seven years old, yet there are not more than 25 or 30 of them in the entire country.

Sound Injured His Ears, So—

▶ Ernest William Holland, Syracuse, N. Y., projectionist, is having his medical bills, occasioned by recent impairment of his hearing, taken care of under the state compensation law. James A. Corcoran, member of the State Industrial Board, found that Mr. Holland's loss of hearing "is related to his work." The roaring of airplane motors in a film projected while he was on duty is reported as the cause.

Plight of the Super-Theatres

▶ The 4,000-seat Minnesota theatre in Minneapolis, former Publix house, had no assured operator at last reports. Ben Berger, the Benz interests, and Stanley E. Hubbard, Minneapolis radio station executive, have made offers, but nobody is actually clamoring for the big house (grosses are reported to have ranged, during 25 weeks of operation by the Benzes, from only $4,000 to merely $14,000) . . . A. H. Blank has closed the 3,000-seat Paramount in Omaha, after 30 days of operation at what he has termed "a tremendous loss.". . . The Shea circuit in Buffalo, N. Y., is building one 1,200-seat theatre in Lackawanna, has plans for another of the same size in Niagara, and contemplates yet another of 1,200 seats elsewhere. Shea's previously had sold their 3,500-seat Century theatre to the Dipson-Basil interests.

Flash! Minneapolis Still Resisting

▶ At press time, the word from Minneapolis was that the city authorities were still holding out (this has been going on for several years) against granting permits for the construction of more theatres. There are several applications, but the Minnesota Amusement Company, Paramount partner, and Northwest Allied, representing independent exhibitors, insist Minneapolis is already overseated. The last vote of the city council was 15 to 9 to take their word for it.

MODERNIZATION PICTORIAL

FRONT AND LOBBY REVISIONS SALVAGING AN EARLY-TYPE THEATRE

■ Photographs and plan drawings on this page show the front and entrance area changes made in the East Side theatre, Detroit, owned and operated by Sam Ackerman. Architects were Bennett & Straight, Dearborn, Mich. The entire old front was removed, the adjoining area, including the projection room, reconstructed, resulting in the salvaging of a nickelodeon-type theatre. Roof and ceiling were raised about 6 feet to increase auditorium height, new projection room was constructed over new lobby, lounge and toilet rooms, also an office was added on second floor in area adjacent to projection room.

MODERNIZING A PERIOD STYLE

NEW DRESS FOR A VILLAGE THEATRE

■ Brightly colored porcelain enamel facing, and a modern marquee, give an attractive theatrical character to W. R. Heaton's Model theatre in Harrisonville, W. Va. Facing is in two shades of red, three of blue, and ivory. Marquee and sign carry neon trim. The installation, including facing, is by the Artkraft Sign Company, Lima, O.

TRANSFORMING AN "OPRY HOUSE" INTO A THEATRE OF TODAY

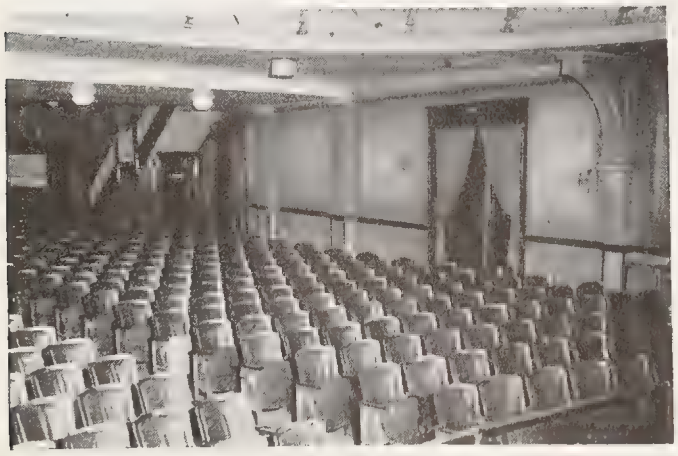
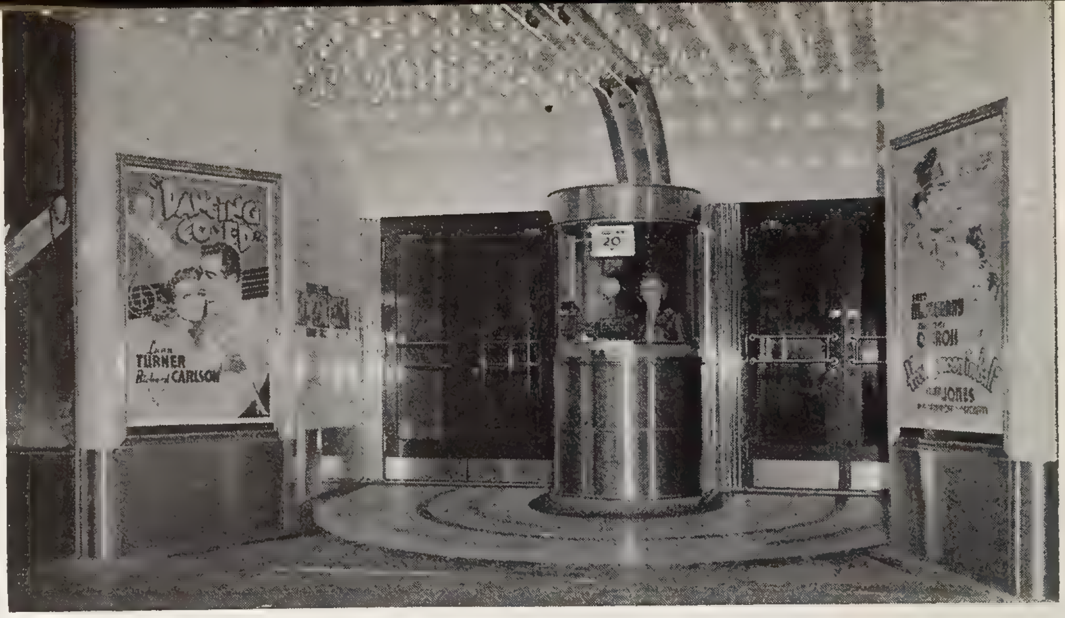
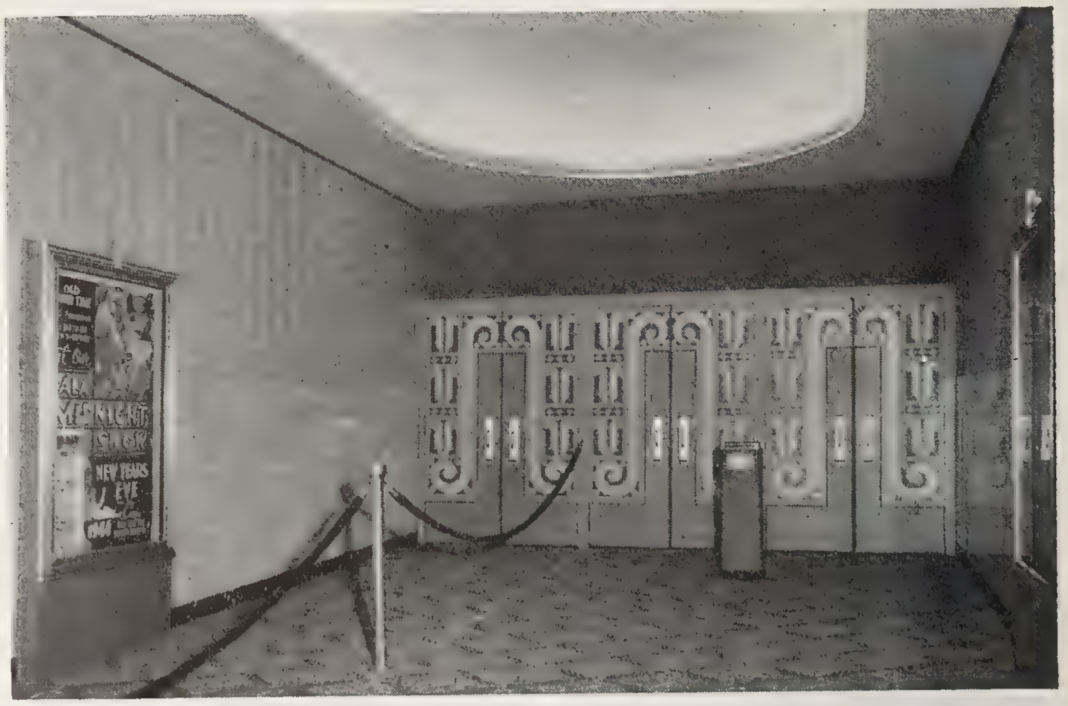
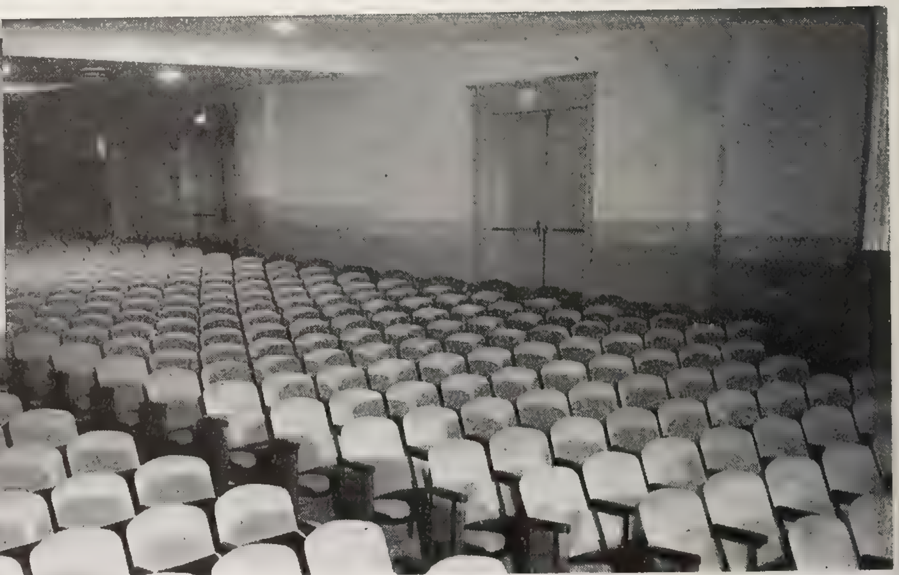
The proscenium arch before and after remodeling.





■ These pictures show the changes made by Kerasotes Theatres (operators of 10 houses) in their Senate in Springfield, Ill., which until recently was still of "opera house" type. Two years ago a modern marquee and sign were installed; now modernization has been effected throughout. . . . To meet front narrowness, vestibule walls were curved, also terrazzo floor pattern, and box office, while ceiling was lowered. Entire front refaced in ivory porcelain enamel with stainless steel trim; box office and display frames (latter on angle to aid reading) also stainless steel. Carl T. Meyer was the remodeling architect.





■ The auditorium, before (left) and after remodeling. To add three rows, the stage apron was removed and the pit filled. Capacity is now 850. Stairways to balcony were walled off. Air-conditioning with a duct system replaced the old air washer and simple ventilation; with construction of a light cove in balcony soffit, air ducts were placed in balcony construction at either side of cove. Side walls were repaneled and painted rust, plum and tan. At the arch, boxes and the ventilating grilles were removed, and this area neatly remodeled in a sweeping curve of plaster bands, each band concealing a line of blue neon. A red velour curtain was installed, and house was reseated by Heywood-Wakefield.

Theatrical FORMICA DOORS and LOBBY PANELING...

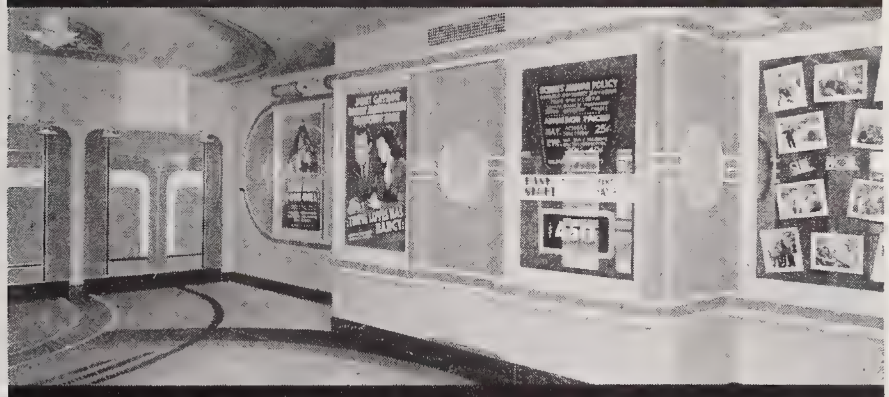
CONTINUOUS



THE striking color combinations and smooth modern surfaces of Formica doors and lobby paneling—as specified by trained theatrical architect—produces an effect that will thrill your customers and make them like to come to your theatre.

In both new and modernized theatres the power of Formica to attract the crowds has been proved all over the country during the past few years. It is striking and up-to-date. It is also moderate in cost as good materials go and is simply and quickly installed by carpenters, so that there is a minimum of interruption to business. Once up, Formica maintains its original appearance for many years without change in color. There are no maintenance costs.

If you have a theatre to build or modernize be sure to discuss Formica with your architect.

FOR BUILDING PURPOSES

GIVING AN EARLY NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE A MODERN THEATRICALISM

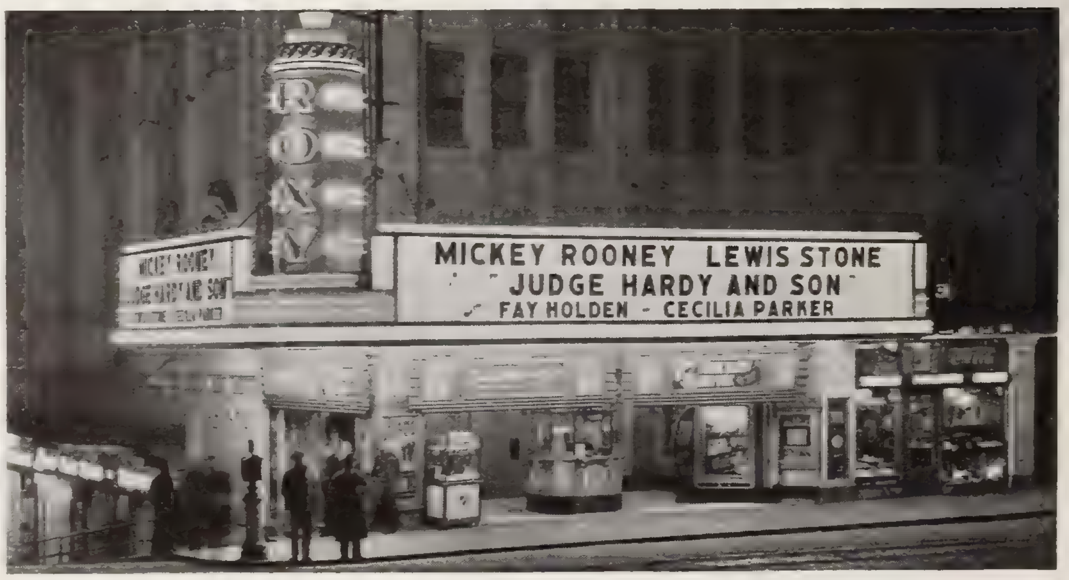
■ Originally built about twenty years ago, the first neighborhood theatre in Covington, Ky., the Shirley has been modernized throughout. The Shirley is owned by N. G. Shafer; the F & Y Building Service of Columbus, Ohio, were designers and engineers in charge of remodeling. . . . The comparative views of the front show the radical change made to effect a theatrical character. Front and side elevations are of marble—base course in Verde Antique, general field Listavena, a white Vermont marble with a green vein, but so prepared and sawed that the green veining provides a distinct pattern. Above display frames, Verde Antique and Listavena used to form an ornamental device, elongated to give the facade height. Above the marquee, a square panel is finished in cream terra cotta with apple green fluted shaft ornament up the center to a larger green terra cotta decoration. A galvanized marquee was added, carrying Wagner silhouette-type attraction boards, boardered by lamps on flasher. The name sign channel letters are outlined in power green neon. Front doors are of birch with cast aluminum push bars. . . . Necessity for an inside box office suggested the novel window between the doors, so that the box office is visible from street. The lobby was given an ivory ceiling, continuing into a cornice border, separated from the darker walls by an aluminum stripe, while upper walls of robin's egg blue are separated from red leatherette wainscot by bone-white mouldings. . . . The forward part of the auditorium was given a proscenium treatment centering around two free-standing columns, while the auditorium as a whole was reshaped to converge toward the proscenium. The steel ceiling was left and painted slate blue. Side walls are covered in rust velour in horizontal bands, interrupted by square plaster panels with three offsets, which form light troughs all around, the circuits operating on rheostats in the projection room. The first offset is painted robin's egg blue, the others two shades of flame. The velour of the bands is applied with wood mouldings painted ivory. The auditorium was completely reseated with International chairs having rust mohair backs and blue leatherette seats. . . . Raising of the front portion of the roof provided space for women's lounge on a second level, and the men's toilet facilities on the first floor were also increased.

ROXY
JOHN HAMRICK'S ROXY THEATRE

■ Modernization confined to the installation of a new marquee, with multiple line attraction boards and silhouette letters (panels and letters by Wagner), and an ornamental sign pillar augmenting a large vertical sign (not shown) attached to building. The theatre is John Hamrick's Roxy in Tacoma, Wash. Installation was by Electrical Products Consolidated of Seattle.



NEW THEATRES—FROM AN OLD THEATRE AND FROM A GARAGE

Why It Pays to Replace Old-Type Air-Conditioning Systems—

Today's Equipment Costs Far Less to Operate

Today's Equipment Assures True Comfort Conditions

Today's Equipment Is Easily Handled

Today's Equipment Is Cheaply Maintained

• And told in this article, by a well-known authority in theatre engineering, is just how this has come about—the equipment facts for those who want such documentation—the business facts for the average theatre operator

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

WHEN ONE realizes that summer air-conditioning, or comfort cooling as we accept the term today in reference to theatres, is just arriving at the voting age of 21, we must sense that many changes have taken place. Recall the automobiles of 21 years ago, or the trolley cars as compared with the streamlined buses, or more homely things such as toasters and electric coffee pots, and you can then begin to appreciate about what has happened to air-conditioning.

Many changes take place from infancy through childhood, adolescence to manhood, and that is the way it is with an industry founded, as air-conditioning is, upon science and engineering.

For many years the stock expression, originating with Mark Twain, was that everybody talked about the weather, but nobody did anything about it. This seemed to provide the alibi for not doing anything about the weather, but during those very years some smart engineers were burning the midnight oil studying the problem in an effort to find out just what to do about it.

The efforts of the early pioneers, combined with the initiative and foresight of some motion picture exhibitors, resulted in the first air-conditioning installation in a theatre.

Once Upon a Time—

One of the first installations, to my knowledge (and I do believe it was really the very first) was made in the Central Park theatre, operated by Balban & Katz, on the West Side in Chicago. This was a carbon dioxide compressor installation, with city water used through double pipe condensers, serpentine baudelot coils with water dripping over them in the air stream as the means of heat exchange between the air and the refrigerant. Everything about this plant was manual, from the setting of the fresh air dampers to the adjustment of the expansion valves. It has been years since I have seen that particular installation, and I do not know whether it is still doing active duty, so I won't continue to try to describe it further.

About this time commercial refrigeration, which includes ice making and cold storage, was handled mostly by ammonia, either operating on the absorption principle or on the compression principle, and carbon dioxide compression. Ammonia was definitely discarded as a refrigerant that could be used for theatre air-conditioning because of the characteristics of it, it being harmful should it be breathed, and explosive, so carbon dioxide became the refrigerant most generally employed, though the very nature of this gas made it costly from the standpoint of initial cost, maintenance cost, and operating cost.

Early Cooling Equipment

There may have been some attempt at using other refrigerants, as there were several others known; I do recall one theatre having a cooling plant that used sulphur dioxide; but mostly one heard of a carbon dioxide plant being installed.

About this time Dr. Willis Carrier brought into this country and commercially marketed a rotary compressor which really was the first, to my knowledge, to go to indirect cooling (cooling water first, and the cold water cooling the air). At any rate, this equipment created a great amount of talk and discussion because this system operated with a vacuum.

Pressure, as we think of it, is generally in terms of pounds per square inch, but before we arrive at zero on that conception, we already have the pressure of the atmosphere, which is 14.7 pounds per square inch. The gauge on your boiler may read correctly 5 pounds, but accurately speaking, the real pressure is 14.7 plus 5, or 19.7 pounds per square inch absolute pressure, taking the beginning of atmospheric pressure as zero. The term used, "absolute pressure," is always gauge pressure plus 14.7. Think this over and turn it over in your mind and you will see that a system of refrigeration that operates under a vacuum (less than atmospheric pressure) really operates on a pressure principle, but it is absolute pressure; its entire range is from zero absolute, up to 14.7 pounds per square inch. As this type of system is in wide use today, I shall deal in a future forthcoming issue with this vacuum (sub-atmosphere pressure) cycle.

These early rotary machines were manufactured under German patents and some of those early machines are still in operation. Despite the fact that these earlier machines are still in service, there have been remarkable changes in this particular equipment in the last several years.

Would Replacement Pay?

As there are three basic elements of air-conditioning—wet-bulb control (humidity), dry-bulb control (temperature), and air-motion, so there are three important sections of air-conditioning equipment; namely, compression equipment, condensing equipment, and control equipment. So, let's see what has happened in air-conditioning equipment under these three headings that would throw some light on the subject of whether we should consider replacement with newer equipment.

Sometime during the middle 1920's, I believe, Mr. Kettering of General Motors, and the du Pont organization, developed a new chemical combination known as Freon (sometimes called F_{12}). Nearly every exhibitor in this country has heard of it by this time. Well, this new refrigerant really revolutionized air-conditioning. This refrigerant meant relief from the excessive costs in connection with CO_2 (carbon dioxide) compression. I will give you some data on Freon, Ammonia and carbon dioxide, so that you may see this comparison for yourself:

	Ammonia	Freon	Car. Diox.
Boiling point	—28°F.	—21.7°F.	—109.3°F.
Freezing point	—107.86°F.	—247°F.	—169.9°F.
Critical point	271.4°F.	232.6°F.	87.8°F.
Explosion limits in air per cent	16%	—	—
Toxicity maximums tolerable for one hour per cent by volume	.03	—	30

What These Figures Mean

Now let me explain what all these figures mean, and I am sure you will understand why Freon is a superior refrigerant.

Starting from the bottom, the first requisite for a refrigerant used in comfort cooling in theatres is that it must be non-poisonous and non-flammable. There is always the possibility that a cooling coil may develop a leak and the released refrigerant gas would be carried into the conditioned auditorium. If the refrigerant were poisonous, the result might be disastrous. See for yourself from the above table—Freon complies with this requisite.

The critical point in temperature means that the gas under compression will not liquefy unless its temperature is brought below that temperature. This reduction in temperature of the compressed refrigerant is accomplished by the water in the condensing operation.

For instance, with carbon dioxide, the condensing water entering the condenser must be below 87.8° Fahrenheit, otherwise the gas remains a heavy vapor; whereas for Freon and ammonia, the temperature of the condensing water can be substantially higher and you can still obtain liquefication of refrigerant in the condensers.

A Significant Comparison

Please note how closely ammonia and Freon compare in this characteristic. The freezing point of refrigerants is of little importance in air-conditioning in relation to compression systems operating on gauge pressures above 14.7 pounds absolute, as the freezing point is only listed here for the purpose of letting you make a comparison with ammonia. The freezing point of all three of these refrigerants is substantially below any temperature we ever approach in air-conditioning.

The boiling point is of importance, however, and as long as that boiling point temperature is below the dew point (the temperature below which the air drops some of its moisture, in the form of dew or drops of water) of any natural air used in comfort operations. So, in regard to this characteristic, any one of these refrigerants will serve. Again note the close comparison of ammonia and Freon.

Ammonia, however, is definitely eliminated because of its toxic and inflammable characteristics. So from here on, our comparison must be between Freon compression and carbon dioxide compression.

And Now a Significant Difference

In a carbon dioxide compressor with a temperature on the suction (low pressure side) of 30°, the pressure gauge would read 479.9 pounds per square inch, and compressing this gas to a temperature of 88.43°, would give us 1056.3 pounds per square inch. [As a matter of fact, most gauges on carbon dioxide compressors read in atmospheres (units of atmospheric pressure, multiples of 14.7), so in the example above the gauge reading in atmospheres for the suction (low pressure side) would be 32.31 atmospheres per square inch, and for the discharge (high pressure side) would be 71.86 atmospheres per square inch.] Such an operation would require 1.33

A FELLA isn't accountable for his actions during tense moments in the movies... even to the tearing apart of the upholstery with his fingernails! That's one reason why it pays to make sure your seats are covered with CAVALON.

CAVALON is the result of years of Du Pont research. It resists general abrasive wear, edge wear, cracking and peeling. It has sufficient strength to prevent tearing and puncturing. The surface coating of CAVALON is treated with a patented "case-hardening" process that makes this rugged material unusually resistant to flexing and wear, yet does not harm its leather-like characteristics and pliability.

CAVALON is available in many good-looking colors that are highly resistant to crocking, bleeding and fading. The American Seating Company uses CAVALON on their American Bodiform Chairs. Whether you are buying new equipment or reupholstering old seats, make sure you specify CAVALON. For samples and complete information, write E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. He Built Minnesota's First Picture Theatre

¶ An interview with L. G. Roesner, who started in a storeroom, now operates five modern theatres

▸▸▸ MORE THAN a quarter of a century ago, the first building constructed exclusively for the exhibition of motion pictures in the State of Minnesota, was opened by L. G. Roesner in Winona. The year was 1912. Before that he operated a store-room nickelodeon—his first one was opened as early as 1909.

When films came, even though they did not appear to be much, young Roesner naturally gravitated toward them. He had been theatre-wise since a small lad, having been a program boy in a legitimate theatre in 1892.

Now L. G. Roesner is the head of Colonial Theatres and the Winona Theatre Company, which operate all of the five theatres in Winona.

"Of course, times have changed otherwise, too," he remarked the other day when approached for his observations concerning operation today.

L. G. ROESNER

"Those were the days when a storeroom on the main street just had to be good enough. The picture theatre was still yelling 'mama.' To many people film shows were strictly low grade. And maybe they were — then. The public and the press thought 'moving pictures' a passing fancy.

"Anybody who entered the business took a chance," Mr. Roesner continued. "The conversion of a storeroom into a theatre, the money invested for the necessary apparatus and for the films, advertising and other necessities, required, perhaps not so much vision, but anyway a kind of courage. The 'legitimate' theatre was well established. For most of the people, those places were really the only kind of theatre. They were as a rule equipped with all comforts or conveniences—not as we know them today, but at least some. The best people attended them. Good plays served as a sort of assembly for the better classes of people.

"But the motion picture shows were for those whose taste for entertainment was not so high. Children were the standbys.

"Then the pictures became better. So did the audiences, not only as to size and constancy, but as to taste.

"Pretty soon the operators of that kind of showhouse began to realize that the picture alone was not the thing—that the building in which it was presented had to have beauty; safety, too, became a bigger factor. In short, the theatre had to look tasteful and permanent, not like a carnival show. Competition, not only among the film companies, but with the stage theatres, began to bring about changes in construction and operation which today are accepted as customary by the public.

Perhaps the greatest innovation in the building and maintaining of a motion picture theatre, Mr. Roesner pointed out, has been air cooling.

"That kind of improvement gives the owner or operator the opportunity to run the year 'round. In fact, he sells in summer, not only entertainment, but comfort.

"There was a time when, if the weather was hot, and attendance became slack, as it always did, we placed blocks of ice before the screen and let fans blow the cool air over the audience. Well, that helped not only to increase receipts, but the prestige of the theatre—believe it or not. The rotating fans, and the new blowers backstage, which afterward became parts of the unusual equipment of the theatres, later helped, but we have travelled a long way from such methods with modern air systems."

"Today We Sell Service"

"You might say," Mr. Roesner continued, "that we've grown with our public. In the early days it was the picture that was sold entirely. There was nothing else to sell. As competition became keener we had to sell more than entertainment; we had to sell service in the form of comfort and luxury. The motion picture theatre became the place where friends met, where there was not only amusement but recreation, not cheap or tawdry, but solid and, you might say, elegant.

One of the Roesner theatres recently modernized. Remodeled for the second time within a little over a year, the Winona now has front facing along entrance and display area, to a height of 12 feet, of buff Travertine stone, above a marble base. The upper part of the facade is finished in stucco, tinted steel grey. The marquee is the same as that installed during the previous remodeling, but the new revisions added modern display cases, lowered the lobby, formerly elevated and reached by steps, to the street level, and removed the balcony to bring all seats to one floor, with attendant redecoration and refurnishing.

"Theatre management today must constantly be on the alert to apply, and to make known, the latest devices, as they come along. If we stand still, we go backward.

"Money spent for improvements inside and outside, and money spent to make it known to the public, is well spent."

"Selling Is What We Need"

Selling, Mr. Roesner emphasized, is what the theatre always needs, for both picture and theatre—and it is what neither gets in too many cases, he added.

"In the old days, when we got a one-sheet for the outside board, we thought that was fine. And when the newspapers gave us a word or two, that was fine, too. Even when the advertising became worthwhile, the newspapers were not so joyous over the 'reading notices'."

Then it was that Mr. Roesner resorted to such publicity stunts as an imitation Charlie Chaplin on the streets and to the showing of local scenes and persons.

"Much of the modern publicity is too long or prosy," he commented. "And the kind that resorts to premiums or cash games is not my kind of exploitation. The picture and the theatre should be sold to the public, not dishes."

Public Expects Progress

Even the conveniences now called modern he believes must be unusual. The public looks not only for beauty, but novelty in appointments, like the "electric eye" drinking fountains in some foyers of the Roesner Theatres, the ornate mirrors in unusual places, the "Powder Puff" room for women.

"There does not seem now to be much room for improvement in the construction and equipment of a motion picture theatre. Nevertheless, the public has been educated to expect more," concluded Mr. Roesner. "The quarter century to come is sure to bring many important changes. We've got to keep up with them. The owner or operator who proceeds on the basis of service to his public can be looked upon as being pretty likely to succeed."

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Phil Baroudi has closed his Happy Hour theatre in North Creek, N. Y., for renovation to cost $10,000. Reopening is set for Easter Sunday.

Cecil Kelley of Plain Dealing, La., has leased the State at Stamps, Ark., from the Bodcaw Rent & Loan Company and will reopen the house soon.

A. J. Simmons, who sold his interests in three Missouri theatres, including the Plaza at Lamar, Mo., last year, has re-entered exhibition and, with Warren Weber, who operates theatres at Ellinwood, Stafford and St. John, Kan., has bought the Howard at Howard, Kan., from George Gotoged, veteran showman. Messrs. Simmons and Weber have renamed the newly acquired house the Plaza.

The Mount Pleasant in Schenectady, N. Y., operated for many years by Morris Silverman, has been renamed the New Metro. Plans call for both interior and exterior remodeling.

Arthur Burke, who operates the Gillham in Kansas City, Mo., has taken over the Colonial in the same city from Vogel Gettier.

The Plaza in Harrison, Ark., was destroyed by fire at an estimated loss of $20,000. The building, which was leased to the Commonwealth Amusement Corporation, and owned by James Myers, had been remodeled recently.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ashcraft, both well known in the industry as associates in the manufacture of projection arc lamps, again became grandparents within recent months with the birth in January of a son to their daughter, Mrs. Tim Holt. Mrs. Ashcraft has been spending the past several weeks at the Holt home in Hollywood. The baby, a boy, has been named Lance. Mr. Holt is the son of Jack Holt and himself a featured screen player.

M. B. Presley, who operates the Globe at Savannah, Mo., and the Dixie at Belton, Mo., has taken over the Binney theatre at Pattonsburg, Mo., from Earl Binney.

Liberty Theatres Corporation of Boston, Mass., headed by Herman Rifkin, former Republic franchise holder, and his son, Julian, have acquired from the Winchester Amusement Company, five theatres in Springfield, Mass. The houses are the Phillips, Strand, Liberty, Jefferson and Garden. Rifkin interests also include the Suffolk and Majestic in Holyoke, and the Academy in Northampton, Mass.

Fire originating in the projection room of the Allied theatre at Dermott, Ark., destroyed the building. Loss was put at $20,000. Building and equipment were owned by C. H. McCroskey, who also operates theatres at Lake Village and Eudora, Ark.

F. L. Alig, Jr., president of Beach Amusements, Inc., has opened the new $50,000 Beach theatre, said to be the first motion picture house to be built on the beaches of St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Alig will manage the house, together with his theatres at New Port Richey and Bowling Green, Fla.

Edward C. Evans, manager of Schine's Plaza in Milford, Del., has been elected mayor of Milford. He polled 546 votes, his opponent 434.

Van Nomikos, Chicago independent theatre operator, has taken over three downstate Illinois theatres. The acquisitions are the Webb and Orpheum theatres in Savannah, and the Antioch in Antioch.

Mrs. Cerise Tracy has taken over the Rex in Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, from James Ewing.

John Eberson, New York architect, is drawing plans for a new Warner house to be erected at Bristol, Conn., to replace the Bristol, recently destroyed by fire.

The new theatre being constructed by M. Prokopovitz at Pulaski, Wis., is nearing completion. RCA sound equipment and Simplex projectors are being installed. Architects are Oppenhamer & Obel of Green Bay.

The new Gerard theatre, operated by the Alpine Circuit in Pittsburgh, has been opened. The house, seating 750, is being managed by Harry Roney. Frank Roberts, former manager of the Enright theatre in that city, was in charge of the opening.

Gerald Whitney, city manager for Fox at La Junta, Col., has been named manager of the Jewel and Gothic in Denver. Former house managers Ed Ward and Ralph Hamilton are to remain as Mr. Whitney's assistants. Before leaving La Junta, where he had been for 18 months, Mr. Whitney was tendered a farewell dinner by the business men of the locality and presented with an electric razor on which were inscribed the names of city officials and business associates. The new manager at the La Junta house will be Elwood Voorhees, former city manager for Fox at McCook, Col., who will be followed in that spot by Ray Search.

Henry Phaneuf, former operator of the Jodolin in Baltic, Conn., has leased the 350 seat Broadbrook in Broadbrook, Conn., and will operate the house six days a week. The Broadbrook is owned by Nathan Lampert.

Joseph Rosenfield, manager of Warner-Saxe's Modjeska in Milwaukee, has been elected president of the Mitchell Street Advancement Association.

Lou Mills of the Mills theatre, Olive Hill, Ky., will reopen the Cozy, Morehead, Ky. The house has been closed for some time.

The Nemacolin theatre in Nemacolin, Pa., operated by the Buckeye Coal Company for many years, has been taken over by the Ideal Amusement Company of Johnstown, Pa. The Ideal circuit is headed by Vernon F. Scott. Duff Burdge has been appointed manager of the Nemacolin.

The Ritz at McGahee, Ark., has been sold to Malco Theatres, Inc., by Dr. O. W. Clark, owner of the building. Fixtures and equipment were sold by Mrs. B. Baradel, who operated the house.

J. A. Nordquist, veteran exhibitor in this territory, has sold the Shinglehouse theatre at Shinglehouse, Pa., to F. Kenyen Reed.

Eldred B. Cooper, former theatre owner of Youngstown and Ashtabula, Ohio, has taken over the Arion from Ed Cole.

P. R. Touney, owner and manager of the Princess in Wauseon, Ohio, is reported to have closed a lease for a larger storeroom on the main business street, which he will convert into a 300 seat theatre.

Five Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises theatre managers were honored for outstanding showmanship at a meeting of the circuit on January 18, at the Hotel Northland in Green Bay. Awards were presented by Harold J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the circuit, to Russell Leddy, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Green Bay; Gene Kilburg of the Wisconsin theatre, and Roland Koutnik of the Sherman, both in Milwaukee; Harold Knudson of the Fond du Lac in Fond du Lac, and Ben Van Korn of the Paradise theatre in West Allis.

The Wisper & Wetsman circuit has acquired the Frontenac in Detroit from John O'Dell, Jr., son of the late circuit owner. The house will be renovated with Rogvoy & Wright as architects.

Barney Kilbride, owner of a small local circuit, is taking over the Dawn in Detroit from the Homer Warren Realty Company. C. Howard Crane, Detroit architect, has drawn plans for remodeling.

The Majestic theatre at Benicia, Calif., owned by Mayor W. L. Crooks, was recently damaged by fire to the extent of $10,000. It is planned to reopen the house.

David Petersen has succeeded R. Pollock as manager of the Playhouse at Calistoga, Calif. The owners of this house are considering the erection of a new theatre to succeed the Playhouse.

The J. Real Neth Theatres Company, which has been operating the 1,000 seat Lincoln in Columbus, Ohio, has purchased the building.

P. F. Masucci, Eastern district manager of International Seat Corporation, has been attending the annual distributors convention held at Union City, Ind.

Arthur W. Shuttleworth, president of Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., died in Florida, January 27. He was 53.

Andrew Scheick, Eastern projection lens representative for Bauch & Lomb Optical Company, has returned to his office after two weeks' illness.

EPILOG—or maybe "Letdown" would be the better title. Anyway, the candid camera here duly reports lighter moments that followed several days of meetings conducted by the National Theatre Supply Company for all branch managers, summoned to New York for the purpose. After which, managers who had not yet hustled back to their posts, were guests, along with company executives, of Oscar Neu at his Neumade Products plant and offices, where, not the least hampered by desks, typewriters, stores of film cabinets, rewind tables, etc., etc., all got in much frolicking. More or less indicating the truth of that statement are these exhibits from the host's sometimes too candid camera, presenting (above, left) Lou Friedman, promotion manager, and Jake Watkins, Oklahoma City; then (above, center) John Laden, New York salesman; Earl Hines, president of General Theatres Equipment; George Friedl, International Projector's chief of sound engineering; and Jap Morgan, Denver manager; next (above, right), Herbert Griffin, vice-president of International Projector, with Miss Mary Jones, secretary; while below are (left) Arthur DeStefano, Los Angeles; Barney Kleid, S. Revising a Small Theatre Floor Plan and Acoustics

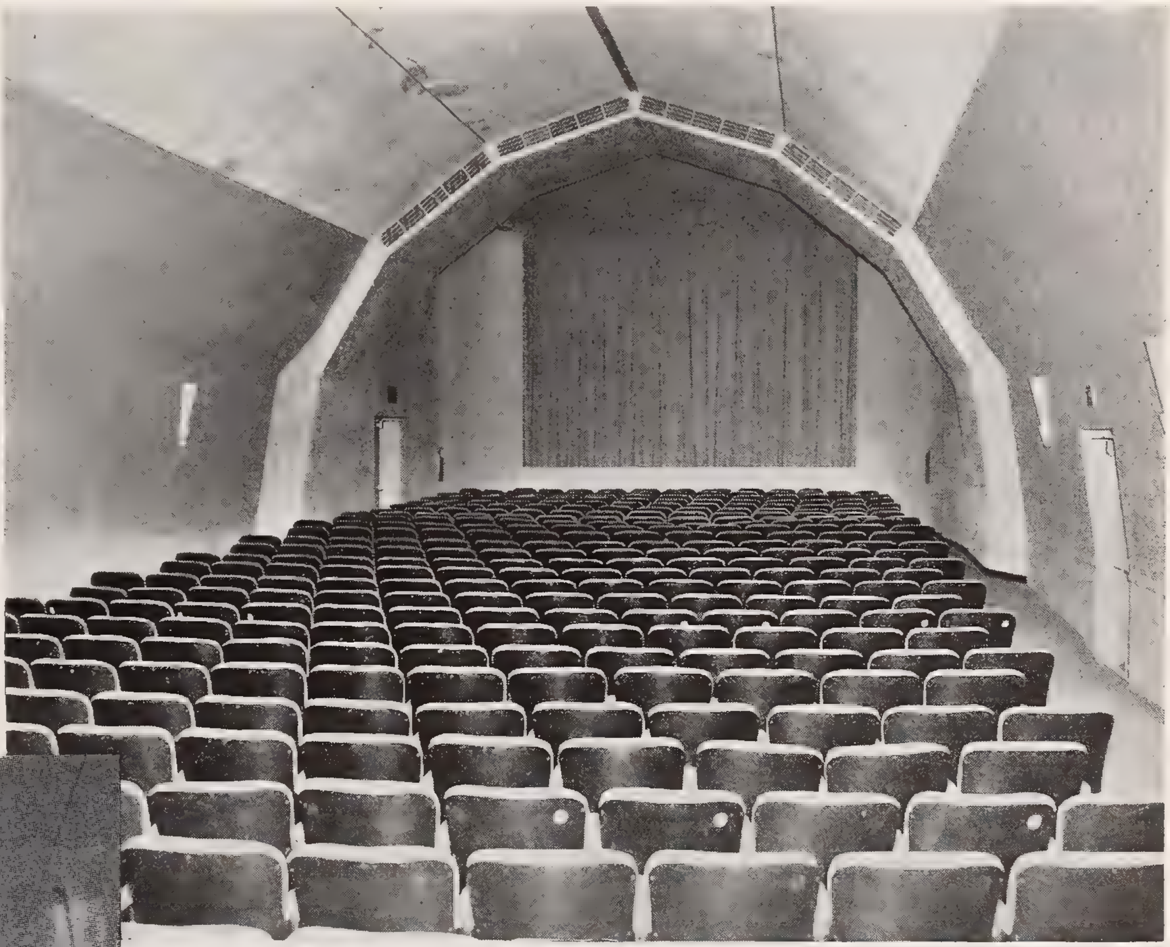
• Success of the novel Pix theatre in White Plains, N. Y., has resulted in its enlargement, with interesting treatment of the seating and acoustic problems

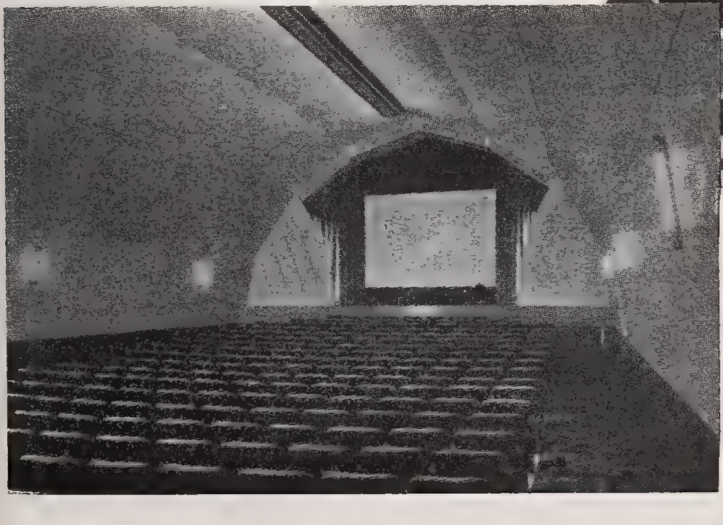
SINCE IT received considerable publicity when it was opened in 1936, many readers may recall the Pix theatre in White Plains, N. Y. It was of an unusual type of construction for a theatre, modeled to specifications as a type of house to be repeated elsewhere, to form a group of motion picture theatres of minimum construction, furnishing and operating cost.

The Original Plan

Built and operated by Pix Theatres, Inc., of which John S. Clarke, Jr., is head, the "quaint" little theatre, seating 300, in one of the better suburbs of New York, attracted local attention for its novelty at first, then began to be regularly patronized for its pictures and the excellent conditions under which they were presented. The original idea had been to design construction more or less for prefabrication, so that subsequent theatres could be even more cheaply erected. That notion had been filed away long before the house opened. The Pix has no successors—yet. The Pix settled down to being one of White Plains' regular cinemas, with patronage finally advising its enlargment. This remodeling has just been completed.

The Pix was constructed with true walls rising only 3 feet above the ground, with its piers supporting the roof at that height. Thus the roof forms both an upper wall, and its form is that of the inner wall which accounts for its specific auditorium characteristics. A false exterior wall was also built; this rises 6 feet.





Looking at seating from point marked "B" on the accompanying plan (following page). Staggered aisle lines are shown; first eight rows, however, have no stagger, which would be ineffective here. See Longitudinal Section for character of floor slope. The portion shown beyond the arch containing original ventilation grilles is new. At left is shown the original auditorium and seating plan.

The changes and additions made in the remodeling of the Pix theatre lend evidence to the fact that rapid and constant improvements are being made in the art of motion picture design. The owners of the Pix had enough courage and foresight to make substantial changes in the structure which had been erected as late as the year 1935, because they had studied their operation problems and new design trends and found that it would be poor economics and business to not benefit by the advantages present in the possible improvements.

Note below that new floor is flatter than the original one. The original floor was one of the early reverse floor types of what may be considered a radical departure from past practice. Yet this floor proved to function effectively for four years, the new floor being a further refinement of the basic idea and adaptable to conditions presenting themselves as a result of the remodeling.

Capacity Increased a Third

Lack of sufficient seating capacity, adequate restroom provisions, a lounge space, sufficient floor area between the street and the last row of seats, poor lighting amongst many other items were the problems which developed. Probably it was because of the fact that the theatre had an appreciative clientele and good management that the advisability of the remodeling work was justified. The cost of the new work was about $13,500 exclusive of the cost of changes made in the equipment and some new furnishings. The seating capacity was increased from 299 to 406 chairs. An extension was built to one side of the building at the entrance end to accommodate a new lounge room, ladies cosmetic room and managers office.

Improved access to the parking space was accomplished through the new lounge space. The box office was pushed back further into the outer lobby to allow for more sheltered space for those waiting to buy tickets. An extra exit was created behind the box office to allow patrons to leave without causing daylight streaks on the screen during the matinee performance. The number of toilet fixtures were increased to conform with the new seating capacity.

New Seating Plan

The seats were arranged according to the stagger system thereby permitting the use of a minimum pitch for the auditorium floor. Stronger floor pitches are always necessary when the seating depth is increased as it was in this case. To have to introduce a stronger floor pitch at the Pix would have entailed foundation difficulties, and interference with an air-conditioning apparatus room below the orchestra floor near the old screen position. The sightlines for the new floor are figured to provide for first row vision.

Acoustic Treatment

Increasing the length of the auditorium required careful consideration of acoustical design and treatment. In order to avoid "shooting gallery" conditions, the wall and ceiling surfaces of the new extension were designed with slopes and angles arranged to eliminate multiple reflections and to give the same effect acoustically as if the length had not been increased. This design also makes it possible to operate the sound system on the fader settings used previously, without the need for higher power levels to compensate for greater auditorium depth.

C. C. Potwin of Electrical Research Products, was the acoustics consultant for the revision.

Within the existing auditorium section the acoustical plaster used on a small portion of the ceiling area was retained. Rockwool blanket covered with a porous fabric was installed over the acoustical plaster on the upper rear wall section. This was done in order to provide the additional sound absorption needed at this point due to increased depth and a resulting greater path difference between the direct and reflected sound at the front seats.

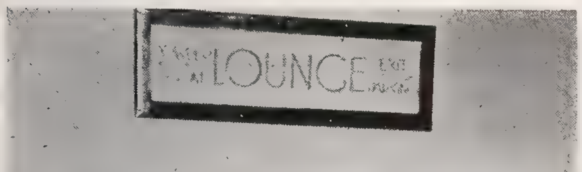
The combined absorption of acoustical plaster on the ceiling of the lounge and heavy carpeting on the floor, reduces and controls extraneous noise originating in this area immediately adjacent to the rear seating banks.

In extending the length of the auditorium there was as usual a more critical acoustical problem. The rear projection room wall facing the screen was treated with rockwool blankets covered with porous fabric over the old acoustical plaster to provide for the additional absorption needed at this wall due to the greater depth that has been created from the speaker to the rear wall. The ceiling and walls in the new extension were designed as hard surfaces at angles for proper sound control.

The picture size was increased from twelve feet wide to sixteen feet wide. The projection angle approaches very close to a true horizontal as was the case under former conditions. All ornamental architecture was avoided in and around the screen to provide a neutral setting. The surfaces in this new extension were made in a sand finish plaster to diffuse the light reflected from the screen, thereby controlling the surface light intensity around the screen to a proper ratio to the screen light.

Revisions in Lighting

Some worthwhile changes were made in the lighting of the auditorium. The long lighting trough in the center of the ceiling was removed because it served only one purpose that of intermission lighting and inefficiently at that. This fixture was difficult to relamp, and it required excessive wattages, in addition to the fact that it added to the appearance of undesirable length. A lighting trough was placed across the width of the theatre at the rear projection wall just over the doors. This trough is most accessible and it provides both intermission and picture light. Chair lights are provided and the use of side wall lighting was discontinued. Footlights were replaced by a few spotlights concealed in the ceiling at the beginning of the newly constructed part.



Looking into lounge from point shown as "A" on the accompanying plan. Wall paper is of silver and shades of gray. Warren McArthur dull finish satin aluminum and upholstered furniture, a plain twist-weave carpet of Lokweave type, a pale coral in color, without patterns; flesh tint mirror, and table lamps are the furnishings used.

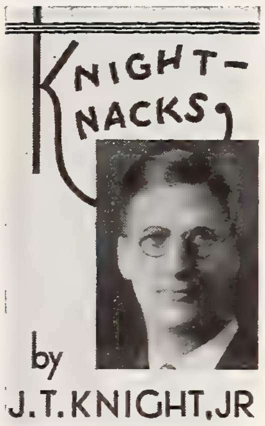
Carpet Planning for Beauty, Service and Easy Replacement

¶ Pointing out some practices likely to realize fullest carpeting values at the least cost and trouble



by J.T. KNIGHT, JR

SOMETIMES WE think of carpet in terms of our carpet troubles, and at such times it seems to be one of those necessary evils in theatre operation. But think of carpet in terms of a theatre without any floor covering, and I am sure you will agree that it then seems to become a real "tool of our trade"—an instrument of showmanship.

Just what does a carpet contribute to our theatres of today? These contributions might be listed — color, "atmosphere," decorative effect, improved acoustics, deadening of the sound of hard heels and scuffling feet, a sense of comfort and luxury. All of these elements are very necessary to theatres, nowadays especially. Thought of in terms of being without it we quickly think of carpeting more appreciatively.

We are all agreed, I take it, that carpet adds values to our theatre, and therefore we should be willing, not only to put up with the "carpet troubles" which we may have (and what of any value in our operations isn't occasionally "troublesome"?), but to give carpeting careful attention in preliminary planning, in selection of pattern, and in proper maintenance.

Lets start from the point of selecting carpet (we won't here go into quality, or grades, or weaves of carpet). Many theatres now use one pattern of carpet throughout the entire theatre, believing perhaps that they get a better price by purchasing more of one style or weave than smaller amounts of several kinds. That is not necessarily good practice. The larger the single carpeted area, the more monotonous the effect is. Then, too, when the time comes for replacement and it is discovered that the special pattern is no longer on the market, the fact that there is only one pattern complicates the replacement problem. We may then resort to shifting carpet from locations that have not experienced much traffic, to the worn locations, in order to delay the day of recarpeting.

Circuits have tried to beat this situation by standardizing on a given pattern of carpet and have the mill agree not to drop the pattern. In such cases all the theatres take on a sameness in one phase of their interior treatment, while no regard is given differences between the general style of one house and another.

Carpeting by Division

Most any theatre permits of breaking up the total floor area into smaller areas. The smaller areas usually correspond to the architectural features or divisions—lobby, foyer, standee space, stairs, vomitories or tunnels, aisles, powder rooms. Carpet pattern and color can be different in any or all such sub-areas.

Naturally, the change of pattern and color can be overdone and make the entire theatre give the appearance of a remnant counter on a sale day. A safe practice, however, is to consider carefully the areas that have to stand the severest traffic and try to isolate them. Then as they wear more quickly, those sub-areas can be replaced entirely, and the carpet in the theatre will not appear patched. You just can't match new carpet with worn carpet, nor can you match the same carpet in sections of unequal degree of wear without giving the definite, more or less noticeable appearance of a patch.

For the first of his "Knight-Knacks"—hereby installed as a regular feature concisely offering methods that he has found practical in theatres—Mr. Knight has chosen carpeting as his subject. In this type of contribution, however, he will of course be dealing with various phases of theatre operation, and "Knight-Knacks" will appear in different departments, according to the subject.—THE EDITOR.

Stairs and Aisles

Stairways and aisles and balcony steppings can be in a solid color and still be attractive and safe. Because of the high rate of wear in these locations, replacement costs can definitely be controlled to a minimum by this procedure. Many attractive effects can be obtained with plain colors by using contrasting borders, remembering, of course, that width of border must be in proportion to the total size of the area—a border that is too wide will make the area appear much smaller, while a border that is too narrow serves only to accentuate, often awkwardly, the shape of the area.

Carpet Lining Selection

In the same manner as we have outlined that the color and patterns may be broken up, with the idea of isolating heavy traffic areas, so also can that scheme be used as a basis for selecting carpet padding. I recommend ¾-inch thick padding, or padding in the 80- to 90-ounce class, as a minimum for use in theatres. I make this recommendation from the standpoint of overall economy, as lighter paddings do not seem to contribute to the life of the carpet. If under the heavy traffic areas a good, heavy carpet padding be used, it will definitely result in longer carpet wear.

Joining of Different Patterns

Whenever two patterns of carpet come together, they should be separated by a piece of plain-colored carpet inserted bethem them. It is at such division points that a change of weight in carpet padding may take place. Realizing that there is a direction to practically all patterns, when the same patterns abut at right angles—— say, at the head of aisles—with the standee area, it is a very good thing to separate these by a piece of solid-colored carpet, one either pleasingly contrasting or directly harmonizing with the background color of the carpet. Such locations are often also places of excessive wear, and these pieces are readily replaced.

Laying of Carpet Lining

The cementing of carpet padding to the floor is unnecessary except in aisles and in areas of heavy traffic that is entirely in one direction. Cheap carpet padding does not represent economy for it packs hard in flat areas, and in inclined areas it pulls apart. Each strip of padding should be carefully fitted to the adjoining strip so that there will be no tendency for them to work apart under traffic pounding. Strips of carpet padding that have worked apart —say, an inch, or an inch and a half— allows the carpet to sag or wear unevenly, besides which it is definitely a hazard for patrons, and especially for women with high heels.

Importance of Thorough Cleaning

Good carpet justifies good care. Careful vacuum cleaning is about all that a theatre manager can do toward this end. Good cleaning implies first a good cleaner. Small domestic type cleaners just won't stand up for six, seven and eight hours on heavy theatre carpets on heavy padding. Such light-duty cleaners quickly begin to lose their suction. Though when put into service they may pull 3½ inches to 5 inches of vacuum, in only a few weeks they will be less effective. The beater or vibrating effect of practically all light-duty cleaners is not sufficient for theatre carpets. To prove this for yourself, obtain one of the old-fashioned wire or wicker carpet beaters, and holding the handle parallel to the floor and about 2 inches above it, with a sharp action of the wrist strike the carpet with blows in rapid succession in order to create a vibrating effect, then see for yourself just how good a job your vacuum cleaner is doing for you. Frequent and thorough vacuum cleaning is one of the best preventives of damage to carpets by moths or silvertails that I know of. It will substantially keep them out of the fabric.

FLOOR SLOPE CHANGES

TEN YEARS AGO when we started to go into the manifold problem of floor slopes, there was but one type of slope in practice, that of the completely downward pitch toward the screen. Although the pitches were in most instances excessive, the results obtained at best amounted to only second-row vision. If you cannot see the screen because a person seated immediately ahead of you obstructs your path of vision, and if you lean sharply to one side to enable you to see over the head of the person seated two rows ahead of you, you are experiencing second-row vision.

Some of the more conservative architects looked with question when we introduced the "reverse" floor slope, pitching upward at the front section. There were minor faults with it at the time, but it is the original reverse floor which has led to the development of many new variations of floor slopes, combining the downward slope, the upward slope, and the flat floor in various degrees of pitch, giving, where properly designed, first-row vision.

Reduction of Pitch

One of the latest developments is a floor which at first glance appears to be almost entirely flat. It actually has a nominal downward and upward reverse pitch with a flat section midway between the first and last rows of seats. Staggered seating in portions of the seating arrangement tend further to flatten out floors, which have become more reduced in pitch due to the reverse floor designs. It is now possible to obtain first-row vision within a maximum floor slope, in either direction, of 12 inches for a seating depth of as much as 28 rows, slightly increased slopes being used for greater seating depths.

Slope Type Selection

It is safe to say that hundreds of theatres have already been built or altered with floor slopes influenced by the early reverse floor designs, though because of inexperience on the part of the designer, some of the examples have not produced the results obtained in the more studied projects. There is considerable flexibility as to determination of floor slope characteristics. One particular type of floor slope will always be more effective for one set of conditions than for another set. The most effective floor slope is the one which permits the most economical construction and yet produces first-row vision.

When Staggering of Seats Is Advisable

THERE has been considerable discussion lately regarding the use of staggered seating. What constitutes such seating? When should it be used? What are the benefits to be derived from its use?

A seat is in a correct staggered position only when a line from its center point, to the centre point on the screen, forms a true, straight line which passes over the arm block dividing the two seats in the row immediately ahead. If this line passes to one or the other side of the arm block, the stagger may be ineffective for many seating positions because such a condition more or less places one of the heads in front within the line of vision.

Reason for Minimum Chair Width

Staggered seating requires chair widths of at least 20 inches, and preferably more width whenever possible, because heads that are placed too close to each other in the seats immediately ahead to begin with, may in addition become closer together if any movement of these heads takes place, as it is apt to. These warnings are an indication as to why staggered seating is not advisable unless the seating plan is carefully laid out for each seat.

Staggered seating is most effectively used in remodeling work where the existing floor slope does not provide adequate clearance of vision.

Staggering for Slope Adjustment

In new work it is advisable to use staggering only in a small percentage of the total rows of seating, to assist in adjusting the floor slope where necessary to desirable levels. And in these instances the staggered rows should be located where extreme movements of the heads immediately ahead would cause the least amount of obstruction.

The actual loss of seats in using the staggered system is very small since the stagger is introduced only in the center bank of seats, or its equivalent; the stagger forms automatically in most of positions of the side banks. Each seat location, however, must be tested to determine if the amount of automatic stagger is sufficient.—B. S.

MATERIALS FOR REMODELING

AN INCREASING demand for correct acoustics and noise control has led to the development and manufacture of acoustical materials which lend themselves readily to economical remodeling of motion picture theatres. For example, the wide variety of wood and cane fibre products now on the market are adaptable to many acoustical needs and are relatively low in cost. When tastefully selected as to color and texture, they transform an outmoded auditorium into a pleasing, modern one, characteristic of the most up-to-date theatre structure.

Tile Absorption

Acoustical tiles usually absorb a much higher percentage of sound energy than the boards. Therefore, in cases where only a small amount of sound absorption is necessary and coverage of entire surfaces would result in a "dead" condition, the particular amount of acoustical tile needed can often be arranged in horizontal and vertical bands, giving a modern decorative effect. The areas around the tile treatment can be refinished with new plaster and paint, where required.

Possibilities for obtaining a uniform surface are:

(1) The use of a scattered arrangement of rock-wool blanket or other suitable soft material, behind a perforated board which covers the entire wall or ceiling surface.

(2) The use of perforated tiles nonuniformly distributed over a portion of the wall or ceiling surface, and the areas around the tile treatment covered only with a perforated board for continuity of appearance.

(3) The combined use of a highly efficient tile and a moderately efficient board, arranged to form a pleasing decorative pattern as well as to provide the total absorption required.

Mineral Fibre

Several mineral fibre materials, developed within the past few years and applied to surfaces by the spray method, offer some very interesting possibilities in remodeling work. Where maximum low-frequency absorption is essential, new herringbone lath may be installed over the surfaces to be covered and the mineral fibre sprayed directly to the lath, without the need for the usual scratch and brown coats.

OBSERVATIONS

of the editor

TESTIFYING TO VOLTAGE FLUCTUATION AND ITS PRACTICAL CONSEQUENCES

THAT voltage fluctuation is even more of a menace to good sound reproduction than was reported in the December issue of BETTER THEATRES, appears to be a necessary admission in the face of testimony given in response to those paragraphs.

First, Major Nathan Levinson of Warner Brothers studios, while "heartily" agreeing with the general conclusions drawn in the December story, objected to the view that sound reproduction will not be appreciably affected by fluctuation within 110 and 120 volts.

"This," he writes, "represents a four-fold increase in the power from the loudspeakers, and as a result patrons complain that the sound is too loud. The theatre manager drops the level, and a few minutes later the voltage may drop to 110 again, then the audience will complain that the sound is too low, so the level must be raised, and so on, ad infinitum."

As to the statement that "it is the dipping below 110 which affects sound quality," Major Levinson comments, "This is true in two respects; first, as the voltage is decreased, the sound level in the auditorium is decreased; second, as the voltage is decreased, the power capacity of the amplifiers is also decreased, making the equipment more susceptible to overloads. This decrease in power capacity, with its consequent impairment of sound quality, is, of course, highly objectionable, and for this reason we agree that voltages below 105 are dangerous."

Some actual experience data on the situation, which has brought numerous complaints from exhibitors to the film producers, that sound tracks were faulty, were also offered by Major Levinson, and these have been added to by E. S. Seeley, development engineer of the Altec Service Corporation. First, Major Levinson's:

"We have made a number of tests with a recording voltmeter of voltage variations in our Southern California theatres, and have found that over a 24-hour period, the variation is more than plus or minus 5%. And we have also found this to be the normal voltage variation at the Warner studios in Burbank. Measurements which we have made in our theatres also in the East, indicate that this is the best voltage regulation we can expect (without regulators in the theatre), and this variation causes a change in sound level in the theatre auditorium of from 7 to 8 decibels, which makes it very difficult for the exhibitor to put on a good show."

Mr. Seeley stated that enough statistics are not available "to give the whole picture" of voltage fluctuation, but he was certain that "such a picture would be a dark one."

"In one recent year, which we believe to be typical," he went on, "improper line voltage caused 53 trouble calls. Contrary to general belief, 75% of these troubles were in large cities. Trouble reports indicated that voltage at a theatre in one large city dropped to 85 volts."

Mr. Seeley cited the principal effects as those given in BETTER THEATRES' December article, but pointed out how the type of reproducing system is a factor.

"Principal sources of gain change," he observed, "are in the light output of exciter lamps, the sensitivity of photoelectric cells due to change in polarizing voltage, and the gain of tubes. The following figures represent approximations of the drop in gain corresponding to a 10-volt (8.7%) drop in line voltage.

"Exciter lamp output, ballast lamps not used—about 4 decibels.

"Exciter lamp output, ballast lamps used—about 0.5 to 1.5 decibels.

"Photoelectric cell sensitivity—about 1.5 decibels.

"Amplifier gain—should not exceed 0.5 decibels when feedback is not employed." When feedback is employed, the gain change will probably be negligible, he said.

Mr. Seeley also pointed out that amplifier gain will change to practically an unlimited degree if the tubes in use have relatively low emission.

Incidentally, we noticed the other day a power company advertisement citing Americans' expenditure of a billion dollars to see motion pictures, but only a quarter of that for domestic use of electricity. But a lot of those entertainment dollars go to buy juice just the same.

FOR VISION DECORATION AND SELLING

New Life and Color for Interiors

¶ Describing a variety of arrangements for the application of fluorescent lamps to both display and decorative illumination

By C. M. CUTLER
and H. J. CHANON

PROGRESSIVE THEATRE operators are constantly adding improvements that keep old patrons coming back and bring in new ones as well. Light and decoration go a long way in giving that new appearance and atmosphere so necessary to keep the theatre "out in front" in box office returns. A few ideas that may be easily applied are illustrated here.

Assuming that the theatre front has already been streamlined and renovized there remains the opportunity to modernize or to give fresh appeal to some parts of the interior. The lobby and foyer must fulfill the promise of the attractive theatre front. Since the patron is in these sections of the theatre for only a few minutes, it is important that light and color be so employed as to create a definite impression and a distinctive atmosphere to give immediate pleasure. Against this favorable background announcements of coming attractions become doubly appealing.

The lobby in Figure 1 has been given a new dress by applying architectural elements made up in the shop ready for installation to bare walls and ceiling. In this way the regular operation of the theatre was least disturbed. Line and color have been introduced in luminous elements which provide the general illumination. Fluorescent lamps are concealed in the center strip of the trough. This permits a wide flexibility in color and brightness, for lamps can be changed very readily to harmonize with the season or special occasions. The exposed fluorescent lamps add further to the variety of the lighting possibilities. Their diameter of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches insures both ample light and comfortable brightness for areas in which people circulate.

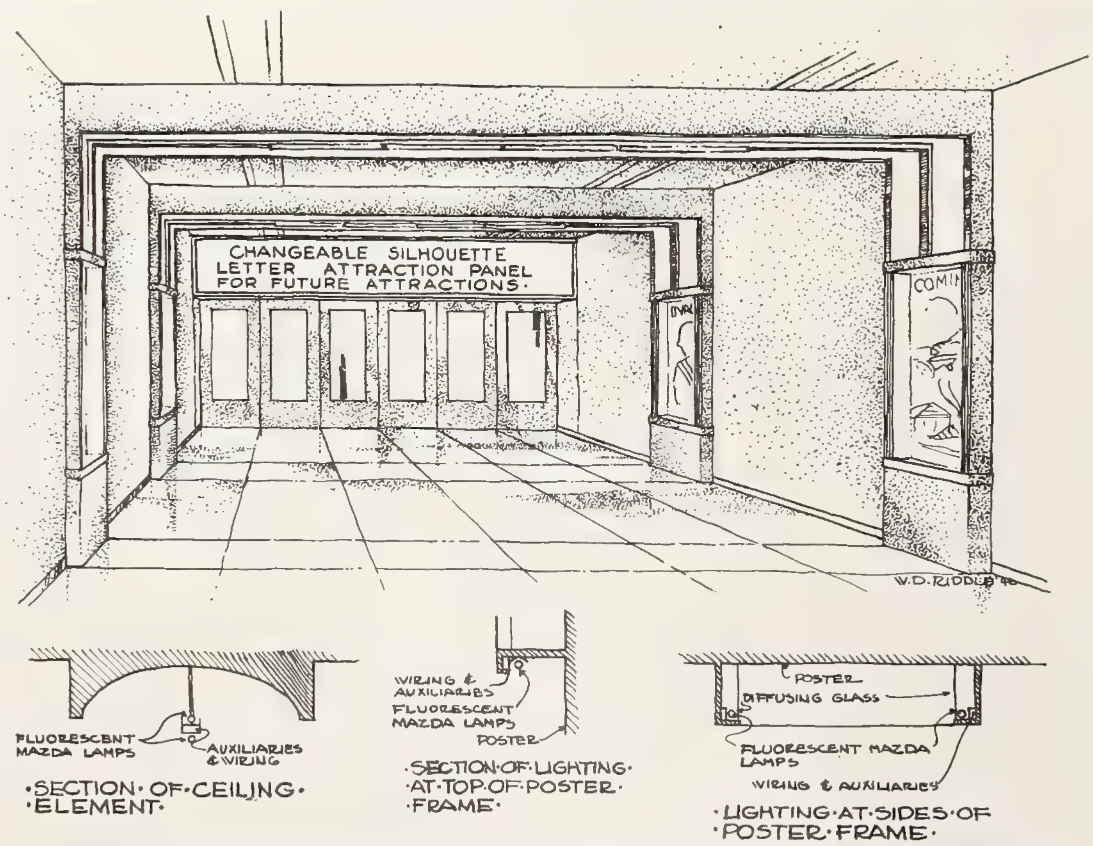

Figure 1.—A lobby, more or less typical, as it might be effectively renovated with the newer lighting devices as a major contributor. The schematic diagrams below the sketch indicate each of the luminous elements in their application here. Altogether, they provide an inexpensive means of modernization, which can be installed without closing the theatre.

Illuminated Displays

The location of the poster panels was chosen to fit agreeably into the architectural design and at the same time to tie in with lines of luminous elements so that the eye would inevitably be carried to them. A practical feature of great significance is the simplicity of the structure.

The lighting treatment consists of fluorescent lamps along each side of the cavity as well as above it. On the sides, the treatment illustrated consists of 36-inch or 48-inch fluorescent Mazda lamps behind plastic, frosted, or etched glass panels. These luminous surfaces of low brightness illuminate the poster and in addition attract one's attention to the display. This matter of attention value is highly important since one views the poster for only short intervals.

Attraction Panel Over Doors

The attraction panel shown over the doors utilizes effectively the space which so often is cluttered and unattractive. Rows of fluorescent lamps behind flashed opal glass offer a uniform background brightness for changeable silhouette letters. Here again colors can be changed readily when new effects are desirable.

Fluorescent lamps mark an entirely new trend in fixture possibilities for the foyer, lounge and auditorium. These new sources combined with some of the newer materials, such as laminated translucent plastic, Louverglas, textured wall board and metal foils, open up unlimited treatments for decorative luminaires. Some indication of the possibilities of applying these materials may be had from the suggestions illustrated here.

Foyer-Lounge Luminaire

For the foyer and lounge the wall bracket luminaire (Figure 2) is particularly fitting. A fluorescent lamp placed vertically is shielded by flat strips or fins of frosted or configurated glass or plastic. The fins may be cut to pleasing shapes. Light from the lamp filters through the fins producing graded tones that impart distinctive character. The fins may also be made of opaque material such as metal. The finish may be treated in a wide variety of tones to produce a range of brightnesses to harmonize with the character of the room. And, of course, with the fluorescent lamps numerous colors may be had.

interesting example of how the fluorescent lamp can be applied to produce large areas of low brightness for the foyer and auditorium. By appropriate choice of the color and density of the large cylindrical plastic sections used in the body of the plaque, a distinctive and pleasing area is obtained, the brightness of which does not interfere with the generally lower level of lighting desirable in the auditorium. The flat background lends itself to simple paint treatment to blend in with the foyer or auditorium atmosphere. The small cylindrical shield covering the central lamp may be of either metal or plastic, the choice depending largely on where the fixture is to be used.

Balcony Soffit Lighting

Lighting under the balcony requires special treatment. Here it is necessary to provide downward light but at the same time to exercise care that brightness does not contrast excessively with that of the soffit. A new material recently introduced called Louverglas is ideal for this purpose. Illustrated in Figure 4 is one type of suitable luminaire.

Louverglas is a plastic sheet in which very thin opaque strips are embedded to shield the fluorescent lamps housed within a luminaire from view at wide angles but still to allow the light to be directed downward. The louvers or thin strips may be obtained in white or color. When viewed from an angle the lower surface appears as a delicately tinted diffusing glass. The sides of luminaires of the type shown in Figure 4 may be finished in translucent lacquer to reduce the brightness and harmonize with the soffit. However, some light should be allowed to strike the ceiling surface around the fixture to minimize the contrast with the major portion of the ceiling. Fluorescent lamps because of their low temperature as compared with filament lamps are ideal for use with Louverglas.

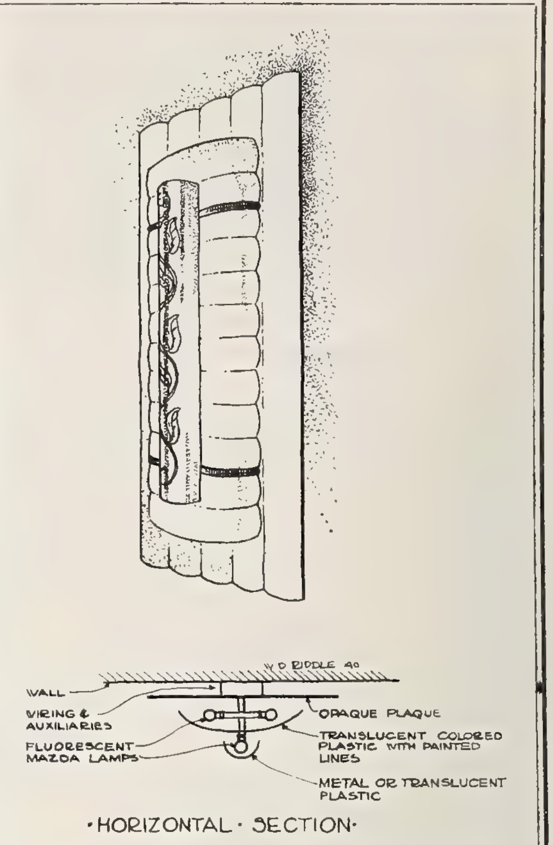

Figure 3.—Design for a decorative plaque suggested for either auditorium or foyer. The highly desirable large areas of low brightness are now possible by combining fluorescent filament lamps with plastic and other new materials.

The lighting ideas offered here suggest only a few of the many ways in which fluorescent lamps may be applied to enhance the attractiveness of theatre interiors.

[The authors are associated with Nela Park engineering laboratories of the General Electric Company. Mr. Cutler is in charge of the theatre lighting development work, and Mr. Channon is his assistant.]

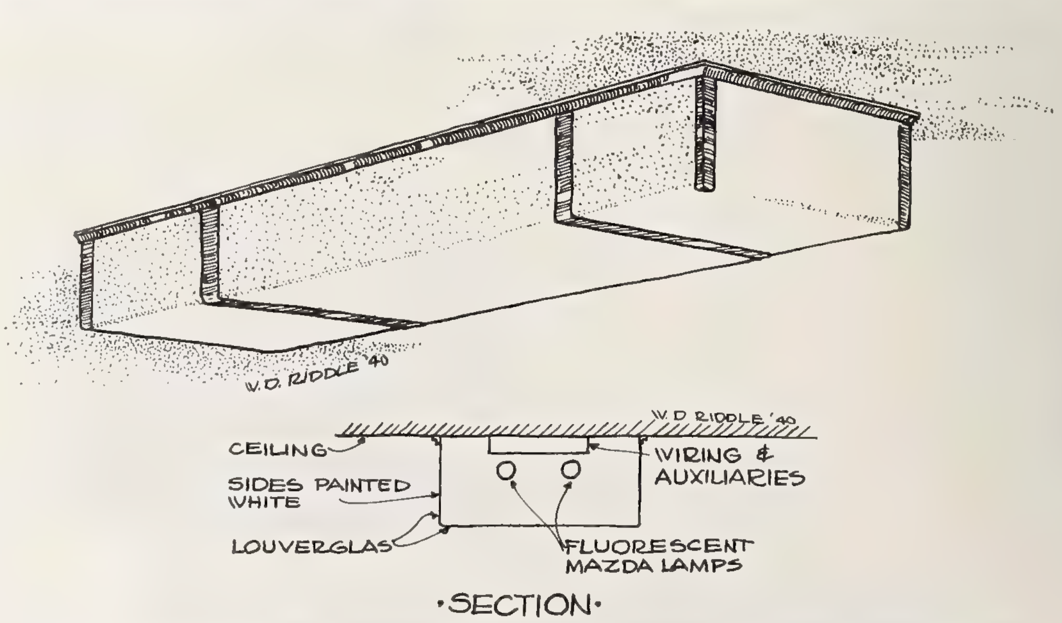

Figure 4.—Lighting fixture suggestion for use of Louverglas in balcony soffits. In this application, where downward light is desirable, but side light may be reduced in brightness, Louverglas in combination with mazda fluorescents offers many interesting possibilities.

Chair Installation Precautions That Save Time and Money

- Offering a group of true stories, from the recent memory of one who was there — and each little yarn has its own moral

By J. J. SEFING

MANY VITAL factors that effect the proper installation of chairs are not always fully realized. A chair may be of the best quality, assuring comfort and durability, but if it is installed improperly trouble will arise sooner or later.

CASE ONE:

For instance, a job that was done about a year ago. The theatre owner completely remodeled his interior and also had a new concrete floor laid. Due to the expense of remodeling his interior, he decided to keep about half of his present chairs, since they were in fair condition; the balance of the chairs he purchased new.

This new concrete floor had a new and peculiar incline, which evidently the concrete man knew nothing of. The concrete of this floor changed about 5½ feet from the rear of the front. The concrete man marked off the concrete line with a light wood batten, which was inserted on a radius from wall to wall. In this way it was easier for him to follow the concrete of the floor.

After the floor was finished and the chair man started to drill for the bolt holes, it was found that at about every other row, the rear holes came directly in the crevice left by the removal of this wood batten. As a result, it was impossible to permanently anchor the chair standards to the floor.

This condition was brought to the attention of the concrete man and he, as an afterthought, said this would serve as an expansion joint in the floor. What he did not realize was that he did have expansion joints along the walls without having any in the floor itself!

Another thing was found—that the old chair standards would not properly fit on the new incline. In order to correct this, shims were installed under the legs. Due to the hurry of completing this chair job on time, improper shims were purchased. About a week after the installation it was found that most of the chairs were loose from their anchorage. On checkup, it was found that many shims had shifted under the standards, and where porcelain shims were used, they were cracked. The bolts that were drilled in this so-called expansion joint were entirely loose and it was impossible to use expansion shields in this situation with any substantial effect.

The only way to make a permanent anchorage of these chair standards, new and proper type shims were installed, while chemically treated cement was used to fasten the bolts rigidly in the floor. This theatre owner could have saved himself and others time and expense by checking beforehand these conditions.

CASE TWO:

Another instance: A theatre owner remodeled a theatre that was in a very run-down condition. After finishing the decorations, he found—or thought—that he could not afford to install new chairs. He bought secondhand chairs, which he was informed were in fair condition. In due time these chairs were installed, and it was noticed that the edges of the seats and backs were quite rough, while in some cases the plywood was peeled off. The chair man was instructed to sandpaper these rough edges to eliminate the possibility of tearing any garments.

On the opening night the theatre was packed with patrons, who were pleased with the new interior decorations. However, shortly before closing time several women appeared at the box office and complained that their stockings were torn in the theatre. One man even claimed that his trousers were torn. This theatre owner was frantic at the turn of events, especially on the opening night when he had to pay out money to please the customers. The next day the chair man was notified of this embarrassing situation and promised to go over the chairs again with sandpaper. Unfortunately, it was impossible to get these chairs in good condition, due to the fact that the plywood of the backs and seats peeled off or were torn off by some patrons. In disgust, the theatre owner decided to buy new chairs. In about a week these new chairs were installed, and after the installation it was found that the hinges on the seats would bind and not work smoothly. The chair man was notified and he informed the theatre owner that this particular chair was not made to be installed on a radius, but in straight rows. In this instance, the theatre owner was not familiar with the different types of chairs and for what use they are intended. He immediately contacted the chair distributor and was informed that they neglected to tell him that these chairs should be installed in straight rows. However, they agreed to furnish the owner with a hinge that would work on a radius if he agreed to pay half of the expense. Their contention was that this chair was being manufactured at a price which would not allow them to use a compensating hinge. This matter was finally thrashed out, but only after a lot of grief and inconvenience to the owner.

CASE THREE:

There was also the exhibitor who, in remodeling, had his wood floor torn out and a concrete floor put in its place. He decided to use his present chairs. After these chairs were installed, the theatre owner complained that many chair standards had worked loose from the floor. On a thorough checkup it was found where the bolts would not hold, the concrete was very thin due to the dirt fill underneath settling. What happened here was that the concrete man did not tamp down this dirt fill evenly and properly. When the chair man drilled for the bolt holes, he drilled completely through the floor, breaking out large chunks of concrete because there was no resistance to the downward pressure. To correct this condition on each bolt that was loose, the concrete had to be chipped out quite a bit and chemically treated cement put in.

Another thing was noticed—that in many places where the bolt holes did not completely go through the concrete, large pieces had worked loose by the bolts. It was found that this was due to the concrete being "green"—that is, not properly set. When this was told to the concrete man, he claimed that he had made a test and found the floor in good condition to receive the chairs. When pressed by the theatre owner to make good on this floor, he claimed he was not responsible as he was pressed for time due to the opening date set. This particular chair installation was finally adjusted only after a series of costly delays and annoying arguments.

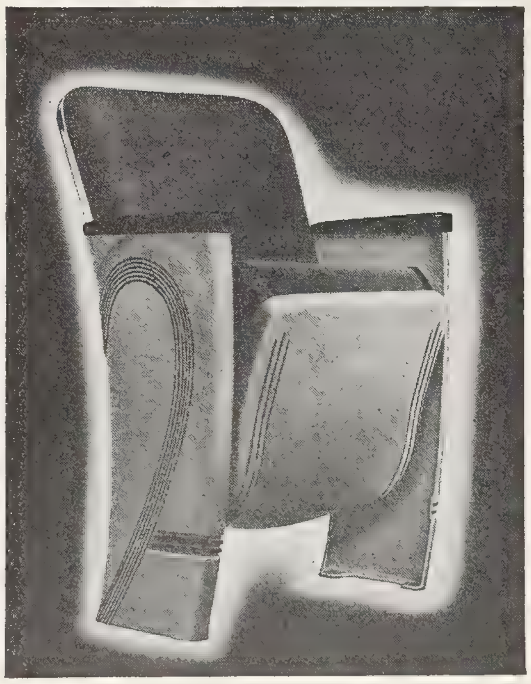
Notes on the Equipment Market

New Chair With Modern Styling

THE NEW model auditorium chair which the Irwin Seating Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., has added to its line, follows the more pronounced "streamline" effect to be noted particularly in the slight curvature of end standards, with these structural lines carried into the ornamentation.

The back is of full-upholstered type with steel back panel having an aluminum rim. This rim extends over the rear face of the panel to protect the enamel finish.



The seat has a coil-spring cushion. The bottom of the seat and hinge assembly is completely enclosed by a steel seat bucket; all bolts and nuts are concealed. Embossing on the seat bucket corresponds to the design on the end standard and may be finished in the same colors.

The hinges are of indirect compensating type, while the indirect bracket member is of malleable iron. The hinge operates on fibre bushings, which are die-swedged into the seat arms, and it is equipped with rubber bumpers to lessen impact on permanent up and down stops and generally to absorb jar.

The "Crusader," as this model is called, has a self-raising seat, with the balancing mechanism positioning the seat, when unoccupied at 15° from the vertical.

The chair is designed for shipping with hinges and seat buckets assembled. Kickboards are supplied, and all center standards are of H-steel. Filler panels are not included, but may be obtained.

Metal Reflector Booklet

AN INSTRUCTION booklet has been issued by Heyer-Shultz, Inc., on its metal projection arc reflectors. It is not a catalog or promotion circular, but has been written for guidance in the installation and use of this type reflector. Containing 31 pages, the booklet is of vest-pocket size. Many of the instructions are illustrated with diagrams.

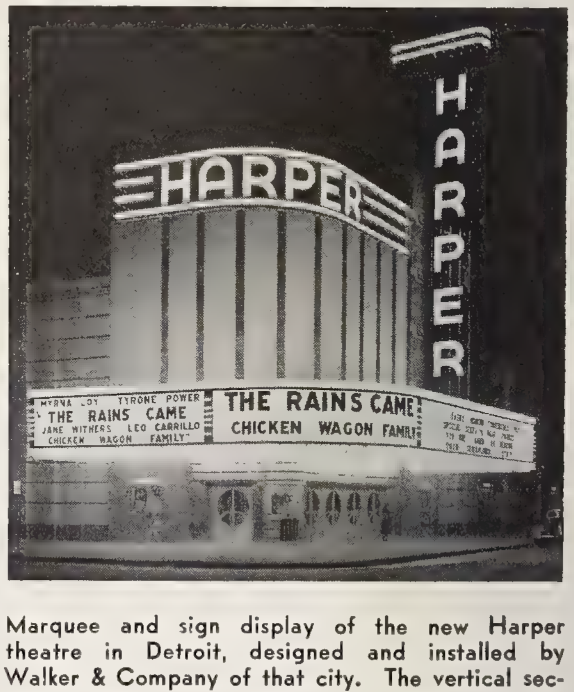
Projection Room Table

A NEW STEEL projection room table has been brought out by the GoldE Manufacturing Company of Chicago. This model is made in both 5- and 6-foot lengths.

The top is of heavy-gauge cold-rolled steel, and formed and reinforced at the corners. The 5-foot table has one drawer, the other size two drawers. Construction employs welding throughout. Legs are heavy angle iron and are welded to the body and cross braces. The top has a lip at the back to prevent tools, etc., from being pushed off.

Catalog on Mouldings

A NEW CATALOG has been issued by the Ames Metal Moulding Company, Inc., of New York, on its metal-covered mouldings for display frame construction, and snap-on mouldings for veneer and similar installation. All types are illustrated and described, while complete ordering instructions with respect to sizes and forms are given. Regular finishes obtainable are chrome, zinc, brass, copper, stainless steel, aluminum and bronze, while the staple metallic color finishes are gold, red, green, blue and black.



Marquee and sign display of the new Harper theatre in Detroit, designed and installed by Walker & Company of that city. The vertical section is over 54 feet high and 2 feet wide and extends nearly 8 feet from the wall. Letters are of raised porcelain enamel, cream color on a blue ground, and are lighted by green fluorescent tubing. The marquee is 119 feet long, carrying Adler silhouette-letter attraction boards for five lines of copy. The border is of cream porcelain enamel and has two rows of 10-watt yellow lamps separated by one line of green neon. The whole assembly is steady burning with the exception of red tubing in the headpiece, which has zig-zag animation, while the lamp illumination in the marquee border flashes to form a running border.

The Regular Maintenance of Lobby and Foyer

• Stepping now inside the theatre in the second of a group of articles on cleaning, sanitation and related maintenance requirements

By S. BRAVERMAN

MOST PEOPLE still among the living have had the virtues of cleanliness drummed into them since childhood. For one thing, we today have been made germ-conscious, and germs are associated in the average mind with dirt. Dirt is many things—the word has a number of definitions; but all of us know what is meant by a dirty home—or a dirty theatre. It doesn't mean merely that dust has been allowed to collect. It means that in general the place is in disorder—something is where it doesn't belong. When we say a theatre is "dirty," we are usually covering a lot of territory. And most people today are quick to notice dirt.

In the same general classification is shabbiness. How people conduct their homes is their business, but the way a theatre operator conducts his theatre is the business of all his patrons, and the vast majority of theatre patrons won't excuse either dirt or shabbiness in the theatre. They expect something far different from theatre management today.

But as pointed out in an article on front maintenance in the January issue, good housekeeping in the theatre is not only a matter of appearance; it is also a means of keeping deterioration within normal bounds. Methodical and efficient maintenance therefore means long-run economy as well as maximum attractiveness. This is not said for the purpose of springing any surprises on the people who run theatres. We can't imagine anyone in showbusiness today who doesn't realize that keeping a

The two drawings show how G-E MAZDA F lamps can be used effectively for lighting the theatre front shown in the above illustration.

G-E MAZDA F (fluorescent) lamps offer theatres these many advantages:

1. Provide necessary color and brightness so important to attract crowds.

2. They fit easily into attractive letter boards, can be mounted vertically to go around corners, are easily maintained, and color changes are easily made.

3. Can be combined with filament lamps which may be flashed or dimmed for added attraction value.

4. Ideal medium for creating luminous backgrounds on facades to illuminate entire theatre front area.

building and its furnishings in good condition saves money. It is of course merely a matter of taking good care of property, so that it will give proper service for as long a time as possible. And yet, you can see in some theatres—

Well, to get on with our story. This article is concerned with the interior between the front and the auditorium. The area may include a lobby between the front and a carpeted foyer, with the lobby floor covered with rubber mats. The care of rubber mats was dealt with in the preceding article, however, so we need only to consider carpeting here in discussing floor covering maintenance.

Carpeting Cleaning

Vacuum cleaning equipment is of course indispensable for the regular cleaning of carpeting. We need not here go into the mechanical requirements of the machine itself—this and its own maintenance is another story. Suffice it to say here that to do a thorough job of cleaning the carpeting of a theatre every day, which of course should be done without fail, the main vacuum cleaning equipment must be either of central-plant or portable heavy-duty type.

All exhibitors are familiar in a general way with vacuum cleaning requirements: what many of them fail to realize is the value of a carpet sweeper for picking up loose dirt during performance hours. Staffs vary, but whoever is the person to see to such matters, be he a porter or someone else, he should keep an eye on carpeted traffic lanes for noticeable tracking in of dirt. Most material tracked in contains grit, which, if allowed to remain, will be tramped down in the fibres of the carpet, cutting them. A carpet sweeper is capable of removing such surface dirt, or at least the greater amount of it, and it can be used during operating hours since it makes no noise and does not require running an electric cord across the floor.

Gum should be removed as soon as detected—and not by pulling or scraping it off the carpet fibres, but by loosening it with gum remover. Carbon tetrachloride will do this, but gum remover mixtures (they contain carbon tetrachloride) are just as effective, somewhat cheaper, and do not evaporate as readily.

Carpet Shampooing

In the past the shampooing of carpet while on the floor has often been regarded as inadvisable unless the theatre were closed until the carpet was thoroughly dry. Now, however, carpeting may be conveniently shampooed on the floor with Carbona Soapless Lather, for with this method, if properly applied, the carpet is not soaked through to the backing, and the solution will dry in an hour or two.

This soapless lather is a concentrate, which is mixed with water—about 16 parts water to one part lather. A quick as well as effective means of applying the cleaner is a rubber mop

By using soapless lather, rinsing is unnecessary, as it leaves no soap scum or other harmful residue to dull colors or become rancid.

Shampooing of course gets rid of even the fine dirt that has become ingrained in the weave, as well as surface soil, thus reducing wear while at the same time renewing its decorative qualities.

Furniture Cleaning

The soft fabrics of foyer and lounge furniture should be vacuum-cleaned fully as often as the auditorium chair fabrics are cleaned, and cleaning should be accompanied by inspection for gum and soiled spots. Isolated spots on otherwise clean fabrics should be immediately removed (if possible) with a fabric cleaning fluid. One method is to wet the soiled spot with the fluid, then blot it up with an ordinary ink blotter. If this is not effective, use a rag, briskly brushing the spot in all directions and over an area three or four times as large as the spot itself so as not to leave a ring.

Then at intervals furniture fabrics should be given an all-over cleansing with the same kind of soapless lather and water liquid referred to for carpet shampooing. This will renew the appearance of the fabric, and by ridding it of grease and grime, substantially lengthen its life. How often this should be done will of course vary according to specific seasonal and patronage conditions, but it should be done whenever the fabric begins to look dull and generally somewhat soiled.

Leatherette Cleansing

Leatherette furniture coverings are to be regularly wiped off with a damp cloth, to remove all dust and surface soil. Every so often, following such cleansing, it is a worthwhile practice to give the fabric a light coat of a liquid wax (of a type certain not to injure the fabric). This will both protect the surface of the leatherette and give it luster. Wipe the fabric dry, however, so that none of the wax remains to get onto clothes.

Structural Parts

Metal parts of chrome and similar furniture are readily cleaned merely by wiping off with a damp cloth. Exposed wood naturally should be polished with a furniture polish, or a liquid wax, of a type that does not require too much rubbing to remove surplus that otherwise will collect dust, get on clothes and feel greasy.

Cleaning of Stairways

The only suggestions warranted here, probably (since it is understood that the stairway carpeting should be vacuum-cleaned daily), relate to matters that are frequently overlooked. Corners of treads, for example. These are not easy to clean thoroughly without some such implement as an "orchestra broom"—a whisk broom shaped and with a handle for just such purposes.

Another part of the stairway that sometimes is neglected is the step fascia—because it is not stepped on, it seems to be out of the path of dirt, but it really isn't. The sides and posts of balustrades are also wont to be passed up.

Incidentally, stair-cleaning time is of course the time to check for carpet tears and loose carpeting, not only from the point of view of appearance, but from that of hazard.

It is also a good idea to cast an eye along the wall of the stairway—people have a tendency to brush against it, swinging a purse, toying with a string of keys, etc., which occasionally inflicts scratches and discolorations.

Ceiling Area

Regular inspection includes keeping tabs on ceiling dust, especially in corners. Cobwebs in the making are not always easy to see—they must be looked for. The ceiling should be dusted often enough to keep the amount that adheres to the surface at a minimum, thereby reducing the rate of discoloration.

From an appearance standpoint, certainly, but also to get the most out of the wattage burned, lighting fixtures should be kept clean, no matter how often it is necessary to clean them. Lamps and glass bowls should be wiped off with a damp cloth (lukewarm water, slightly soapy and with a few drops of ammonia added). Metal parts should be similarly cleaned, oftener in summer than in winter, not only to restore their luster, but so that corrosion will not set in.

In the cleaning of screw-base type ceiling pendant fixtures, the porter should be warned to leave the bowl in the same position as it was. To reach some parts while standing on a ladder, he may screw the bowl around, then next time he may do the same thing, until finally the fixture is insecurely attached.

Cleaning of Walls

Walls should be dusted once a week. What further cleaning is necessary, and the method, naturally depend upon the finish. Painted (not calcimined) plaster may be wiped off with a slightly damp cloth. Wood veneers, etc., of course may be freely wiped with a damp cloth.

Bases and wainscoting of marble, or imitations of it and similar veneers, can be washed down with water containing neutral soap (having no free alkali).

Miscellaneous Elements

One finds in some lobbies or foyers such decorative objects as bases, boxes, jardinieres, often containing artificial flowers or vines. These are great little dust catchers and sometimes not easy to get at without stretching or climbing up a ladder. Nevertheless, dust looks as bad on them as elsewhere. It takes only an extra minute to include them, using a damp cloth on both the containers and the flowers.

(Incidentally, how about putting a 25-watt colored lamp in each vase or jardiniere?—and a row of 6-watt lamps of various colors in a strip behind the flower box? Some of you do, of course; but others don't, and it may not be a bad idea.)

Mirrors

Mirrors are not only susceptible to dust collection and clouding up from dust adhering to surface moisture, but fly specks show up on them as almost nowhere else. They should be cleaned often. A water-ammonia solution is all right. Dry-type cleaning powders make dust that collects at the edge of a frame or blows elsewhere in the room. A liquid glass cleaner, however, facilitates this job, perhaps even giving the mirror a brilliance not obtained with the water solution.

Display Boards

Boards on standards or easels for attraction advertising are frequently placed where the backs may be readily seen by outgoing patrons. Sometimes these are left unfinished, often with bent-over nails and patches plainly visible. Obviously it would add to the "atmosphere" of the theatre to paint the backs of these boards, either black or some color in harmony with the surroundings.

Outdoor poster boards are similarly allowed to look shabby. They should be painted at least every six months, otherwise they do more "un-selling" than selling.

One also sees from time to time display cabinets for dishes and other give-away's that need dusting or polishing.

Ticket Choppers

Some doormen have the habit of putting newspapers, etc., on and about the ticket chopper. The only object that they should be allowed thus to have around is a pass pad or time schedule.

Cigarette Ash Urns

A sufficient number of ash urns should be available to patrons so that there is absolutely no tendency to drop matches or cigarette butts on the floor.

With respect to urns, it is suggested that those who have not already adopted the practice, procure a strainer—one of the kitchen variety, of a medium mesh, 2 or 3 inches in diameter—with which to remove butts, matches, gum wrappers, etc., from the sand. They can thus be removed without removing any of the sand, which after all does cost something. In this way, and by washing the sand every so often to get the dust particles out of it, a supply of sand will last just about indefinitely.

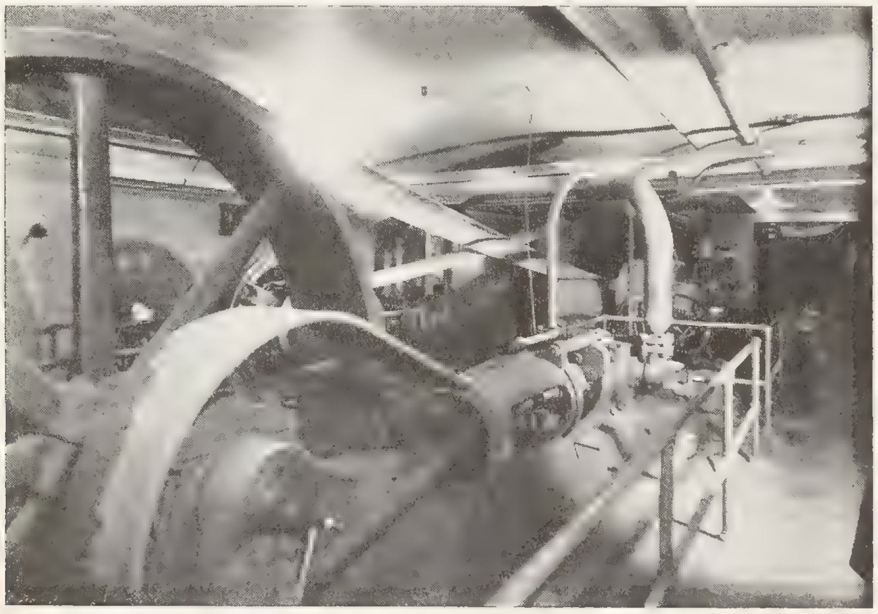
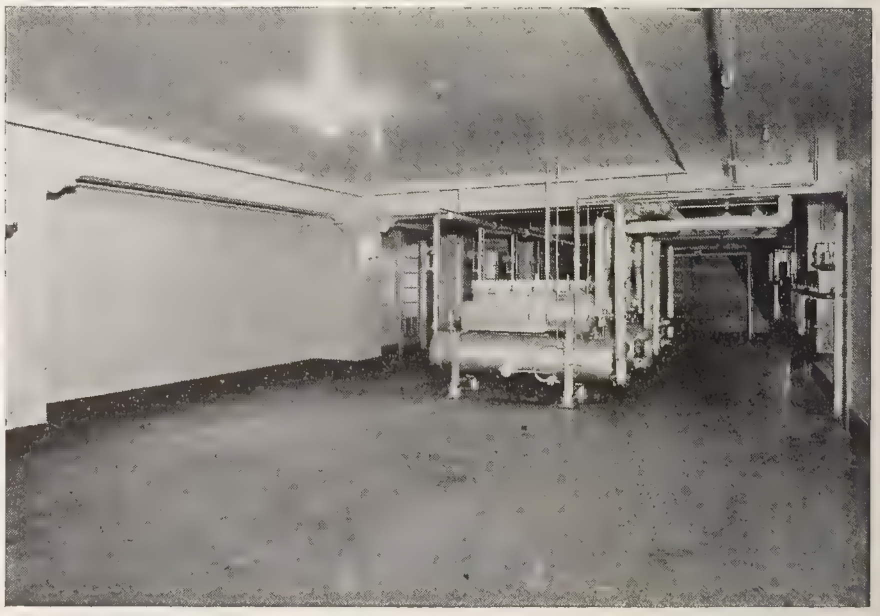
Air-Conditioning Advance: An Exhibit

¶ Comparing the new system of the State-Lake in Chicago with the one it has replaced

THE RADICAL changes made in recent years in air-conditioning methods and equipment design is demonstrated on a grand scale in the replacement of the system of the State-Lake theatre, 2,700-seat Balaban & Katz house in downtown Chicago. The system, in operation for a period including the hottest part of last summer, and with the condensing units occupying one-fifth of the floor space formerly required for corresponding equipment (see accompanying photographs), has never had its capacity taxed, while only three of the four refrigeration units installed have carried the load most of the time. It is estimated that the cost of operating the new plant is from a third to a half that for the old system.



The two original carbon dioxide machines in the State-Lake.



The four Westinghouse condensers in the same machine room.

The original installation was made about fifteen years ago (by the predecessors of the Kroeschell Engineering Company of Chicago, designers of the new system, then called the Brunswick-Kroeschell Company). The refrigeration cycle, which was that portion of the system replaced, consisted in two Kroeschell carbon dioxide compressors of 100 tons refrigeration capacity each. They were of horizontal design, with each powered by a 125-horsepower motor through a belt 16 inches wide, and each was equipped with flywheel weighing 7 tons.

Condensers were of the double-pipe, counter-current design. In accordance with practice at the time, all refrigerant channels were of extra-heavy piping, while evaporator coils were of 1¼-inch steel pipe electrically welded into continuous lengths. A cooling tower was also associated with these units to form the original cooling plant.

The two 100-ton carbon-dioxide refrigerating machines were replaced with four 40-ton Westinghouse units, using Freon as the refrigerating agent. These machines require 160-horsepower instead of 250, weigh 10 tons as compared with 83, and occupy only 200 square feet of floor space. The condensing machines are of hermetically sealed type, and each has its own evaporator unit, equalizing loading. Vibration has been so reduced by the design that no foundations for the condensers are required—they are not even anchored to the floor.

The use of four smaller-capacity units gives the new system complete flexibility, units being cut in or out according to attendance and other load factors, with fully automatic control. The new installation includes copper-finned direct-expansion coils, and a bank of Air-maze filters.

The State-Lake, built in 1922, has two balconies, large foyer and lounge areas, and many traffic corridors. It was originally erected as a vaudeville theatre.

Incidentally, while the original refrigeration plant was still in good operating condition when removed, it proved to have no salvage value whatever, so completely had air-conditioning practice changed as a result of advancement in engineering.

Why It Pays to Replace Old-Type Systems

horse-power per ton output if your condensing water was as low as 80°!

Now, let's look at the Freon compressor under the same set of conditions. With a suction (low pressure side) temperature of 30° the gauge pressure would be 21.05 pounds per square inch, and the discharge (high pressure side) temperature being 88°, the gauge pressure would be 96.4 pounds per square inch. Actually, the average operating range for Freon is 35 pounds per square inch, and 38° on the low side, with 136 pounds per square inch and 110°F on the high side. The electrical horse power requirements with Freon will thus range from only .9 to 1.2!

Actual Cases of Savings

During the past year a rather interesting conversion was made in one of the major theatres in Chicago [This is described elsewhere in these columns—The Editor.] where the carbon dioxide compressors were taken out and replaced with Freon compressors. At this writing a similar conversion is taking place in the Saenger theatre in New Orleans—carbon dioxide compressors (two duplex) rated at 300 tons output, each driven by a 250 horse-power synchronous motor, each motor requiring a 12½ horse-power exciter, making a total of 525 electrical horse-power. Because of the southern location the condensing water is seldom as low as 80°, and more frequently approaches 85°, making the maximum output tons about 207.

This equipment is being replaced with three reciprocating multi-cylinder Freon compressors which will total 225 connected electrical horse-power and which, due to special arrangements, will augment the capacity of the plant by nearly 30% and give a peak capacity for not less than three hours of more than 100% increase.

The older compressor jobs were installed at $500 to $600 per ton output; the Freon jobs are costing from $265 to $350 per output ton installed!

With the higher operating pressures of carbon dioxide, a trained engineer is required by local ordinances in most cities and because of those pressures, automatic controls are not practicable. With Freon the plant can be completely automatic.

From the standpoint of new compressor design, as compared with carbon dioxide and the early ammonia compressors that were sold for use with Freon, there should be no question about the advisability of discarding the old for the new.

I could continue to discuss this from the point of view of space requirements, maintenance costs on equipment ten, twelve, and fifteen years old, and of operating costs, but all those savings should be apparent, especially to those theatre operators who are "sweating along" with out-moded equipment.

Water Cost Factors

Now, let us take a quick look at this problem from the standpoint of condensers and condensing costs. In the early days when the various cities allowed us to hook the city water service to our condensers, we ran up our water bill, but that was not so bad because those of us who had air-conditioning in those days had a new toy to play with and it attracted much attention. We took much of the business away from our competitors and we were sure that the plant was paying dividends even at the high operating costs.

Nowadays some cities demand that we do not use their water for our condensers, or else pay a special premium for it; our competitors have newer and more economical plants; air-conditioning is no longer new nor novel, and the problem of supplying those old double pipe condensers with from 6 to 7 gallons of not higher than 80° water per ton, seems to be costing a lot of money.

What Your Competitor May Have

Our competitor has a Freon job; he only requires 1½ to 2 gallons of 90, 95 or 100° water per ton output; his condensers are thin copper and the tubes in them have little fins that increase the rate of heat exchange between the hot gas and the water. Because of the construction, the new shell and tube condensers are easier to maintain at a higher degree of efficiency —we need merely remove the heads and rod them out as you would the barrel of your shotgun.

Or maybe that competitor has an evaporative condenser which holds his water costs to a minimum; at any rate, his condenser pressure is only 135 pounds per square inch, and yours, if you have carbon dioxide equipment, is 1,056 pounds per square inch, and it is hard to hold such high pressures.

This ought to speak for itself. It is really hard to add much more to it. You would not think of going out to race your neighbor in a 1924 car against his 1939 machine. The same applies here; bring your equipment up to the standard of today's then you will be on an equal footing.

Automatic Operations

Now, let us see what has happened from the control point of view. In the first place we have changed our point of view; we have learned more of the science of comfort cooling. Years ago, if it was 72° or 74°, we were happy because it justified the "polar bears" and the "icebergs" on the marquee and posters. Today we read on the warm days, "This theatre is scientifically cooled." Whether you know it or not, this implies automatic controls, and I will be frank with you—it is my honest opinion that if you have not got automatic controls you have no moral right to use that phrase on your theatre. I do not care how conscientious your engineer is, he can't be as responsive to rapid changes in conditions as a control instrument is.

Controls don't have to go out for dinner and thereby let conditions get bad; they don't have to have rest periods; nor do they fail frequently because of an upset stomach. Give them regular periodic inspection and cleaning and they will perform.

Operating Savings and Results

Fifteen years ago the control problem with the high pressures of carbon dioxide equipment and the delicate vapor balances of the rotary compressors were a headache. I have disconnected many of them and resorted to manual operation. During all the years, the equipment manufacturers have been improving compressors, coils and condensers, the control manufacturers have been making even more rapid strides in their specialized line. In fact, not only have controls been improved, but our idea of control and points of control have changed radically. The greatest improvements and developments in controls are being made right now. Some jobs which I personally laid out or supervised only three and four years ago are obsolete.

In important locations, those jobs are being brought up-to-date. In order that you may have an idea what complete control equipment costs in relation to the entire job, I am going to quote from my own records:

Job	Tonnage	Cost Instal. per Ton	Control Cost	Total Cost
A—	100	$207.65	$564	$20,765
B—	60	271.71	524	16,303
C—	120	267.57	672	32,109
D—	60	319.13	444	19,148
E—	75	279.61	423	20,971
F—	50	244.16	363	12,208

You see at a glance that proper control equipment constitutes a relatively small percentage of the total cost, and also a very small percentage of the cost per ton.

Proper control of a job actually saves money, but more important than the saving in electrical current is the fact that the complete value of the system is realized or reflected in the conditions in the theatre.

Please do not misunderstand me: proper controls cannot increase capacity if the job is under capacity, due to faulty or erroneous selection of design conditions; nor can controls correct bad air distribution if the duct system has been badly designed or poorly installed, or improper grilles have been selected for that particular job. In brief, good controls are not the answer to all the things that may be wrong with an air-conditioning system. But given a well designed system and intelligent selection of reputably manufactured equipment, it is penny-wise and pound-foolish to omit, for any reason, adequate automatic controls.

REPAIR AND REPLACEMENT AN INDUSTRY-WIDE MATTER

THE other day a letter was received from a projectionist in Texas, who (asking that his location and name be withheld) reports this situation:

"This is a small town (2,500 inhabitants) and I have much trouble inducing the manager to supply needed parts for repair and other things necessary for good results. We receive many new prints upon which the emulsion is soft. After their return, almost invariably there is complaint by the exchange that they are scratched or that the sprocket holes were strained. I have asked different exchanges to send a projectionist here to see what luck he would have projecting green prints with projectors so badly worn. I know, too, I am not the only projectionist confronted with this situation.

"Would it not be a great help were exchanges serving a given territory to join in employing a competent man to visit all theatres in that territory at stated intervals, to examine the projection equipment and if found to be in need of repairs, to demand that they be supplied on pain of refusal of film service?"

Except for that last interesting proposal, the burden of this letter is not exactly new. Yet this must always be a live, timely matter. There can be no doubt but that in the end, far more is lost at the box office by refusing needed repairs for the projection equipment than the cost of the repairs would amount to, many times less.

Of course, one can see immediately a saving in deciding against making a repair, or replacing a piece of obsolete equipment. If a new part would have to be bought, we know it would cost, say $1.25, or $5, or some other fixed sum of money. Not spent, it is "saved," no matter what may happen to the equipment—or to the show! But the box office loss cannot actually be seen in any fixed amount, so it is hoped, such loss does not exist.

But it always does exist. Naturally, we are not so quick to blame a falling off of patronage on faulty projection or sound. They seem pretty good, and no patrons have complained, perhaps. No, the fault lies with the kind of pictures Hollywood is turning out—"just a lot of dogs!" Maybe we decide to lower the admission price—or to give away some dishes. But anything wrong with the theatre itself, its equipment, appearance, exploitation, staff courtesy and so on? No, the trouble is Hollywood—or the radio—or some sport or other activity that some of the public also enjoys some of the time.

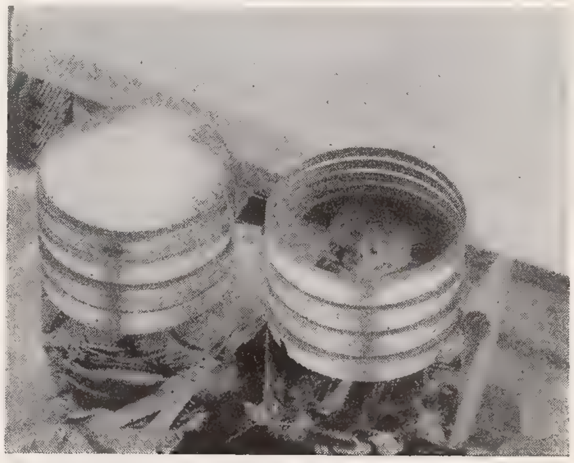
Yet another letter comes to my attention, this one from an Indiana projectionist. Inquiring about prices of certain accessories, he adds, "I have been unable to get the manager here to purchase them, after trying for a year, and I am not getting enough salary to purchase them myself. As we have no service, I am supposed to keep the sound in A1 shape, but cannot do it without proper instruments."

These things, of course, are not matters that concern merely individual box offices. A theatre not only sells certain pictures; it is selling the motion picture. And low operating standards give the motion picture a black eye, making it just that much harder for the motion picture to maintain its public.

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS

Transmission of Light Increased With New Lenses

PROJECTION LENSES utilizing a new principle in the reduction of light loss, said to increase screen illumination by from 15% to 40%, have been developed by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company. Essentially identical in design and construction with the company's previous projection types, the new lenses have extremely thin, transparent coatings on all glass surfaces in contact with air. These surface films increase lens efficiency.



Comparing uncoated and new type lenses. Shown resting on a still from "Gone With the Wind" are two groups of lenses, each having four elements of the same type of glass used in Super-Cinephor projection lenses. Note reflections prevent seeing picture through the uncoated lenses at left, while the coated type at right clearly transmits the image.

Although the practice of coating lenses to minimize light loss is very new, the knowledge that thin films of material on the surface of a lens would produce that effect is nearly half a century old. The practical problem has been how to obtain a layer of chemical film, or of tarnish, of the correct thickness, and permanence.

The coatings used on the new B & L

projection lenses have a thickness of, very roughly, 6/1,000,000ths inch, or ¼ of a wavelength of light. They are of two types. Inner surfaces, which are less often cleaned, are etched with a metallic salt of hydrofluoric acid. Outer surfaces are corroded or tarnished by a process which disintegrates the glass as such, leaving a film of pure, tough silica.

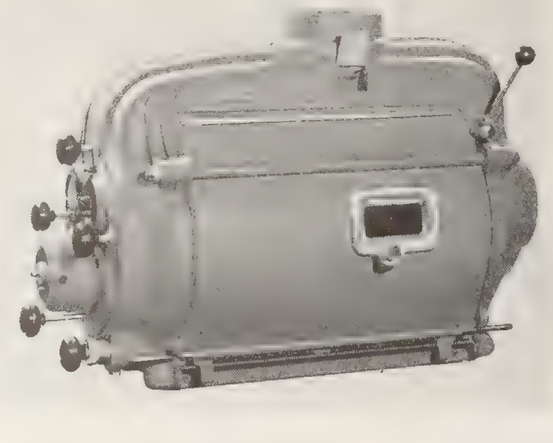
The extent of improvement in light transmission efficiency which can be realized by this means, depends partly on the structure of the lens system used—that is, on the extent of the losses previously present. A good uncoated lens is rated at a loss of from 4% to 6%, resulting from reflection of light at each of its glass-air surfaces. The total reflection loss in a lens assembly is therefore related to the number of glass-air surfaces it contains. In some cases, it is said, the new coatings reduce the loss per individual surface from 4% or 6%, to as little as four-tenths of 1%. In view of the number of glass-air surfaces present in a lens assembly light increase is considerable; also, focus is sharpened.

High-Intensity D. C. Lamp Designed for Small Theatres

A MEDIUM-CAPACITY, high-intensity projection light system, comprising a lamp associated with a specially designed power supply rectifier, has been brought out by The Strong Electric Corporation of Toledo. Intended for theatres with screens up to 18 feet wide and of seating capacities between 400 and 900, the new lamp delivers an output rated at approximately 2,000 lumens, or close to double the light obtained from the low-intensity equipments which many such theatres still use.

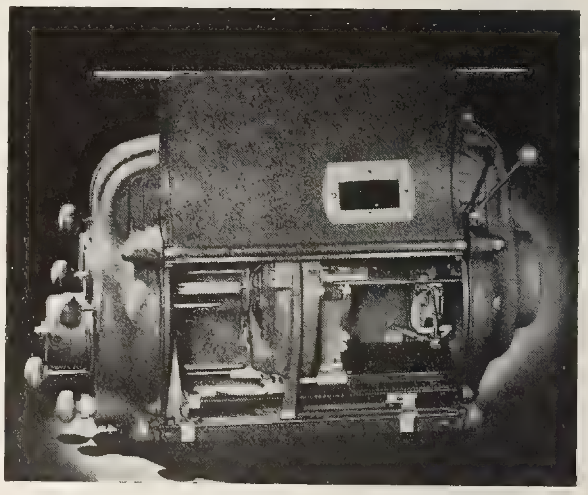
The lamp, called the "Strong Utility High," is of the reflector type, incorporating an 11⅜-inch mirror, and drawing from 1 to 2 kilowatts from its associated rectifier. Under normal operating conditions the drain at the arc is placed at 40 amperes, at 27 volts, and the rectifier current requirement is from 17 to 18 amperes from a 110-volt a.c. line.

The new Orotip C carbon, developed as a type which will not form carbide at its tip when operated at low current densities, is used in association with a standard low-current high-intensity 7-mm. carbon. Consumption has been observed to average 4.8 inches per carbon per hour.



Magnetic control of the arc is intensified by introduction of a small ash guide of ferrous metal directly beneath the gap, thus concentrating the magnetic flux directly on the flame. The magnet itself is located behind the reflector.

Arc feed is controlled by a specially designed, relay-less motor, the field of which is wired in series with the arc. Arc and field winding together constitute a shunt across the motor armature. Under those conditions the arc acts as an automatic field rheostat controlling a d.c. armature's speed; when the arc current declines the motor speeds up, reducing the gap width until the arc current (and therefore the field current) return to normal. If the gap for any reason shortens, the excess current, acting through the motor field, slows the armature, reducing the rate of carbon feed until proper gap is restored.



The lamp is equipped with a guide for measuring unconsumed carbon lengths and for quick location of the gap position during trimming; the arc is struck by moving a control associated with the carbon guide. All other controls are grouped at the rear. These include knobs for vertical and horizontal adjustment of both the arc position and the reflector. This latter is placed 30 inches from the aperture, is rated at 4 inches working distance, magnification 7.5, optical speed f/2.5.

The associated rectifier unit is equipped with a transformer having a core specially designed for accurate control of the arc at the low current densities employed and said to assure stability of operation, at those current densities, when the flame encounters hard spots in the carbons. It utilizes four 15-ampere rectifier tubes. Inasmuch as the total amperage drawn from the rectifier under normal conditions is only 40 amperes, these tubes are underloaded, which reduces deterioration of their filaments and makes for longer life.

The New 19000 Series Simplex HIGH

Projection Arc Lamp House

AND ASSOCIATED RECTIFIER EQUIPMENT

A low cost, high intensity, direct current projection arc of intermediate capacity designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width, heretofore restricted to the use of low intensity lamps, with their dim yellow light, because the operating, if not the original cost of the earlier high intensities has been prohibitive.

Although the Simplex High projects twice as much light as the low intensity the over-all operating costs are only slightly higher, because, this new arc operates at only 27 volts as compared to 55 volts in the low intensity, and each 14-inch 7 m.m. suprex positive carbon burns for at least two hours.

THIS Simplex High projects the snow-white light characteristic of the high-intensity arc which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF Simplex ENGINEERING EXCELLENCE

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

How Local 349 Serves Theatre and Industry

THE CONSTRUCTIVE policy of Local 349, Lima, Ohio, and how it works is described in a letter recently received from Theodore P. Hover, Lima projectionist. He writes:

"Local Union 349, IATSE & MPMO, this city, is quite proud of our past record of keeping the show (and a good one, too) on the screen with a minimum of breaks in either sound or visual projection. In addition to our well-established program of cooperation between our members, local radio parts dealers, electricians and local machine shops, our union is largely composed of men from among whom ideal projection staffs may be selected.

"As you are aware, we have three projectionists in each theatre. Under our set-up, at least one man in each theatre staff has sufficient engineering knowledge, for example, to design, say, an amplifier, and with this amount of engineering knowledge, trouble-shooting becomes a relatively simple matter, easily and rapidly performed. The close spirit of co-operation between our men and the service engineer makes a combination rather hard to beat.

"As a matter of courtesy, we immediately report any break-down occurring in the sound equipment of any of our theatres, though I can truthfully say we have, up to now, without exception had the sound on again before the service engineer arrived.

"We also endeavor to place at least one man of 'ace' calibre in mechanical ability on each theatre projection staff. He must be able to take care of any mechanical trouble or break-down as well as it can be done without new parts, sometimes not immediately available.

"The third man usually is a sort of jack-of-all-trades, possessed of good working knowledge of every branch of projection work. Having the co-operative assistance of both circuit and independent theatres of Lima, we have been able to carry out a program of effecting repairs before the actual break-down occurs, with the result that over a period of years I believe our projection room overhead is outstandingly low, while both screen and sound results are above the average.

"I might add, the activities of some of our members is not confined to the theatre. At least two of them maintain rather elaborate experimental laboratories (which you visited on your last stop here) for experimenting and working with sound, while two others have very excellent machine shops in the basements of their homes."

I commend this letter to the attention of local unions everywhere. When a union has the power to, and does, oblige exhibitors to employ none but their own members in the projection rooms of theatres, as a matter of common sense, fairness and justice to all concerned, the union has an obligation to supply those exhibitors with thoroughly competent projectionists, in all that honored title implies.

Nor can any justifiable excuse or reason be offered for failure so to do, remembering that the exhibitor is not the only one to suffer through lack of complete competency. In addition, there is the public, the producer, the equipment designer and manufacturer—in fact, just about everyone having any connection with the motion picture industry.

It's Up to Exchanges To End Film Marking

WHILE ABUSE of prints by the infliction of totally unnecessary changeover cue remarks has decreased, in some sections the outrage continues. Guy C. Black, projectionist of the Plaza theatre at Lyons, Nebr., submits a clipping from a new print in which three deep scratch marks have been inflicted in three successive frames, the marks extending halfway across the frame. As though this were not sufficient, on the opposite side of the three adjoining frames is a wide pencil mark in the form of an X, extending across each frame.

Brother Black rightfully says, "It is my personal opinion that if men perpetrating such outrages can be located, they should be kicked out of both the theatre and the profession!"

He adds, "Prints in this section are being thus mutilated so that it is impossible to project one until a complete check-up of reel ends has been made and a lot of these hideous markings removed. I have taken this matter up with the film companies but have been unable to secure any action. If they don't care a damn about how their productions appear to theatre audiences, they might at least give some consideration to projectionists who do."

I have treated of this matter very many times, pointing out the fact that such outrages can be stopped, but only completely in one way: All exchange inspectors must clear all their reels of such markings. Thereafter they should carefully inspect all reel ends and report to the manager any markings found, the manager then taking the abuse up with the theatre manager to insist upon its termination.

By the time a theatre manager receives a few such protests the abuses, I think, will cease in his theatre.

We now have quite a few exchanges where such abuses are not tolerated. May their number increase.

The Old Question: How To Learn Projection

IT IS A dull week that does not bring from one to half a dozen questions similar to that just received from Roy W. Garber, a Virginia man. He writes:

"I am considering taking a course in projection from a trade school which claims to give very complete training, not only to teach one to operate the equipment, but in the matter of repairing and adjusting it. Would you advise taking the course?"

Once more, after years of saying it, no!

A trade school might teach one to adjust a projector, also to make some minor repairs. It might teach one to thread a projector and do some other similar things, but such matters are incidental. A trade school likewise might teach a man how a locomotive is run, but it could not teach him how to run that locomotive safely in regular traffic, or all those other things encountered in service "on the road."

The same thing is equally true of projection. A student might be told about certain functions incident to projection, but when he took his place in a theatre projection room he would find he was far from being a competent projectionist. He would meet many situations he could not handle satisfactorily, if at all. If he attempted to secure a position in a city, large or small, he most likely would find that to do so he must first join the union, and unions no longer are willing to accept projectionists so "trained."

There is essentially but one way to become a practical projectionist, and that is to serve an apprenticeship in some theatre, meanwhile studying. My advice in these matters is, get a job in some theatre, no matter in what capacity. Then start studying the business in all its phases. Get acquainted with the projectionist, make him your friend. You will thus be enabled to pick up many practical pointers, which, combined with study, will start you well upon your way to a projection room.

When you finally get there, if you have really applied yourself you will really be a projectionist. Takes time, yes, and real effort. However, in this case the longest . . . and you can't show color features in natural hues with unbalanced light

● The audience sees on the motion picture screen only those colors that are present in the projection light. If certain colors are absent from the light, the dye on the film can't put them on the screen. Excess of certain colors likewise distorts the natural hues of color features. ● High intensity carbon arc projection assures an evenly balanced light with all colors present in essentially equal intensity. This is apparent from the chart of color distribution here shown. ● This is the quality of projection light for which color film is processed. It is the only quality of light that gives natural color reproduction.

A Projectionists' Own Survey of Projection

LAST FALL J. R. Prater, projectionist of the Congress theatre at Palouse, Wash. (also a partner in its operation), motored approximately 6,000 miles, to attend the fall session of SMPE and, so he says, to visit me. Now back home, he has written me his observations on the trip.

Probably the main point to be gleaned is that there still is a large percentage of our theatres in which top-quality projection, or even passably good projection, is rendered impossible because too many managers, due to a false idea of economy, refuse to supply what is necessary to maintain projection equipment in proper condition. Mr. Prater writes:

"I visited a goodly number of projection rooms between the two coasts. It was a genuine pleasure to find many projectionists splendid, capable men. It is a highly regrettable fact, however, that some of them who were able and eager to produce better results could not do so because of what they had to work with. These men could not be justly blamed for an inferior presentation of the picture.

"Most of them were, or at least, had been eager to improve the results, until they discovered they were butting their heads against a stone wall of managerial indifference. I also found many cases where the projectionists had taken real pride in keeping their equipment in perfect working order, with the managers willing to supply things necessary to do so.

"Many of the men had taken the trouble to point out places where improvement or greater efficiency might be accomplished, but had received neither thanks nor cooperation from the management, or at least too little to enable them to proceed, they told me. This was especially true of circuit houses that are operated by "remote control."

"Another highly injurious effect too often set up by both managements and unions is that no projectionist may feel assured of the right to stay on his particular job as long as his duties were performed satisfactorily with the results delivered all that could be expected from the things provided him to work with. As a logical result, men working under this unsettled condition invariably did not care to exert extra effort to improve projection. They might expect replacement or transfer at any time, regardless of the excellence of the performance. Such a condition, in the very nature of things, engenders a what's-the-use" frame of mind. True, the show goes on in spite of such things, still the lack of competent, conscientious work becomes increasingly apparent, with unquestionable, though seldom realized, loss at the box office.

"The focus is not maintained at razor sharpness, as it might be with most films. Oil smeared films are received and projected without protest, or even comment, and so on through a long list of small faults, because of the 'I-should-worry' attitude of the man who knows he very possibly will not be there tomorrow.

"Viewed individually, many of the faults are not serious, but collectively they are. Each represents a bit of loss to the public. Viewed collectively, they represent a large one to the box office. Moreover, as the 'I-should-worry' attitude advances, efficiency of operation drops off, and this may, and usually does, continue indefinitely without detection.

"In closing, may I offer this tip to exhibitors: Many of the best men now in the projection field, according to my observations, are already looking around for other fields offering greater opportunity for brains and ambition than is offered by projection. It is certain that unless projection soon recognizes and appreciates the value of the work of really sincere, able projectionists, many of that calibre will soon be in other fields.

Factors in Deciding Mazda Suitability

HERE IS A subject apparently still too little understood by theatre men. O. F. Craig, manager of the Royal theatre at Newark, Ark., asks, "Can we get a good picture using a 900-watt, 30-volt Mazda light source? We now use a 900-watt Mazda on a 60-foot projection distance, but desire to make our stage deeper and locate screen at its rear. Have heard it is impossible to get a good picture with such a light source at any distance exceeding 60 feet. We therefore apply to you for information."

Which is gladly given. First, as to distance, considered as such. We are told by the scientific fellows that, using a telescope, we can see stars located one million light-years away, the latter being the distance traveled in a year by light, which speeds along at 186,000 miles per second. Thus, we see that light actually travels at least 334,800,000,000,000 or almost 25 trillions of miles through space, plus 50 miles of our atmosphere, to the earth. [We hope he's right, but if F. H. thinks we're going to spend our time checking him up on his arithmetic when he plays with figures like that, he's sadly mistaken!—YE ED.] Why, then, worry about a matter of 20 or even 100 added feet in a theatre?

Of course, especially with Mazda, the light source is located relatively close to the converging element and therefore has an optical system that causes a more heavy divergence beyond the aperture. If, therefore, the working distance (distance from aperture to first surface of projection lens) is too great, it is very possible the beam of light from the aperture will overlap the lens and that light loss will occur.

The thing to do is obtain a projection

The NEW STRONG UTILITY

High Intensity Automatic Projector Arc Lamp

For the moderate sized theatre using a screen up to 18 feet in width; where the vivid brilliancy of high intensity projection has been heretofore denied by prohibitive operating cost.

To secure the desired screen brilliancy with the present dense black and white and the colored films, twice as much light is required as is possible to project by any low intensity lamp.

This necessary doubling in light over the low intensity has now been made possible at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2 cents per hour, through the development of a perfectly balanced and coordinated lamp and rectifier unit of intermediate capacity which exactly fits the needs of this class of theatre.

lens of the focal length that will be required, focus the light upon something located where the screen will be and see whether or not all of the light beam enters the lens. If it does, there should be no difference between the picture you now have and the one you will get, projection lens quality and other things being equal.

It is not the added distance that should be worried about, but the efficiency of the projector optical system, provided the screen surface reflection power be not altered.

Further Observations On Intermittent Flicker

FROM Frank R. McLean, director of projection for the Sparta Theatre Circuit, Coulterville, Ill., I have this letter:

"For years I have followed your writings and now am moved to contact their author. The article, 'A Curious Case of Intermittent Flicker,' in your Comment, page 42, December issue, interested me deeply. May I be pardoned for taking issue on one point of your comment on the trouble therein described, namely, 'a flicker occurring intermittently'?

"You name current pulsation caused by rectifier action as one possible cause of the trouble. According to my own view, the type of shutter being used would be a more probable cause. As you well know, no screen illuminated by an intermittently interrupted light beam is wholly without flicker, though the same may be reduced to the point of invisibility when projecting the average print at present-day speed. However, the close observer can detect it if the projector is projecting white light—no film.

"Of course, as you say, there is a possibility that low-cycle current may be at least partly responsible, but as I see it, the 48-cycle pulsation of the light beam resulting from the two-blade shutter would be far more visible than would 50-cycle pulsation caused by a full-wave rectifier fed by 25-cycle current.

"Regarding the special shutter mentioned, this type is being used with satisfactory results by many theatres in this section, including Sparta Theatres, Inc. However, they are not perfect, being in effect a modified one-blade shutter, due to the fact that one of their two blades intercepts more light than the other.

"With prints of average density the effect is not noticeable; with those of less density, particularly in scenes having large areas of clear film, a visible flicker appears. However, after watching such a scene for a time the effect seems to disappear, except when it is deliberately watched for, as Mr. Jackson doubtless was doing. If he desires to obtain more light from his present light source, let him try the following experiment:

"Remove the metallic shutter blade from its hub, lay it on a sheet of stiff, white cardboard, such as business cards are made from, mark its outline upon the paper and cut it out, disregarding the wire rim that joins the outer ends of blades.

"Blacken this paper blade with ink and install it in the shutter hub. Install the whole on the projector and set it correctly. Such a paper blade will stand up surprisingly well. [I used one for three weeks once.—F. H. R.] Then, cutting the same amount off each edge of both blades each time, keep doing so until very slight travel ghost appears. Remove the paper blade and trace its reduced outline on the metal blade to match—less just enough to eliminate the small travel ghost. Reinstall the metal blade and the job is done. However, do not trim the metal blade too close or as the gears wear, travel ghost will appear; also, be sure to trim both edges of both shutters exactly the same.

"During past years I have done much experimenting with shutters, both in theatres and in my own repair shop, finding these facts to be true: (a) no present shutter will operate without some trace of flicker; (b) any departure from the standard shutter having two identical blades will increase flicker visibility; (c) provided the gear train has a minimum of lost motion, the blades of 90° stock shutters supplied by manufacturers of some projectors may be trimmed as much as 15% without introducing travel ghost, but (highly important) both blades must be trimmed in exactly the same amount, otherwise flicker visibility will be increased."

Truly an interesting answer to the trouble, methinks, and I am of course grateful to Friend McLean for his discussion of this trouble. Moreover, I am inclined to think that he may be very much right in his diagnosis. What do you other fellows think?

WHO buys WHAT

A PIECE about documentary films on this page last week was based on what a New York daily reported of a speech by Mr. Arthur L. Mayer of the Rialto theatre. Mr. Mayer finds the quotations incorrect and forwards his fundamental thesis:

"There is a demand for pictures of a progressive nature, but it exists primarily on the part of people who do not regularly attend motion pictures and who, when given the opportunity to support such pictures, fail to do so sufficiently promptly or in sufficient numbers to offset the loss in patronage on the part of the exclusively amusement minded.

"Do not blame formula minded producers or stupid exhibitors, or block booking or circuit owned theatres, if you do not get the pictures you desire.

"In the final analysis, American pictures will be just as good as the American people demand and patronize. . . . "

With that expression every unprejudiced observer of the amusement industry must agree. It will stand a trifle of amplification. The box-office patron decides, between offerings, or not to buy at all.

To the motion picture, beset with many competitions, it is unfortunate that the negative votes cannot be counted or evaluated, but in periods of depression and decline they may be most important.

THE National Board of Review, which has been having symptoms these several years, is now in the hands of a psychoanalyst. The distinguished Dr. A. A. Brill, who has been elected chairman of the National Board, has issued a statement on what he thinks motion pictures are for:

"I feel that motion pictures offer not only good entertainment, pleasure and relaxation, but also education. To be more explicit, I firmly believe that the movie is an excellent medium for mitigating the heavy burdens of life imposed on us by the struggle for existence. In the movies we can identify ourselves with the hero or heroine, and after living through their hardships as depicted on the screen, we attain fulfillment. For the time being we forget the struggle of inexorable reality and find solace, pleasure and knowledge in almost any movie house. . . . "

It would seem that the famous psychiatrist is prescribing indeed the "escape" film. He is hereby warned that the Nugent-Barnes school will not be approving.

BY the roundabout path of a communication by "W. T. C." to the "trading post" column of Business Week, we come upon this expression of Mr. Somerset Maugham from the Saturday Evening Post: "Literature is an art. It is not philosophy, it is not social economy, it is not politics; it is an art. And art is for delight."

"That goes for the popular movies, too," observes "W.T.C."

One is moved, however, to notice that some of our people are delighted with strange fare—or think they are.

WHAT Mr. Westbrook Pegler dislikes he also hates, magnificently, unrelentingly, utterly. And when he likes he also likes like that, intemperately. When he saw "Snow White" he set a new high in piping praises. Now he has seen "Pinocchio," and, finding it so much better, has abandoned "book words" to borrow one from the lexicon of the late Joe Humphries, prize ring orator, to declare the new Disney product positively infidictimous—and doubles that.

JUST in case you'd be liking to know how radio and its audience are getting along, the figures for 1939 are out now, with a report of 28.2% increase in sets manufactured, over the year before, a total production of 9,100,000 sets for the twelve months—and, mind you, 11.5% more than the previous record of 8,160,000 sets in 1936. It seems that the battery portable and the micro-midgets, which have been infesting the scene so much of late, account for the record figures for 1939. In 1936 the average set listed at about $56, and in 1939 at about $31. No one has yet been found who paid list price.

RED FILM FADE

THE closing down of Amkino, depriving the American market, apparently, of a flow of Soviet pictures, will be but slightly noticed by the American film audience, but it is a dire loss indeed to that array of leftish critics, mainly of the daily press, who proclaimed their super-erudition by peans of appreciation of all that came over under the sickle-and-hammer brand.

Any wisp of gauche Russian photography, commonly of an order that would not do credit to an American newsreel at its hastiest, was in Amkino days nothing less than a triumph, virile and significant—always significant.

While the Amkino fade-out is generally called a consequence of public reaction to the Communist-Nazi pact, it is to be remembered that the film project never had commercial significance. In 1930 your editor was approached by Amkino with a suggestion that he edit the product for theatre distribution. It was immediately disclosed that the film could not in fact be edited with an eye to entertainment and cinematographic values. The real idea was more camouflage.

MR. A-MIKE VOGEL in his Round Table department recently had the temerity to take issue with your editor's recent advice to a young assistant manager urging that progress did not come from "hard work" but rather that " . . . more progress is to be had by devising ways of getting the job done painlessly, but done." That was a plea for skill. In point of fact it was observation of Mr. Vogel's able technique that inspired the editor's paragraph on the painless method. Mr. Vogel writes feelingly and convincingly of the merit of hard work and sweat—but what he knows about those matters are hearsay and weather.

No Mortgage Monopoly

THE UNITED STATES Government, through its Securities and Exchange Commission, this week notified the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee, in effect, that if a monopoly exists in the insurance business—the SEC is investigating insurance "monopoly"—the insurance companies have no monopoly of motion picture theatre mortgages.

With billions of dollars invested in mortgages on countless homes, buildings and land in virtually every place in the country, 26 of the nation's largest life insurance companies—which underwrite 87 per cent of the $111,054,689,000 life and industrial policies in force—held only $38,244,000 in theatre mortgages on January 1, 1939, the Administration's Economic Committee was informed by the SEC. The insurance companies' theatre mortgage holdings represent less than two per cent of the $1,880,000,000 total worth of investments in U. S. exhibition, barely one-third of exhibition's annual Federal tax bill of $100,000,000, less than one-seventh of exhibition's annual payroll of $250,000,000.

In addition, the SEC disclosed, the companies owned theatre properties valued at $2,826,944 from which, during 1938, they secured a return of $405,153, and during the year sold properties valued at $358,750 from which, during the 12 months preceding sale, they derived a revenue of $34,419.

Films at the Front

THE FRENCH Government has set up a military cinema organization to assure a regular supply of motion picture entertainment for the soldiers at the front and behind the lines. The regular Cinema section of the French army has been expanded to handle the job of furnishing films for millions of men in the war. In the First World War the U. S. Community Film Service entertained the American army.

Effort has been made by the French Government to avoid competition with regular motion picture theatres, according to Lieutenant Colonel Calvet, head of the army film service. Only old pictures will be rented and they will be under strict supervision to protect regular exhibition.

In the war zone where all commercial theatres are closed, film showings will be free, but will be reserved exclusively for soldiers. No army pictures will be shown in "the zone of the interior"—behind the lines—on Saturdays and Sundays in any locality in which commercial motion picture theatres are operating.

The cinema service of the French army will purchase the rights to make as many prints as are needed and payment will be based on the age of the film: Payment for French films will run from 14,000 francs ($350) to 30,000 francs ($750), the lower figure for films nine years old and the higher for those three years old. Shorts will be rented at about $25 to $40 each and 16mm features will be acquired at the rate of 10,000 francs or about $250 each.

Although the United States has launched a "billion-dollar" naval expansion program, the House Appropriations Committee Tuesday refused to grant a $50,000 increase in the Government's contribution for the rental of motion pictures for the Navy. Each year $85,000 is granted and a like sum is raised from ships' stores profits. This year the Navy asked an increase to secure additional prints needed for the increased personnel.

Playwrights Fail

FOR THE FIRST TIME in years, Hollywood has no official method of settling screen writers' credit disputes. The contract of the Screen Playwrights with the producers was formally abrogated by both on Monday, two years before expiration was due.

The five year (1937) contract's termination by both sides is believed a prelude to an early bargaining accord between the producers and the Screen Playwright's rival, the Screen Writers Guild.

The producers have already recognized the Guild as the official bargaining agency for writers, and it has already acted for writers, unofficially, in some credit disputes.

The Screen Playwrights is to dissolve. John Lee Mahin, its president, said, "Our own withdrawal is an entirely realistic admission of the failure of the Playwrights to successfully serve writers."

He also declared there was "unquestionably some need" for a Hollywood writer organization "with which producers may negotiate for fair settlement of such legitimate problems as admittedly exist in writer-producer relationship.

"We should now like to offer the best of luck to any writers and any producers who may be smart enough and sane enough to bring a solution of this problem," he concluded.

Screen Actors Guild officers, on Tuesday, in Hollywood, approved a two week extension of the Guild's investigation into reported irregularities in the administration of the Central Casting Bureau. A private investigator gave a preliminary confidential report to the Guild, on Monday night.

Hollywood Labor Crisis

HOLLYWOOD'S organized producers and labor faced each other over "the showdown" table Thursday: the producers armed with sheaves of statistics to prove that they cannot maintain the 10 per cent wage increase granted to studio workers last November; the labor leaders carrying the warning, uttered in advance on Tuesday by its Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Workers, that they would not relinquish the wage boosts for its 13,000 studio craftsmen.

The meeting was in accordance with the agreement made last Fall by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' union, other AFL studio unions, and the member unions of the "Big Four" in the basic studio pact, to reopen the wage argument February 15th and to give producers at that time the opportunity to prove whether production economics permitted continuance of the raise.

As provided for in the original wage boost agreements, the American Arbitration Society is to receive the arguments of both sides for decision, after a possible deadlock.

The extradition of William Bioff, West Coast IATSE leader, chairman of the Conference, and the leader of the studio unions' successful fight for wage increases, to Illinois, from California, this week awaited decision of California Governor Culbert Olson, who heard arguments on Tuesday night in Sacramento. Illinois seeks Bioff for the remainder of a 1922 Chicago jail sentence. He faces trial, also, on May 28th, in Los Angeles, on a Federal indictment for income tax evasion in 1936 and 1937.

The executive board of the IATSE met in secret session this week at the Everglades Hotel, Miami. The Hollywood negotiations, and the Bioff situation, were discussed.

In St. Louis, the city's appeals court, in rejecting the appeal of John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the city's projectionists' Local 143, and Clyde Weston, business agent, from a decision of a circuit court judge, temporarily restraining them from office in the union, criticized their domination of the union.

Lawrence Tibbett, president of the American Guild of Musical Artists, last week in Miami, as the executive council of the American Federation of Labor met, criticized AFL officials for failing to "clean house" of racketeers. He reviewed his part in the actors' fight last summer against an attempt by the IATSE "stagehands" led, in part, by Bioff, to control the acting field.

Trust Victories

MINOR ENGAGEMENTS along the anti-trust front this week resulted in the silencing of fire on two minor salients and severe disruption of the opposition's plans in a major sector. Anti-trust suits brought by independent theatre operators in Newark and Brooklyn were dropped and Judge Henry W. Goddard, making his first appearance in the Government's key monopoly case in New York, upheld Columbia's contention that it is entitled to separate interrogatories and answers, scoring Department of Justice attorneys for "arbitrariness" in his ruling. See page 18.

Competitive Music

RADIO, having launched Broadcast Music, Inc., its newest weapon of protest against the annual fees charged for the use of music by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, now is seeking the aid of the motion picture industry in the fight. Officials of the new music agency, organized and manned by members and directors of the National Association of Broadcasters, are offering motion picture theatres free use of their catalogue, when it is completed, and intensive "plugging" over its member radio stations of any non-ASCAP music used in film scores by Hollywood producers. Later on, they say, a sharing of expenses could be arranged.

The Composers' Society meanwhile, long the sole agency through which songwriters collected royalties for their creations from radio stations, theatres, night clubs, records and other public performances, was streamlining its organization. Although not admitting that Broadcast Music, Inc., is or will be a rival, officers of the Society have announced that henceforth emphasis will be placed on merchandising its service instead of simple enforcement of copyright as heretofore.

Both aspects of developments in the music field are reported on page 13.

Centralized Posters

CLIMAXING long years of effort to centralize the distribution of all film advertising accessories and following shortly after its formation as an agency designed for that purpose, Advertising Accessories, Inc., this week announced the acquisition of 21 independent film poster exchanges, all members of the National Poster Service Association which met last weekend in New York and dissolved. Deals with other companies were still pending at midweek when the announcement, as reported on page 17, was made by Charles Casanave, vice-president and general manager of Advertising Accessories.

All the Same War!

SIMILARITY of war footage sent out by U. S. newsreel companies is understood to be causing complaint from exhibitors, and especially from those who operate all-newsreel theatres. Duplication, or near-duplication is forcing those who use issues of three of four newsreel companies per week, to buy additional short subjects to fill up their programs.

Newsreel editors in New York reply to such complaints by pointing out that war censorship in all belligerent countries prevents the newsreel cameraman from filming "action"; places him under supervision which dictates what he shall take; censors his footage, finally, determines the type and amount of films to be sent from the belligerents to this country.

There have been some exceptions to this "stereotyping" of the wars' coverage, it was pointed out, principally the filming by Julien Bryan and Harrison Forman in Warsaw, and the filming in Finland by Paramount's own cameraman, Arthur Menken—but, generally, the editors point out, there is little, at present, the newsreels can do, without jeopardizing their positions in the war zones.

Product

PREMIERES continued to explode on location this week with their attendant special attentions along Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard, in Miami Beach, Port Huron, or whatever the site selected for reasons of story or otherwise. The week brought "Pinocchio," "Seventeen," "Young Tom Edison," "Sidewalks of London," and "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." The attention accorded these and others are reported on page 29.

First reports of what will be the big product news later in the spring began to trickle from Hollywood. Hal Roach, producing for United Artists distribution, announced that six pictures will be made for the 1940-41 season at a cost of $7,500,000. His plans and other product news are on page 32.

Improvement in Canada

REFLECTING cooperative progress in Canada, according to industry circles in the Dominion, is the latest report of the provincial censorship boards which shows only 17 pictures condemned outright in 1939. The previous year there were 23 and in 1932, 101. Further news from wartime Canada, reported on page 28, includes optimistic reports of improving attendance from exhibitors in British Columbia and new tax scares in Montreal and Ontario.

"Wind's" Head-Winds

SOME EXHIBITORS are protesting "Gone With the Wind" newspaper advertisements, holding that their patrons are being confused on the matter of length of the film and admissions to be charged when "Wind" reaches the subsequent runs. The two lines said to be causing objection are: "See it in its entirety, exactly the same as at Atlanta and Broadway premieres," and, "This production will not be shown anywhere except at advanced prices—at least until 1941."

Exhibitors from Connecticut and Wisconsin have taken action. Members of Allied Theatres of Connecticut on Tuesday voted unanimously to protest the "ambiguity" of certain "Wind" advertising statements and authorized Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary, to send a letter of protest to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM. Connecticut theatre men said that they had learned directly from patrons that present advertisements on "Wind" were being misinterpreted as to subsequent policy and content.

Wisconsin exhibitors' protests on "Wind" advertising were expressed because they also said that patrons had got the impression from the advertising that "Wind" would be seen in full only at the road-showings.

"Gone with the Wind" already has grossed "well over $7,000,000," Howard Dietz, director of advertising for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, reported Wednesday.

RADIO WANTS FILMS IN ANTI-ASCAP PLAN; SOCIETY ACTS FOR GOODWILL

Broadcast Music, Inc., Starts Operations April 1st; Won't Charge Film Interests One Penny for Service

Radio, through its large broadcasters, is having conversations with the motion picture, represented by the large producer-distributors, to gain the support of the film business in radio's declared fight to dislodge the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as the lone source of music supply and collector of millions of dollars annually in royalties from radio stations, motion picture theatres, night clubs and other public users of music for profit.

Organization Starts April 1st

Broadcast Music, Inc., the radio industry's new music organization, established to form a music source to offset ASCAP, will become operative on April 1st. The new organization has obtained stock subscriptions and licensee fee pledges totaling $1,140,375 from the broadcasting industry. The stock subscriptions represent about one-fifth of the money pledged.

Sydney M. Kaye, vice-president and general counsel, said that Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI) wished to cooperate with the motion picture industry without asking any financial assistance at this time. He said that the new music organization seeks no compensation from sheet music sales, mechanical rights or from motion picture theatres.

Expects $1,500,000 Capital

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, also heads the new music company which expects to have a minimum capital of $1,250,000 when it begins operations. Mr. Miller made a country-wide tour to interest radio stations in the new organization and to secure stock and license pledges.

A total of 246 radio stations in 43 states and Hawaii have pledged cooperation and, according to Mr. Miller, many other stations are expected to join because their owners or operators were not present when the plan was explained in the regional meetings. It was said that broadcasters regard the organization as a permanent reservoir of musical compositions which would serve the radio industry indefinitely by drawing on new sources of talent for the creation of popular and classical music.

Broadcast Music, Inc., was organized because the radio industry, as all other users of music, has available at the present time only one major source of supply for performing rights, ASCAP. Radio pays ASCAP $4,000,000 a year under a contract which expires Dec. 31, 1940. The radio music organization holds that many excellent composers and lyric writers, for one reason or other, have not joined ASCAP. The new organization plans to serve those individuals.

Selecting Personnel

At present the company is selecting music personnel and developing operating plans which include the purchase of music, publication of new music, and new arrangement of music now in the public domain. The organization plans to build a music catalogue for its licensees and it is planned to be non-profit making.

The meeting which formulates definite plans for BMI was attended by Mr. Miller; John Elmer, president, Baltimore Broadcasting Corporation; Lenox R. Lohr, president, National Broadcasting Company; Edward Klauber, executive vice-president, Columbia Broadcasting System; Samuel R. Rosenbaum, president, WFIL Philadelphia; John Shepard III, president, Yankee Network, and Everett R. Revercomb, auditor of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Mr. Miller said that Broadcast Music, Inc., expected to work in the closest cooperation with all other users of music, including motion picture producers and exhibitors, theatre owners, orchestras, recording companies, hotels and restaurants.

Mr. Kaye developed the aims of the new radio organization with regard to the motion picture industry, holding that the two great

EXHIBITORS PAY TWICE FOR MUSIC

Theatre owners pay twice for music: the producers charge for their music costs in the film rentals and the exhibitor must pay ASCAP for the right to use that music. Motion picture theatres pay $1,000,000 a year to ASCAP.

Originally ASCAP charged a flat 10c per seat for all motion picture theatres. In 1934 the Society announced a heavy increase in the "tax" and exhibitors protested, moving the government to file a suit charging ASCAP with a monopoly of popular music and sought dissolution of all existing license fee agreements for royalty payments made to the Society by public users of music. The Exhibitors' National Emergency Committee representing 8,000 theatres was formed and pledged a minimum of "a-penny-a-seat" for the fight.

In April 1935 the exhibitors and ASCAP reached an agreement which was made retroactive to October 1, 1934. Under the agreement theatres seating less than 800 and operating less than three days a week are charged five cents per seat; theatres seating 800 or less and operating more than three days weekly, ten cents per seat; theatres seating between 801 and 1,599, 15 cents per seat and theatres over 1,600, 20 cents per seat. These rates represented for medium size theatres a 50 per cent increase in charges and for large theatres a 100 per cent increase.

Annual fees that typical theatres have been paying to ASCAP for the last five years are:

Theatre, Location	Capacity	Annual Ascap Bill
Music Hall New York	6,200	$1,240.00
Capitol, New York	5,486	1,097.20
Roxy New York	5,886	1,177.20
Stearns, Stearns, Ky	315	15.75
Kiowa, Kiowa, Colo.	150	7.50
Chicago, Chicago	3,861	772.20
Grauman's Chinese, Hollywood	2,028	405.60
Ambassador, Washington, D. C.	1,200	180.00
Strand, Stamford, Conn.	1,419	212.85

Rates which ASCAP originally sought to introduce would have effected increases of 20 to 1,000 per cent.

Composers' Society Turns to "Selling" Itself as a Service Rather Than Legal Collector of Fees

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, target of some 40 legislative and court attacks in 25 states in two years, on grounds of monopoly in its collection of heavy royalties from radio, film exhibition and other public users of music is completely revising its method of operation from the old attitude of unconditional enforcement of pay-up or else, to a more conventional form of institutional selling.

New Branch Offices

The Society announced this week an extension of its new policy of selling its services rather than merely enforcing its rights. New branch offices have been set up for the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States territories and ASCAP has set up separate business and legal staffs. ASCAP's new policy is that it has something of great value to sell to its licensees and not merely to enforce its copyright rights.

John G. Paine, general manager, in explaining the new ASCAP offices west of the Mississippi, said, "We have inaugurated a policy of directly operated offices in an endeavor to separate the business and legal ends and develop more completely the idea of selling the ASCAP service, also to standardize rates and practices nationally." Mr. Paine first experimented with this policy when he became general manager in May, 1937.

"In the beginning of ASCAP", Mr. Paine continued, "it was a question of rights and infringements. Now the organization feels that it can give more valuable service and bring to more licensees the size and richness of one of the finest libraries of entertainment music assembled in the history of the world."

Called Sales Job Now

Mr. Paine emphasized the selling phase of the new policy. "No longer is it necessary to take all action through litigation. It is now basically a sales job. Therefore there is more satisfaction to the society and to the customers to have relations on a business rather than a legal basis."

The following new offices and managers were announced by Mr. Paine: Denver office (to cover Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming), manager Harry Bergcamp; Portland office (for Oregon, Idaho, and Washington and Montana when the Society can resume operations in those states), manager Herman Kennan; San Francisco office (Northern California and Nevada), manager Harry A. Levinson; Hollywood office (Southern California and Arizona), manager Murray Stravers. Mr. Paine said that Richard Powers, supervisor, was in charge of the whole business operations in the West. Mr. Powers will have headquarters in Hollywood.

In keeping with the policy of separating the legal and selling departments of ASCAP's operations, Samuel Roeder of San Francisco has been made western counsel, under Schwartz & Frohlich, general counsel. Mr. Roeder's legal staff is not complete, but the following associates have been appointed: Hugo Anderson of Salt Lake City and Frank Hickey of Denver.

The Society is also sponsoring this year a fellowship competition for composers and authors of college musical plays. The purpose is to develop creative talent among students in institutes of higher learning.

ASCAP fellowships will be awarded in eight regions for the best musical play, comedy, opera, light opera, operetta or musical revue. All students, including those in graduate schools, of institutions listed by the American Association of Colleges and Universities or in accredited normal schools will be eligible.

The play must be substantially original in story or plot and musical score and must be presented to an audience totalling not less than 200 persons. Contestants must submit three copies: one to be returned and "two for ultimate submision to representative commercial theatrical and motion picture producers in New York and Hollywood." It is pointed out, however, that ASCAP does not guarantee that the winning plays will be produced commercially.

The deadline for the first contest (1940) is May 1, 1940; for all succeeding years entries will close on March 1st. All entries remain the sole property in every respect of their creators. In each region the ASCAP Fellowship will amount to $720.

Paramount Song Writing Contest

Lou Diamond, in charge of Paramount shorts and music interests, announced that the company has completed arrangements with the Fawcett Publications for a song-poem contest in their True Confessions magazine. The winner will be paid by Paramount for copies sold, recordings and other income from the song. The sheet music will be published by Famous Music Corporation or by Paramount Music Corporation.

The winner's song will be put to music by Sam Coslow and Glenn Miller will introduce the song on his coast-to-coast radio program and will record the number. Lanny Ross also will present the song on his radio program. Furthermore Harry Sherman, Paramount producer will feature the song in one of his productions and if the song's title is suitable for a picture, it will be used as the picture's title.

The winner will be brought to New York and probably appear on the Glenn Miller and Lanny Ross radio programs. The judges for the contest are Sam Coslow, Glenn Miller, Lanny Ross and Mr. Diamond.

License Pact Ends "War"

Motion picture exchanges and film delivery firms of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, hailed an agreement ending the interstate license warfare between Wisconsin and Michigan. The agreement specifies that passenger vehicles registered in either state will be extended full privileges in the other state for 90 days. The pact also provides that a private trucker operating his own vehicle and hauling his own goods from one state to another will receive full license privileges in both states.

UA Circuit Deals

United Artists has closed product deals with the Gluckmann circuit in Montevideo, the Italo-Chilean circuit in Santiago and Valparaiso, the British Colonial group of houses in Port-of-Spain, and the U. S. Army circuit in the Canal Zone. Deals for the first runs in Manila and Bombay, in the latter city with the Modi circuit, are also reported by UA offices in those territories.

industries, by cooperating, can develop for their mutual benefit a valuable music library. He said, "Broadcast Music, Inc., is creating competition for the one present major source of music." The fact that motion pictures and radio are great popularizers of music was pointed out by Mr. Kaye.

In the proposed "partnership" of radio and motion pictures in music matters, Mr. Kaye said both branches would be equal. If the motion picture companies hire non-ASCAP composers and authors, Mr. Kaye said, the broadcasters will do anything possible to help popularize that music.

"We are not going to charge motion picture theatres one penny for using Broadcast Music, Inc., music," he declared. He added that the organization was not interested in sheet music or mechanical rights. The present plan is to popularize non-ASCAP music, and when the value has been established, Mr. Kaye said, the two great industries of broadcasting and motion pictures can get together and decide if expenses could be shared.

Producers Called Favorable

The organized motion picture industry is reported to be interested in making use of another source of music, in addition to ASCAP. The special cooperation promised by broadcasters for popularizing non-ASCAP music is expected to meet with a favorable reception from producers.

John G. Paine, ASCAP general manager, in commenting on the formation of BMI, said it was "an interesting experiment and one which the radio industry should make." He said ASCAP cannot regard the new organization as a serious competitor until it has organized a musical personnel and obtains copyrights to some music.

Edwin Claude Mills, chairman of the Administration Committee of ASCAP, said, "the radio committee's report will be presented to the ASCAP board at the next regular meeting, the last Thursday of the month (February 29th) or at a special meeting at about that time."

The radio industry has protested for some time that the $4,000,000 paid ASCAP each year represented too great a percentage of the total income for music rights. The radio music organization has asked license fees amounting to 40% of the ASCAP assessment for 1937 plus 10% stock subscription, based on the same ASCAP collections. For the present, radio stations will be paying the regular ASCAP fees plus the BMI charges. It is expected that stations, beginning April 1st, will try to use the BMI music on sustaining programs in order to cut down the ASCAP fees as much as possible under existing contracts.

GOVERNMENT PROBES AIR GIVEAWAYS; FCC IS WARNED OF RADIO LOBBYISTS

Constant External Pressure on Commission Is Reported in Caution from the Department of Justice

The Department of Justice at Washington this week cautioned the Federal Communications Commission to beware of lobbying Congressmen who seek to "explain the peculiarities" of local radio situations, declaring that "it is a widely and firmly held belief that the FCC has been subjected to constant external pressure, particularly by members of Congress."

Years of Controversy

For years the FCC has been in controversy, frequently the subject of strong, direct attack, for some of its decisions or lack of decisions in radio, television and the field of general communication. Right now it is in the middle of an argument between the "big" telecasters, who want standardization of the new medium, and the "little" ones, who hold that it is too early to standardize.

Congressional interest is more easily aroused in matters pending before the Federal Communications Commission than in questions affecting most other Government agencies, and is a problem which the Commission will have to meet "courageously" if it is to avoid imputations that it is susceptible to such pressure, it was held in a report submitted last Friday to the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative procedure by its staff.

The voluminous report of the committee's staff—177 pages in two volumes—was one of a dozen monographs on the administrative procedure of as many independent Federal agencies and quasi-judicial bureaus on the basis of which, at a later date, hearings will be held at which those agencies will be permitted to present their views and, finally, a report, with conclusions and recommendations, will be written, probably sometime next Fall.

Applications and Revocations

The report on the FCC goes into all details of the Commission's methods of handling applications for licenses, and revocations thereof, for broadcasting stations and for television and other services and its procedure for the making of rules and regulations.

On the whole, the Commission is commended for the improvement it has made in the handling of license cases.

Probably the most interesting feature of the report was the discussion of Congressional lobbying. Only in the case of the FCC did it appear necessary to the committee to go into that subject which, it said, is "one of the most elusive factors that may influence the judgments of any deliberative body."

"Whatever may be the case with other agencies, it is a widely and firmly held belief that the Federal Communications Commission has been subjected to constant external pressure, particularly by members of Congress," it was declared in the report.

Interference and Interests

The suggestion of Congressional interference with the deliberations of the commission was seen as raising important questions as to the basis for such Congressional interest, how it is manifested, its effect upon the FCC and what, if anything, can or should be done to remedy the situation.

"The Congressional response in this particular area of regulation is stronger than it might be if it were stimulated only by a desire to pacify important residents of the affected districts, for it is a commonplace that the radio is rapidly becoming the most effective electioneering medium; Congressmen may have much to gain personally by the licensing of new stations in their home territory and by securing the 'friendship' of station owners."

GIVEAWAYS FACTOR IN MILWAUKEE AREA

A survey of Milwaukee County's 65 theatres show that 40 of them, exclusive of first runs, offer some extra attraction besides the regular film fare at least once a week and all houses are playing dual bills.

The inducements in most instances are in the form of dish, glassware and book nights. Not a few of the theatres offer their patrons a choice of giveaways. Ten and 15 cent admissions are raised to 20 cents if the patrons desire the giveaway.

This friendship, it was pointed out, may be valuable despite that provision of the act forbidding the preferential treatment of a candidate for public office, since no station is under any positive duty to permit the use of its facilities for political speeches.

This response, it was found, is made apparent in correspondence, telephone calls and conferences between Congressmen and members of the commission, and "attempts by Congressmen to utilize their official positions as an excuse for special pleading (under the guise of explaining 'peculiarities of local situations') are made with some degree of frequency from the time an application is filed until the commission has rendered its final order."

Opposes Practice

"It is, of course," the report commented, "impossible to indicate what effect Congressional pleas have either upon individual commissioners or upon the entire commission" but, it was added, "however slight the results of legislative interference may be, it is unquestionably a practice which should be discouraged."

Such effort as has been made to remedy the situation has been purely "superficial" and extends only to written communications, with no reference to telephone calls or personal conferences.

"What is at stake here," the committee's staff pointed out, "is not only the actual purity of the commission's processes, but perhaps equally important the commission's reputation for judgment uninfluenced by extraneous (if not wholly improper) considerations.

"So long as it is popularly supposed (as, rightly or wrongly, is the case today) that the commission's decisions may conceal rather than reveal the true determinants of the official judgment, there will be persistent efforts to subject the commission or its individual members to political pressures.

"If the commission is to avoid imputations that it is in fact susceptible to the influence of such pressures, it must pursue a definitely courageous course. It must resolutely and pointedly refuse to receive information or opinions concerning cases sub judice, volunteered off the record, even when the volunteers are Members of Congress.

Department of Justice Starts Inquiry into "Pot o' Gold" Program; FCC Seeks Basis for Setting Policy

Complaints of motion picture theatre exhibitors against the Tums $1,000 radio giveaway, the "Pot o' Gold" program, this week were under investigation by the Department of Justice, referred to that agency by the Federal Communications Commission, as originally aired in Congress, four weeks ago.

Bakery Program Protested

With the Tums' program complaints, the Commission also sent to the Department complaints against a program advertising a Texas bakery, broadcast by Stations KTFT, Wichita Falls, and KBST, Big Springs.

The Tums' program gives away $1,000 a week to some person whose name is selected by chance from a telephone directory which, again by chance, is selected from among a number of such books. The bakery program was worth $5 to persons approached by a representative of the bakery at their homes, provided they had a loaf of its bread in the house.

Exhibitors throughout the country have long been alarmed over the "Pot o' Gold" program which, they claimed, kept persons away from the theatres on Tuesday night because it was necessary that the person whose name is selected be at home when called by telephone if he is to get the $1,000. The exhibitors, according to complaints to Representative Tenerowicz of Michigan, who made them public, are losing more than $1,000,000 a week in admissions.

Action of the FCC in sending the matter to the Department of Justice was seen as influenced by the Michigan Congressman's demand for prompt handling of the situation. Department of Justice action is necessary because the Communications Commission itself has no power to initiate prosecutions for any violation of law, although the Communications Act makes the broadcast of a lottery scheme a crime punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Program To Continue

In New York radio quarters it was felt that the Department of Justice Investigation of the "Pot o' Gold" will have no immediate effect on the program's policy. NBC executives were said to already have said privately that the program would be allowed to finish its season but no new ones like it will be permitted nor will this one be allowed to return.

The program does award its $1,000 by lot but its sponsors felt that anti-lottery regulations had been evaded by the fact that the winners are not required to buy anything, send in a box top or even to listen.

John Butler, vice-president of Stack-Goble, New York agency handling the "Pot o' Gold" show said Friday that "the show will go on." Mr. Butler asserted that the legality of the giveaway had been studied very carefully.

Merlin Hall Aylesworth, former head of NBC and RKO and until recently publisher of the New York World-Telegram, has been retained by Stack-Goble as counsel in the investigation of the program by the Department of Justice.

At NBC, in New York, the policy of "no comment" on the show was continued.

NEELY BILL TOPS AGENDA OF SEVEN MEETINGS SET BY EXHIBITOR GROUPS

Terre Haute Association Formed; Ohio Independents Set Convention for February 28th, Pacific Coast Group on May 8th

Neely, Neely, who's-got-the-Neely Bill, or whom it would get, is the topic of the day in and out of exhibitor ranks, and organized owners are making the most of it as a subject of discussion and controversy, in their regular and special organization activities.

—And Other Problems

The proposal (S. 280) to outlaw block and blind selling of motion pictures, now in the hands of a House Interstate Commerce subcommittee, is the main subject set on almost all of the eight additional annual conventions and special meetings set by owners' groups. Also coming in for attention are matters of budgets, legislation, chance games, direct-mail advertising, theatre liability insurance, radio's "Pot o' Gold," cash giveways, percentage pictures, television's "threat," centralized accessory selling, protection, and moveovers.

Meeting this week was Allied of Connecticut, to be followerd by special meetings or regular conventions, by the Independent Exhibitors Association of Massachusetts and the Connecticut MPTO, both on February 20th; Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, February 28th; Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, first week in March; Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, May 8th.

Meetings of recent date included those held by Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska, Allied of Michigan, Allied of Nova Scotia.

New Exhibitor Organization

The Terre Haute Theatres Association has been formed in that city in Indiana. A. H. Kaufman of the Fountain Theatre, is president; S. P. Katzenbach, general manager of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, vice-president; Maurice Reinking, Idaho and Swan theatres, secretary.

Attending a luncheon of the new unit were Roy E. Harrold, president of the Associated Theatres of Indiana, and Don R. Rossiter, its executive secretary.

The Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut met on Tuesday in New Haven.

The group voted opposition to present "Gone with the Wind" advertisements which, members said, were leaving the impression with patrons that the picture would not be shown in its full length at subsequent runs.

Frank Lydon, regional vice-president of Allied; Arthur K. Howard, business agent of Independent Exhibitors, of Boston; and E. Thornton Kelly, membership campaign chairman in Connecticut, were speakers.

Joseph F. Reed, of Bantam, was appointed chairman of the new Grievance Committee, to serve with William Hoyt, of East Haven, and Jack Schwartz, of Bridgeport, in attempting to arbitrate grievances of members and non-members alike.

A. M. Schuman, president, announced the following newly-organized legislative committee: A. D. Pickus, Stratford; Leo Bonoff, Madison; Harry L. Lavietes, New Haven; Martin H. Keleher, Princess, Hartford; Ralph Pasho, Naugatuck, and Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary.

CAN REPLACE ONE UNION BY ANOTHER

When theatres change ownership, projectionists of one union may be displaced by those of another, the New York State Labor Relations Board ruled last week, in a charge of unfair labor practices brought by the Empire State Operators Union against the Skouras Theatres Corporation. September, 1937, the Skouras chain, holding a contract with Local 306, of the IATSE, bought six Manhattan houses from the United Exhibition Company, and displaced Empire, with Local 306, members.

In Wilmington, Del., Local 473, IATSE projectionists union, is appealing a chancery court decision of last summer, restraining it from picketing the independent Rialto theatre.

Connecticut MPTO Luncheon

Plans for testing the constitutionality of the Connecticut Bingo law, permitting other groups than theatres to use the game, were studied at a luncheon meeting, Tuesday, of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners. Herman Levy, executive secretary, also was to discuss a federal statute and post office department regulation which prohibits exhibitors from placing circulars in mail boxes.

Other topics were theatre liability insurance rates, and the budget committee's report.

Arthur H. Lockwood presided.

Boston Postponement

The Independent Exhibitors, Inc., New England Allied affiliate, will meet next Tuesday, in Boston. The meeting had been scheduled for this Tuesday.

Ohio ITO February 28th and 29th

The annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio was set, by the directors, for February 28th and 29th, in Columbus. The directors met last week, discussed radio competition.

ITO of Ohio Set Dates

Directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, who met in Columbus February 6, set the annual convention there for February 28 and 29. It has been postponed from time to time from the regular November meeting period. Other routine matters, including further consideration of the plans of theatre awards to combat competition from the "Pot O' Gold" radio program, were discussed. Among the subjects to be discussed at the annual convention will be the Neely Bill, whether exhibitors can pay 70 per cent for pictures, and the helpful or harmful effect of television on the box office.

Theatre Men To Discuss Neely Bill

Frank Cassil of the Rialto theatre in St. Joseph, Mo., and president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, has issued a call to directors for a meeting for the first week in March to discuss the Neely bill and other exhibitor problems.

Pacific Conference in May

Trustees of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners have set their convention date in Hollywood May 8-10. The Conference went on record as being opposed to commercialized previews, cited a trend toward monopoly in advertising accessory sales, asserted abuses exist in moveovers and pledged conditional protection for independent exhibitor runs.

Iowa-Nebraska Meeting

At the annual convention of the Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska, Inc., at Marshalltown, Iowa, distributors unanimously reaffirmed full support to the Neely anti-block booking bill. Specific opposition was expressed to MGM's sales policy and admission prices on "Gone With the Wind." Exhibitors were urged to oppose percentage pictures in small towns and where percentage is paid, 35 per cent held as top. It also was urged that Twentieth Century-Fox allow 20 per cent unrestricted cancellation.

Canadian Exhibitors Meet

A meeting of the Allied Exhibitors Association of Nova Scotia was held at Halifax.

Chairmen Named

Committee chairmen for 1940 have been named by the board of directors of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. They include Roy E. Harrold of Rushville, advisory; Harry Markun, finance; Bruce Kixmiller, legislative and legal; H. H. Johnson, membership; I. R. Holycross, tax; Marc J. Wolf, program and affairs and Ernest L. Miller, publicity and magazine.

Two Groups Oppose Neely

Morris Loewenstein, president of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., has called on all independent exhibitors in Oklahoma to realize the importace of calling the attention of other active organizations to the necessity of defeating the Neely Bill. Mr. Loewenstein said effective work is being done in Oklahoma and Texas in an educational campaign among women's clubs.

Meanwhile the Board of Commerce in Lexington, Ky., adopted a protest to Congress against the passage of the Neely Bill. Ed. Wilder is executive secretary of the board.

Steffes to Stay in Hospital

W. A. (Al) Steffes, Minneapolis exhibitor and Allied States official, will remain six weeks at the Providence hospital in Washington. He was taken to the hospital four weeks ago at the time of the Allied annual board meeting. H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, visited Mr. Steffes last weekend and reported that he showed improvement, but has been unable to acknowledge numerous letters and flowers received from friends.

Hicks, Zukor in Argentina

Adolph Zukor, Paramount chairman of the board, and John Hicks, vice-president in charge of foreign sales, were received, on Tuesday, in Buenos Aires, by the president of Argentina, Dr. Roberto Ortiz. Both Paramount men are on a survey and "good will tour" of the South American territories. They are expected back in New York on or about March 18th.

Hall Resigns

Donovan Hall has resigned as advertising and publicity director of Ross Federal Research Corporation. He had been with the concern for two years.

21 POSTER EXCHANGES ADDED TO CENTRALIZED ACCESSORIES SYSTEM

Deals Are Made Individually with Independent Members of National Association; Columbia Joins Customers

Advertising Accessories, Inc., centralized theatre accessory selling and manufacturing subsidiary of National Screen Service, and new, exclusive accessory agency for Paramount, RKO, Universal and Columbia, has purchased outright the properties of 21 independent film poster service exchanges, all of them members of the National Poster Service Association, which met on Friday, Saturday and Sunday in New York, and dissolved. The announcement was made Tuesday evening at Advertising Accessories' New York offices, by Charles L. Casanave, vice-president and general manager.

Mr. Casanave said the deal climaxed 25 years of effort to centralize all distribution of advertising screen accessories and "paper."

By Metropolitan

Officials of some of the poster service exchanges which this week were acquired by Advertising Accessories, Inc., left to right: Robert H. Robinson, Atlanta; R. Dial, Washington; Harry Harris, Dallas; Charles Burns, Kansas City; J. Powers, Minneapolis; J. Bloom, Chicago; D. Rosenfeld, Pittsburgh; G. Le Veque, Detroit; G. Clark, Oklahoma City; Charles Casanave, vice-president and general manager of Advertising Accessories, Inc.; I. Sokoloff, Omaha; Simon Libros, Philadelphia; Frank Beddingfield, Charlotte; Ralph Reid, New Orleans; H. T. Liebtag, Indianapolis.

Columbia Joins Customers

The announcement came, too, after Advertising Accessories had added Columbia to its list of major distributor customers starting in March. RKO, Universal and Paramount previously had joined.

The deals with the members of the Association followed weeks of conversations carried on by Mr. Casanave with its president, Simon Libros, of Philadelphia, and other officers.

The acquisitions give the company outlets in all important cities, Mr. Casanave said.

Operators and personnel of the poster exchanges will be retained by Advertising Accessories, Mr. Casanave emphasized.

"We've retained, in these branches, the majority of the men as our local representatives," he said. "I found, in talking to all these men, that they had all been successful in a business with terrific odds."

Individual Deals

The deals were made individually; each poster service operator selling his properties outright.

The first meetings were with Mr. Libros and the National Poster Service executive committee. The committee voted in favor of the deals, Mr. Casanave said, and the convention gave assent.

Last Saturday, at noon, members of the association went from the Hotel New Yorker, where they had been convening, to the Hotel Astor to meet Mr. Casanave. All members, with a few exceptions "to come in later," again voted to deal, individually, with Advertising Accessories.

Deals still pending, late Tuesday, were with the Western Poster Company, Inc., of San Francisco; Southern Poster Service Service Company, Los Angeles; Western Poster Company, Northwest, of Seattle. These, he said, are controlled by the Los Angeles concern.

He met with the president of the companies, Max M. Morris, and with A. J. Aronson, and B. R. Wolf, also of the three coast companies, on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

Mr. Casanave, in a telegram to Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service, in Florida, said the deal solved the problem of finding persons in the field who were thoroughly advertising sales conscious.

Mr. Robbins, in reply, called him a "worker of miracles."

Mr. Casanave paid tribute to Mr. Libros' cooperation, and said he would be retained "in an advisory and executive capacity."

Addresses AMPA

Mr. Casanave had explained the objectives of the new organization to 100 advertising men at the bi-weekly luncheon, last Thursday, of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, New York City. The aims, he said, are to relieve film companies of the necessity of operating advertising sales departments, to make it possible for exhibitors to obtain advertising from one source; to compete with the services offered heretofore more inexpensively by independent poster exchanges; and to improve the art of advertising, in screen accessories.

Mr. Casanave told the advertising men that the advertising sales departments of the majors had not been given much attention because "the large companies which invest 25 or 30 million dollars a year in films cannot be expected to be greatly interested in the relatively small ad sales."

Stresses Advertising Importance

"The job of making $30,000,000 worth of pictures a success is not in selling the film, but in advertising it," he declared.

"We are doing with full authority and in a legal manner what the poster renter has been doing for years."

"Who says that, in the 25 years of the industry, we must continue doing the same things over and over again?" he asked, adding that an exhibitor now can buy anything, from a single sheet to a whole theatre front, at a single source.

Large Art Department Planned

Advertising Accessories, he said, will have a very large art department.

He praised the one-sheet as an advertising medium. Use of it had declined, he said, "not because it has lost value but because it has not been handled properly."

Concentration of advertising accessory selling has been, he said, not so much a distributor's idea as an exhibitor idea.

TWO MORE TRUST SUITS DROPPED, COURT HITS U. S. IN "KEY" CASE

Lenrose Amusement and Mobeel Enterprises Call Off Actions; Injunction Against New Jersey Theatre Vacated

The large motion picture companies this week scored 100 per cent in their long and expensive defense against the governmental and independent anti-trust suits pending virtually from coast to coast.

Lenrose Amusement Corporation, of Newark, N. J., and Mobeel Enterprises, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., discontinued their independent actions, and an injunction obtained against the majors by the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., was vacated and a rehearing ordered.

Judge Rebukes U. S. Counsel

Repeatedly charging the U. S. Government with a "very arbitrary attitude" in denying Columbia's request for separate interrogatories in the New York "key" anti-trust suit against the majors, Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, in his first appearance in the proceedings and who will preside at the trial of the suit, Tuesday upbraided Department of Justice counsel for tactics which, the court said, would delay the start of trial.

Counsel for the major defendants and the Government Wednesday reached an agreement giving the defendants additional time in which to answer the Government's interrogatories. They were to have been answered Thursday. Under the same agreement the Government also will have the right to answer the defendants' interrogatories later than March 1, the date originally set.

Judge Goddard upheld Columbia's contention that it was entitled to separate interrogatories and answers, and rejected in no uncertain terms the Government's defense that to make a separate reply would be burdensome on the Government.

"This defendant has rights regardless of your convenience," Judge Goddard told William P. Farnsworth, special assistant to the United States attorney general, who appeared for the Government.

"That to make a separate answer would be burdensome to the Government is unfortunate," Judge Goddard continued, "but this defendant can make the very good answer that it is subjected to great trouble and expense in answering your interrogatories and defending itself in an action that was brought on it by the Government. Columbia didn't bring this suit. It may well say it's the Government's baby."

Clash Over Interrogatories

"Columbia is certainly entitled to interrogatories," he continued. "The Government is being very arbitrary—setting a May 1 trial date, refusing information and telling others just what information they may have."

"I believe in liberality in interrogatories because fullness of information saves time in the long run," the court said. "The Government has handled this very badly."

Mr. Farnsworth then switched his argument to one of a denial of Columbia's interrogatories on their merits, contending that the questions put to the Government by the company were "improper and in bad faith."

"If you want to argue this on the merits," Judge Goddard remarked, "it will take at least a month to decide it."

Mr. Farnsworth pointed out that the defendants' answers to the Government's interrogatories are due tomorrow.

CALLS "TRUST" COSTS TO PUBLIC $270,000,000

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general of the United States, told a subcommittee on appropriations of the House of Representatives that studies he had made indicated that about $270,000,000 annually will be saved the consuming public if the Government wins the seven leading anti-trust suits now underway in as many industries. Mr. Arnold did not indicate what portion of that sum he expected would be saved if the Government won its film suit. The case against motion picture companies was listed by the assistant attorney general as one of those which cannot be dropped and which will be carried over into the next fiscal year.

"I'm not at all sympathetic," the court said. "It's your fault if this delays the start of trial. It's not my fault if you can't make a better effort to agree and get together."

Called "Buck Passing"

Then making it clear that his remarks were not being directed exclusively to Mr. Farnsworth, Judge Goddard said: "This is just an effort to pass the buck to me. You tell your associates that they can't do that."

"If you can sit down without an arbitrary attitude I'm sure this whole question could be disposed of in short order."

The Government's oral bombardment of company executives in pre-trial examinations continued this week. Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, was questioned by Robert L. Wright, special assistant attorney general. Mr. Cohn answered all the questions put to him with the exception of two. The first of these was a request to produce a list of all exhibitors in 36 key cities who were entitled to first run Columbia pictures during the past five seasons. The second was an objection to a question whether Mr. Cohn had ever considered the advisability of the acquisition of theatre interests by Columbia.

William A. Scully, Universal general sales manager, took the stand Wednesday and said his company was not at a disadvantage in selling its product to circuits affiliated with distributors even though as a non-theatre owning producer they cannot reciprocate. He testified that Universal's sales methods were similar to those of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and described his company's policy on clearance as "liberal."

Lenrose and Mobeel Cases

The anti-trust suit of the Lenrose Amusement Corporation, owner of a Newark independent theatre, was discontinued in a stipulation filed in the U. S. District Court in New York. Under the stipulation the plaintiff is barred from renewing the suit. The suit which asked $150,000 treble damages against the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and eight majors was filed in March, 1939. Conspiracy and restraint of trade was charged. The plaintiff held that the Newark theatre had been deprived of product.

Last Friday the $75,000 treble damage suit of Mobeel Enterprises, Inc., against the majors and Republic, Monogram and the Century Circuit was dropped. The attorneys would give no reason why the stipulation discontinuing the suit was filed in the U. S. district court in New York. The plaintiff as owner of the Glenwood theatre in Brooklyn had charged that it had been deprived of product.

Vineland Order Vacated

The U. S. circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia has sent the Vineland injunction case back to the federal district court for a rehearing. The appeal court held that District Judge William H. Kirkpatrick, in issuing last November an injunction against Warner theatres and the major distributors in favor of the Landis theatre in Vineland, N. J., had acted without establishment of any basis on which to pass final judgment.

The defendants had appealed the injunction on the grounds that it was unconstitutional. The injunction ordered that the majors give the independent theatre equal treatment in obtaining motion pictures.

Judges Biggs, Maris and Clark, of the federal court of appeals, held that the injunction was prematurely issued as there was no final hearing in the case and the testimony on which Judge Kirkpatrick based his opinion consisted of affidavits, many of which were conflicting. The higher court ordered the case back to Judge Kirkpatrick for final hearing. However, the higher tribunal withheld decision on the merits of Judge Kirkpatrick's findings that the "movie combine" had violated the anti-trust laws.

Majors Answer in Boston

In the Boston case brought by seven theatre corporations from Massachusetts to Florida the majors filed 45 answers. The deadline for answering the $2,595,000 anti-trust suit was last Saturday. In all cases the plaintiff asked for a trial by jury. The suits will be entered on the March term of the calendar.

The Middlesex Amusement Corporation has been added to the defendants. The request was made by E. M. Loew's, Inc., and the Winchester Theatre Corporation, two of the seven theatre corporations which have filed the Boston suits. Judge McLellan granted the motion by consent of the defendants.

Lawyer Examined in Oklahoma Case

Federal judge Alfred P. Murrah of Oklahoma City has referred to the grievance committee of the Bar Association the question of whether J. B. Dudley is qualified to represent the Griffith Amusement Company in the suit brought by A. B. Momand of Shawnee. Mr. Dudley had been an attorney for the Griffith Corporation some time ago and filed a petition last week asking Judge Murrah to pass on his qualifications.

Mr. Momand filed an answering brief which said Mr. Dudley had represented him in 1935 in an identical suit against Paramount Public Corporation and therefore is well informed of all the records and confidential information of the Momand theatre. The brief mentioned the possibility of filing formal charges against Mr. Dudley if he acted for the Griffith Amusement Company in this suit.

Mr. Momand is seeking $4,500,000 damages in suits against the Griffith Amusement Company, et al and Twentieth Century-Fox, et al, in the federal court of the Western district of Oklahoma.

SEC Lists More Stock Dealings

Year end stock market transactions involved a number of film company executives, it has been disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission in a summary of the transactions of corporation officers and directors in the securities of their companies.

Most of the trades were in comparatively small volume, but in a series of sales ranging from 100 to 1,800 shares, William Goetz, Twentieth Century-Fox officer, disposed of 6,300 shares of Fox common stock, reducing his holdings in that class to 178,343 shares.

The next largest transaction was one of three in Loew's common stock, with J. Robert Rubin, vice-president, disposing of 1,400 shares, reducing his holdings to 30,015 shares. The other transactions were the disposition of 100 shares by Leopald Friedman, reducing his interest to 712 shares, and the disposition of 750 shares by Sam Katz, studio officer, who held but two shares at the close of the year.

A 500-share sale of Warner Brothers common stock was reported by Morris Wolf, Philadelphia, director, reducing his direct holdings to 450 shares; with another 167 shares held in a trust.

Disposition of 300 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock by Michael J. Meehan, New York holder of more than 10 per cent of the outstanding stock, reduced his holdings to 26,504 shares, while in the same class of securities, Malcolm Kingsberg, New York, director, reported the acquisition of 300 shares, bringing his total to 500 shares.

Other stock purchases included 200 Universal Corporation common voting trust certificates by Charles D. Prutzman, New York, officer, giving him a total of 900; 86 shares of Pathe common by Allen P. Kirby, Jersey City, director, through Holding Company B, bringing his holdings through that company to 4,000 in addition to 2,100 shares held direct, 1,000 held through Holding Company A and 600 through a trust; and 100 common voting trust certificates of Columbia Pictures by Abraham Scheneider, New York, officer, bringing his holdings to 504.

Acquires Republic Music

Exclusive Publications, Inc., has acquired the publishing rights to the music of Republic Pictures. First issues will be from "Days of Jesse James" and "South of the Border." New writers signed by Exclusive include Al Siegel, Dave Rose, Walter Gross, Horace Henderson, Lupin Fien and the team of Abe Tuvin and Paul Baron.

Leases Additional Space

National Screen Service Corporation has leased additional space on the tenth floor of the Film Center Building in New York. Cross & Brown, agents for the building, this week announced that Behrend Motion Picture Supply House, Inc., Jack Rosenfeld, Emby Photo & Film Machine Corporation, State Film Service and Joe Hornstein, Inc., have renewed leases.

20th-Fox Exchange Promotions

Herschel Fox, for many years head of the ad sales at the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange in Portland, has been made head booker at that exchange. Joseph Walter succeeds to the position Mr. Fox formerly held.

Howard Smith, booker in Philadelphia, has been made a salesman, succeeding John Skillman who has resigned.

SEATING PROBLEM TO GROW, SAYS WOOD

Columbus, Ohio, with a population of 300,000, ranks higher than some of the states in the total number of theatre seats, it is pointed out by P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Even more plans are being made to build theatres in Columbus in the immediate future.

There are 53 theatres in Columbus, with a combined seating capacity of 46,000, or in the approximate ratio of one seat for every 6.5 persons, compared with 89 theatres and 41,092 seats in Arizona, 80 theatres with 35,469 seats in New Mexico and 52 theatres with 22,950 seats in Wyoming.

Best Director, Lecturer Chosen by Film Students

In the recent examinations given to the 40 students taking the course, The History, Technique and Aesthetic of the Motion Picture, conducted by Iris Barry, curator of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library for the Department of Fine Arts, Columbia University, they were asked to name their favorite director and the person who gave the "most illuminating lecture of the course."

The favorite director vote resulted in a tie for first place between John Ford and Frank Capra with Alfred Hitchcock and Rene Clair close runners-up. Answers to the second question put three men at the top: Rouben Mamoulian, who talked on direction in motion pictures; Aaron Copland, who spoke on music for the motion picture, and Joris Ivens, whose subject was film composition and editing.

The second semester started Wednesday.

Nugent Signs Contract With 20th Century-Fox

Frank S. Nugent, motion picture critic of the New York Times, was given a writer's contract by Twentieth Century-Fox this week. Mr. Nugent has a one-year leave of absence from the newspaper. He will leave for the Coast about March 15th and is to report at the studio April 8th.

During Mr. Nugent's stay in Hollywood his present assistants, Ben R. Crisler and Bosley Crowther, will be in charge of film reviews, according to present reports. It is understood there will be no additions to the reviewing staff.

Mednikow Is City Salesman

John Mednikow, formerly with Trailer-Made, has been named a city salesman for National Screen Service in Chicago instead of sales manager as previously reported. M. M. Godshaw and Percy Barr also handle city sales in Chicago for National Screen.

Campos Promoted

F. Rafael Sevilla Campos, for many years sales manager and booker for Columbia's Mexican exchange, has been appointed general manager there to succeed Charles Kussiel.

771 Circuit Houses In New York Area

Theatre statistics in the New York metropolitan area as issued by the New York Film Board of Trade last week, show little change from the report issued by the board a year ago. The metropolitan area takes in New York City, Long Island, New York State south of Kingston and New Jersey north of Trenton.

The total number of theatres is placed at 1,197 with a total seating capacity of 1,343,883 compared to 1,193 theatres a year ago and a seating capacity of 1,344,398. The slight loss of seating capacity despite an increase of four theatres is due to the demolition of old houses and the building of new ones with smaller seating capacity, the reports points out.

The number of theatres open and operating is 1,072, four less than a year ago, while those closed number 125, eight more than a year ago. The total number of houses equipped with sound is 1,179, one less than the previous count, while silent houses increased from 13 to 18. The rise is accounted for by the fact that sound equipment is frequently removed from closed houses. All silent houses are closed.

The theatres opened have a total seating capacity of 1,240,304, compared with 1,246,339 a year ago, while the closed houses have 103,579 seats, compared with 98,059. Theatres located in New York State number 869 with 991,349 seats, while there are 328 houses in New Jersey with 352,534 seats.

Circuits control 771 houses, 17 more than a year ago, with 1,023,016 seats while independents control 426, 13 less than last year, with 320,867 seats. Of the circuit houses, 195 are affiliated, three less than last year, and 576 are unaffiliated, 20 more than last year.

Lightman Acquires Orpheum

M. A. Lightman has acquired the Orpheum theatre in Memphis, effective March 1st. Acquisition of the town's largest first-run house was assured last week when a majority of holders of $730,000 in outstanding bonds accepted an offer of 12½ cents on the dollar for their bonds. The theatre has been under the operation of Chalmers Cullins and Nate Evans.

Evans Elected Mayor

Edward C. Evans, manager of Schine's Plaza theatre, Milford, Del., has been elected Mayor of Milford. Mr. Evans polled 546 votes to 434 for Charles Edgar Harrington in one of the largest turnout of voters in Milford in recent years.

Clemmons Reelected

Joseph C. Clemmons of the Jefferson Amusement Company, operating several east Texas houses, has been reelected president of the Beaumont, Tex., Chamber of Commerce. His work in the past year has been highly complimented by press and city officials.

20th CENTURY FOX

FILMS OVERCOME SOME OF WAR'S OBSTACLES

Paris Business 30% Below Normal, Says B. H. Miggins; Sees Return in Italy Soon

With the governments of France and Great Britain apparently considering the motion picture a weapon for defense, the situation for American product in both those countries, and, generally, in Continental Europe, is "surprisingly good," Ben H. Miggins, managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox in Continental Europe, said in New York this week. Mr. Miggins arrived in New York from Europe last Thursday. (Picture in pictorial section.)

Paris Business 30% Normal

Business in the Paris area is only about 30 per cent below normal, he asserted. In all of France, residents are thronging to the theatres, and the only difficulties of magnitude have been in the Paris area itself, and the suburbs, where blackout and other restrictions hamper theatre operation, he said.

As it is, he said, distribution is "making progress every week"; theatres with bomb proof shelters now are subject to almost no restrictions, American films are being imported with no difficulties, and the French government aids the motion picture industry as an agency for aiding morale.

"We are glad to find that, now, the film industry is no longer regarded as a de luxe industry. We have proved our worth."

Shipments of film from America to France are "about two weeks late," Mr. Miggins continued, "but there is no difficulty in obtaining prints.

"We get as many as we need," he said. "We dub them, as usual, we ship them, as usual, to other parts of France, to Scandinavia, to our other territories."

He called "The Rains Came" the greatest success in Continental Europe, for the company. It broke records in first-run houses, during January, in Stockholm and Copenhagen.

Sees Early Return in Italy

Mr. Miggins thinks American film companies may be able to return to business in Italy soon. He deprecated the fact that less money seems available for the purchase of American films by the Italian government, but noted that one of the sponsors of the Italian governmental monoply, the terms of which forced American companies, over a year ago, to withdraw from Italy, had been removed to a diplomatic post in another country.

"The chances of doing business," he said, "seem to rest on the realization of the Italians that American films should be handled along the same lines as Italian films in America."

No prints are going to Spain, he said, and none will go, he hinted, until the Spanish restrictions are eased. Of these restrictions, the most onerous, he indicated, is that which would force an American company to produce one picture in Spain for every American picture imported into the country. It is also difficult to get money out of the country, he added.

Booking Old Prints

Mr. Miggins was in Spain in December, surveying operations of Twentieth Century-Fox's ten offices in the country. The offices are functioning, booking old prints, he said.

"We hope to reach an agreement with the Spanish government," Mr. Miggins said. "American companies are afraid at present to deal with the Spaniards, on their conditions, because they fear the precedents which will be established.

RADIO RECORDING BILLS PROTESTED

The radio recording industry is threatened by bills introduced in the House of Representatives and the assemblies of New York and Pennsylvania, according to Henry Portnow, counsel for Audio-Scriptions, Inc. The bills seek to prevent companies from recording broadcasts without written permission in advance from all participants in the program. A brief submitted to the Rules Committee of the New York Assembly held that such a regulation represents an attack on the freedom of the air.

The Perry bill in New York and the Voorhees measure in Pennsylvania passed the upper houses last year but did not go through the lower houses. Senator Charles D. Perry of New York had reintroduced his bill this year.

"It would mean the end of our business, if the restrictive policies of the Spanish government, or the Italian government, were successful. It would mean two monopolies, the Spanish added to the Italian. It would spread to the whole world, inside of two years.

"You already have as precedents the quota system started by Germany in 1922, the dubbing of films, the financial restraints. We don't want monopolies now."

Mr. Miggins said the company's personnel was at work in the Prague offices and that only a few were unaccounted for, after the strife that started last March. He had had no word of the Warsaw situation.

Of Finland, he said he believed company operations there had been suspended but that he had heard theatres were remaining open in some sections.

Mr. Miggins had been in Europe since Feb. 6, 1939. He was accompanied, on his return last week, by Mrs. Miggins.

Malaya Business Up

Theatre grosses in British Malaya reflect troop concentrations and a boom in the rubber and tin industries, and American films are freely imported, Keith Goldsmith, managing director of the Twentieth Century-Fox Singapore office, said on arrival in New York last week.

The Singapore office covers Malaya, British North Borneo and Siam.

Mr. Goldsmith added that there were no restrictions, in British Malaya, on the export of money, that newsreels sent to the territory from England are encouraged by the authorities for their propaganda value, that there is theatre building activity in Singapore and Bangkok.

UA Wins Award

United Artists was awarded first prize, last Monday, by the Martin Cantine Company, for outstanding skill in the use of coated paper in motion picture trade paper advertising in 1939.

Map Schedule of Club Convention

John Harris, founder of the Variety Clubs of America and national chief barker, journeyed from Pittsburgh last week to Dallas to confer with R. J. O'Donnell, chief barker of the Dallas Variety Club Tent No. 17, on plans for the annual national convention there April 18-20.

Mr. O'Donnell, with the assistance of executive committeemen Paul Short and Louis Charninsky, has made arrangements for the appearance of John A. Guthrie's "Real Wild West and Big Indian Congress" at the convention.

The Pittsburgh Club is enlarging and renovating its quarters in the William Penn Hotel there at an expense of approximately $10,000. Mr. Harris is donating a library to the club in honor of his father, the late Senator John P. Harris, and his uncle, the late Harry Davis.

Sol Davis, assistant property man of the Oklahoma Variety Club announces that eight new members have been accepted for membership. They include Walter Dolan, Cliff White, Jr., Hy Martin, John Feeney, Charles Rook, James Allen Smith, Louis Barton and Ray Hughes. Don Withington has resigned as manager of the club headquarters and has been succeeded by James Garrison.

The inaugural dinner dance and floor show for the Kansas City Variety Club's 1940 officers will be held March 1st at the Hotel Muehlebach.

Roy M. Avey of Loew's last week presented a check for $1,000 to Arthur Lucas, chairman of the Atlanta Variety heart committee, for its part in staging the premiere of "Gone with the Wind" there December 15th.

UA's Resignation Effective March 1st

The resignation of United Artists from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributor of America, Inc., will become effective March 1, six months after the resignation was tendered by the company in accordance with the bylaws of the Hays organization.

The resignation applies only to the distributing company. It does not apply to producers affiliated with United Artists, who may be members of the MPPDA.

Paramount Executives Convene at Miami

An informal meeting was held at Miami Beach, Fla., by members of the Paramount home office, including Barney Balaban, Austin Keough, Leonard Goldenson, Sam Dembow, Leon Netter and Montague Gowthrope. They discussed theatre problems, the Neely bill and other pending legislation.

Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of production for Paramount, announced the appointment of Henry Ginsberg as his assistant in executive matters. Mr. Ginsberg has been vice-president and general manager of Selznick International.

Frances Perkins Honored

Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was guest of honor at a cocktail party given her Thursday during a visit to Hollywood.

BRAZIL AND PERU HIT U.S. PRODUCT; MEXICAN FILMS AWAIT FEDERAL AID

Brazilian Decree Increases Censorship Fees from $400 a Feature to $1,600; 10% Surtax Proposed by Peruvians

Earlier fears of American motion picture companies for their position in Brazil as a result of the new decree formulating new taxation and "quota" laws appear well founded, for the State Department at Washington, replying to direct inquiry, this week informed the American companies that it believes the Brazilian decree to be contrary to the United States trade treaty with that country.

In consequence, the State Department's opinion will be forwarded to the American Ambassador at Rio de Janeiro with instructions to make representations accordingly on behalf of the industry.

The decree increases censorship fees in Brazil from a current average of about $400 per feature picture to $1,600. Censorship of all imported films, including short subjects, is mandatory.

The decree also requires American distributors to purchase newsreels and travelogues made in Brazil for distribution outside that country. The purchases must be equivalent to at least 10 per cent of the film footage sent into Brazil annually by the distributor.

The U. S. industry protested the decree to the State Department as a violation of the United States trade treaty with Brazil, particularly that part of it which guarantees against increase in taxes and levies over the level prevailing at the time the treaty was signed.

New Film Rules in Brazil

by L. S. MARINHO
in Rio de Janeiro

The new department formed by the Brazilian Government which is known as the Propaganda and Press Department (Departamento de Imprensa e Propaganda) and which replaces the old Departamento Nacional de Propaganda, has created several new rules covering the film industry. One rule makes it obligatory on the part of exhibitors to show at least one domestic short subject of good quality in each new program.

The department will classify the domestic short subjects as to "good quality" and no Brazilian film can be exported without approval of the department. Likewise no foreign cameraman will be permitted to take pictures in this country without a permit from the department. The exhibitor is also obligated to display the title of the short subject and the subject filmed in a sub-title. All motion picture houses will also be obliged to show at least one domestic feature film a year.

The law forbidding children to attend motion picture shows considered unsuitable for them is continued in force and now applies to juveniles up to 18 years of age.

The duties on imported films are 50 cents (approximately) per kilogram or 15 per cent for the standard film and 25 cents per kilogram or 15 per cent for 16mm. The duties on raw film, either positive or negative, and also posed pictures classified as educational are five cents per kilogram. Foreign pictures developed in quantity in Brazilian laboratories will be freed from the tax of the censor board which is attached to the Propaganda and Press Department.

One of the most important items that appear in the recent law is that all importers of short subjects and newsreels are now obliged to purchase annually from domestic producers an amount of film equal to 10 per cent of the material imported and of the same classification.

BILL WOULD EASE REORGANIZATIONS

A bill permitting reorganizations of corporations which are barred from new financing or expansion under the burdens of unpaid dividends on preferred stock was introduced in the New York Assembly Monday by Harry A. Reoux, chairman of the Assembly Judiciary Committee. Unless more than a third of the stockholders filed objections in writing, the measure would allow a reorganization of a company in which both common and preferred stocks were concerned.

Peru's Tax Plans

A surtax of 10 per cent on total gross business done by film distributors in Peru has been proposed by the government there, according to word just received in home office foreign departments in New York.

The tax on gross would be in addition to all other taxes on film distributors now in effect in Peru.

An investigation of the industry's status in relation to the proposed tax is now under way with a view to registering a formal protest with the State Department.

It is estimated that the tax would cost the industry in excess of $500,000 annually.

Aid for Mexican Films

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Government aid for the film industry seems to be just around the corner. The Ministry of National Economy has invited all Mexican companies to appoint delegates to a conference to be held here late this month to discuss problems affecting the industry.

President Lazaro Cardenas has assured the National Cinematographic and Allied Workers' Union, which appealed to him for help, of all possible assistance in the situation. The President said that he will advance plans that have been in preparation for the past two years for the establishment of a state-controlled bank to finance the industry.

Further assistance for the workers is promised by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, secretary general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers and Mexico's labor leader.

Mexican producers have started an intensive drive for more business in Spain by sending two of their most aggressive representatives, Antonio Soria and Jose Rodriguez, to Madrid to establish an exchange.

Screen Craft Sells Program

Screen Craft Pictures Company, N. Y., state rights distributor, this week sold its entire program of 13 pictures to Pam-O-Pictures for upper New York and to Fine Arts Producing and Distributing Corporation, Pittsburgh, for western Pennsylvania. Fine Arts there is operated by Max Shulgold, former Grand National Pittsburgh exchange manager.

Independents to Aid Finn Drive

Thousands of independent theatre owners throughout the United States have pledged support to the Finnish Relief Fund drive in response to a letter addressed to 6,000 independents by the drive chairman, former President Herbert Hoover.

"Finland Fights!" a short subject made for the Fund, is reviewed on page 41.

All the major theatre circuits have similarly agreed to cooperate, according to Major Lester E. Thompson, chairman of the motion picture division of the Fund.

Fund collections will be made in the theatres Saturday and Sunday.

Representatives of the trade press met with Mr. Hoover, Major Thompson and Jack Connolly, in charge of publicity for the motion picture division, last Thusday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Among those at the conference were Terry Ramsaye, Sam Shain, Mike Wear, Arthur James, Maurice Kann, Charles Lewis and George Morris.

A committee has been organized in Detroit consisting of William Carlson, chairman; Tom McGuire, executive chairman; Jack Hurford, publicity; Earl Hudson, financial secretary; Pearl M. Sprott, secretary; C. C. Perry and Dan J. Lewis, arrangements.

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin has signed a contract whereby 27 of its member theatres in Milwaukee County will share ticket proceeds with the Finnish relief fund from February 26 to March 11.

Chicago has raised about $110,000 for the Fund, exceeding its $100,000 quota, with prospects for much larger receipts this month.

Harold Rodner, Warner Brothers executive and vice-president of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, left New York Monday for the coast to supervise the selection of stars and arrangements for filming the annual Will Rogers short subject, which will be shown at theatres throughout the country during Will Rogers Week beginning April 18th.

Films Committee Formed For Catholic Charities

The 1940 committee for the motion picture and amusement industries to aid the Annual Catholic Charity Drive in New York is now being formed, with John J. O'Connor, of RKO Theatres, as chairman. This drive will be sponsored by the Archbishop's committee headed by the Hon. Alfred E. Smith, chairman, and Frank C. Walker, treasurer.

The following film industry figures have accepted invitations to serve on the Committee: Harry Buckley, United Artists; H. M. Doherty, Warner Brothers; Austin Keough, Paramount; Charles L. O'Reilly, Sanitary Automatic Candy Company; Martin Quigley; N. J. Blumberg, Universal; William A. Scully, Universal; George C. Walsh, Netco Theatres; Jack Pegler, Lord and Thomas; James R. Grainger, Republic Pictures; Joseph McConville, Columbia; Charles B. McDonald, RKO Theatres.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS DEMAND NEW MACHINERY FOR REVIVED BUSINESS

Want Rental Position Reviewed, Higher Admission Prices and Lower Entertainments Tax; Circuits Ask CEA Attention

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With five months of war already passed, British exhibitors more and more are realizing that while the outside world loses itself in a labyrinth of politics, their problem, the problem of adjustment, or survival, is strictly one of sheer economics.

Processes and Headaches

Trade as reflected in the box offices of 4,500 cinemas is by no means bad. In most cases, it is back to normal, in spite of conditions worse than abnormal. The processes of buying and selling, the material business of hiring films, of paying employees and purchasing raw materials and accessories, has, however, increased the purchases of aspirin.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the exhibitors already are talking of an overhaul of film hire machinery and a new examination of the rentals position. On the cards, too, is an adjustment of admission prices, coupled with an appeal to the Government for a cut in entertainments tax.

Coupled are the questions of a war bonus for the theatre staffs, a matter pressed emphatically and urgently by the employees union, and the current bid of the carbon manufacturers to establish a pool with rationing and an increase of purchase prices.

From all points of the British compass have come demands for a remodeling of the whole film hire situation. It is more than likely that the General Council, political and economic cabinet of British picture house operators, will be faced with demands from provincial branches that the matter be taken up with the Kinematograph Renters Society. From Manchester, for instance, comes the complaint that present hire rates make it impossible for the exhibitor to face the rising tide of overheads, increased wartime taxes, and ARP expenses. In Scotland the same view holds the ground, also in the London branch, and in Bristol.

One exhibitor group has suggested legislation that no film distributing concern be allowed to take more than 33⅓ per cent of gross receipts for any one program.

CEA Wants Tax Cut

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has determined to ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to cut the theatre tax. In Edinburgh it is proposed that the tax exemption base of sixpence be raised to sixpence halfpenny, that the shilling admission be raised to one and a penny with the tax remaining as at present on the former price. The alternative suggested is the legal maximum of 33⅓ per cent on film hire rates.

It is generally accepted that admission rates will have to go up. Arthur Moss, chairman of the London Branch, already has said so.

Meanwhile great discontent still exists with the Carbon Pool.

At least two of the major circuits have been negotiating with American suppliers with a view to securing constant carbon supplies from the U. S. and cutting out all dealings with the British Pool.

Exhibitors are increasingly aware that to set up the price of carbons by 10 per cent, as from todays' date, is in many cases to put up prices by more than that, standardization will bring down the quality of many carbons and exhibitors will have to pay 10 per cent more for a carbon that may burn 25 per cent less.

It the matter becomes aggravated there is the likelihood that a wide demand will go out for Government control.

Circuits in Revolt

History, by the way, is repeating itself in the CEA. Exactly twelve months ago, in these columns, was recorded a sharpening of the conflict between British circuit owners and the independent theatre operators. Today precisely the same problem, with exactly similar weapons and tactics, is presented. Last year it was the independent who had taken the initiative. This year it is the circuit.

As a result, there is certain to be a greatly increased representation of the circuits on the General Council.

So far as the future is concerned, no detached observer foresees any particular revolution or counter revolution resulting. If any effect can be anticipated it may well be that there will be a stimulating effect on the independent. Even the most ardent champions of the independent cause will say, with bitterness and disillusion in their voices, that the battle has long been fought for an ungrateful and torpid band.

Independent operators in Britain represent at least 75 per cent of the total but, say their proponents, they have no corporate policy and little or no sense of unity. On the other hand, circuits here are in general national in outlook.

It is emphasized, too, that even the independents can be divided into two camps, those owning first run houses, probably 400 odd, and those showing later releases.

Even against this likely consolidation of the circuit front the forthcoming year is likely to see independents on the General Council invoked to agitate for certain first principles, among them a limitation of bars to a low mileage maximum, greater freedom in the circulation of films, and level terms between circuits and independents.

London Approves American Plan For Distribution of Revenue

The plan drawn up by American companies distributing in England for allocation among themselves of the exportable revenue from that country became effective this week with final approval of the terms by the British Government. The annual amount available for export under the British wartime regulations is expected to be approximately $17,500,000, fifty per cent of the total annual revenue.

Under the allocation formula the money will be distributed to each company in proportion to the amount of business done in England during the six months ended November 1, 1939. During the first six months of this year the companies may withdraw 75 per cent of their proportionate share of the money and the remaining 25 per cent will be withdrawn in accordance with whatever changes in business shall have taken place between the various companies in the first six months of this year. A final equalization of accounts will be made at the end of the year.

Estimates of the approximate percentages of withdrawal and the money value represented on the $17,500,000 base are as follows: Loew's, 25 per cent, $4,370,000; Warner Brothers-First National, 18 per cent, $3,150,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, 17.5 per cent, $3,062,500; Paramount, 15 per cent, $2,625,000; United Artists, 10 per cent, $1,750,000; Columbia, 8 per cent, $1,400,000, and RKO, 6.5 per cent, $1,137,500. These estimates are unofficial.

Brandt to Build 11 in New England

Construction of 11 modern type theatres along Colonial lines in Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts will be started this Spring by the Brandt Theatre circuit, according to Harry Brandt, president. The circuit now operates 85 theatres in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

Towns in which the new theatres are planned are: Pawtucket, R. I.; Providence, R. I.; Putnam, Conn.; Danielson, Conn.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Darien, Conn.; Danbury, Conn.; So. Bridge, Mass.; Milford, Mass.; Great Barrington, Mass., and Plymouth, Mass.

Mr. Brandt said that each theatre will contain the latest developments in acoustics and sound projection as well as providing the ultimate in comfort. He said that adequate facilities for the addition of television to regular theatre programs will be provided. Construction is expected to be completed by the Fall of this year.

Ellis to Philadelphia

Jack Ellis, president of the Motion Picture Associates, has been invited by a group of Philadelphia salesmen to attend a meeting there on Saturday and advise them on the organization of an association similar to the MPA. Its purposes would be charitable and social.

Dies' Articles On Film 'Reds' Are Attacked

Congressman Martin Dies' trial in the public prints, without hearing, of charges of "influence" of Communism and other subversive movements in Hollywood and California, was attacked last week on the floor of the House of Representatives by Jerry Voorhis, Congressman from Los Angeles. Mr. Voorhis is a member of the Dies committee and head of its subcommittee on Nazism and Fascism.

Protests Against Articles

Mr. Voorhis in his address to the House of Representatives pointed out that Mr. Dies had been contributing articles to Liberty magazine "over a period of some little time." He continued, "during the period when there is no committee in existence he, of course, has a perfect right to write articles or to say anything that he pleases, as has every other American citizen."

"The committee very properly, I think," Mr. Voorhis said, "did not make public the report of the investigators on West coast matters for the reason that no hearings had yet been held regarding them . . . it appears to me that inevitably the very appearance of such an article and the expression in that article of the chairman's point of view as to what he thinks about the situation puts the investigation in an extremely difficult position, and makes it very hard for the course of the investigation not to be colored by opinions and statements already made and matter more or less of record."

Describes Hollywood Conference

Mr. Dies in his articles, describing a meeting, said "I was escorted to a conference room, where five or six of the large producers, such as Schenck and Samuel Goldwyn, were present. We had a round-table discussion which lasted about an hour."

Samuel Goldwyn sent a telegram to Mr. Dies saying that he never had been present at a round-table conference with him and asked that the story be immediately denied. Mr. Goldwyn wrote that he had met Mr. Dies only "very briefly" and "our meeting consisted of 'I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Dies, I think you are doing a fine job in fighting unAmerican activities.'"

The Congressman had said that the producers were of almost unanimous opinion that Communism did not constitute any threat to the country and the real menace was from Fascism and Nazism.

Saw Hollywood "Duped"

Mr. Dies also wrote, "I left this conference with a strong impression that Hollywood has been completely duped by the Communists." He also described attending a showing of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and being more interested in Harry Warner than the show. He praised the patriotic films made by Warner Brothers.

The Congressman said he was worried about Communism in Hollywood because "through the medium of the films, it wields the most potent weapon in the world."

The Dies committee requires two more months to complete the West Coast investigations, according to the report to the House.

Although it was indicated some time ago that the committee planned to make known the names of a score of members of the Hollywood film colony who have aided the Communist cause, no names have been released as yet.

CBS LOOKING AT FILMS FOR ITS TELECASTING

Studio Staff Making 16mm. Films for Possible Television Use, Says Seldes

Experiments now being conducted by Columbia Broadcasting System's television studio in Grand Central Station, New York, will detemine the suitability of films for CBS television. National Broadcasting has said that 30 per cent of its television program time to date has been composed of films. CBS has not determined what percentage of television time will be given to motion pictures when its new station soon begins regular programs.

Schedule Still To Be Set

Gilbert Seldes director of television programs for CBS, said this week that films present "no program difficulties," and that he had not yet made out the program schedule, "so there has been no decision on the part motion pictures will play in CBS television."

Mr. Seldes said members of the CBS television studio staff had made 16mm films for possible use in television. He observed that a crowd shot might be used years later when needed on a program. There are no plans for a 16mm current events reel for television, according to Mr. Seldes.

The film problem facing television does not seem to be so much how motion pictures rank as television program material but one of the availability of films. The large companies have not supplied films for television purposes to NBC and all indications are that with the advent of the CBS television station there will be no change in the policy. The latest film from a large company, according to NBC, was a super-trailer on Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," televised at the time of the New York opening.

March of Time Films

The March of Time has allowed NBC to use old films for television. The latest of these, "Japan: Master of the Orient" (released April 14, 1939), was televised last Sunday. Both RKO-Radio, the distributor of the pictures, and the March of Time feel there is no competition in old issues on television. Harry J. Michalson, short subjects sales manager for RKO, said the company did not control the television rights to the March of Time shorts but nothing would be done to interfere with theatres showing the films.

The use of the "March of Time" shorts by NBC is based on the fact that television operations are in an experimental and not commercial stage. The Time-Life group has been working with NBC for years on the "March of Time" on the air, and when television came along the radio company was given permission to use the old issues. John R. Wood, Jr., secretary and treasurer, Time, Inc., March of Time Division said that when television reaches a commercial state changes would have to be made in the arrangement. He pointed out that the March of Time had no intention of taking a position on television at variance with that held by the large companies, that the use of the films, as long as television is in an experimental stage, creates no problem of interference with theatres.

Television rights to 13 shorts made by Symphonic Films, Inc. have been purchased by the National Broadcasting Company for station W2XBS atop the Empire State Building. Paramount has released six operatic and symphonic shorts produced by that company. Three were on last year's schedule and the others already have been released on the 1939-40 program.

The symphonic shorts are produced by Frederick Feher, director of the National Philharmonic Orchestra of the United States, at the General Service Studio in Hollywood. The subjects made by that company include arrangements of classical musical compositions. Paramount this year has released "The Blue Danube Waltz," "Merry Wives of Windsor" and "William Tell."

The musical shorts presented by television will not be the same subjects released by Paramount because the film company has purchased exclusive rights to the shorts it has distributed. Lou Diamond, head of Paramount's short subject department and music interests, said he believed the televising of the symphonic shorts would increase the popularity of such subjects.

Educational Films Files in Receivership

Educational Films Corporation of America, subsidiary of Educational Pictures, Inc., filed a voluntary receivership petition in United States district court, New York, on Tuesday, listing liabilities of $392,876, and assets of an unknown amount.

Electrical Research Products, Inc., was named in the petition as the largest creditor, with a secured claim of $211,600. Other secured creditors were the National City Bank, for $10,000; Jeremiah McGuire, for $20,466. The petition set forth, as a contingent liability, a $100,000 damage suit brought against the company by Amanda and George Seibert. Tax claims, now in dispute, total $47,349.

The company's trademark, "The Spice of the Program," was listed as one of the chief assets; also the 16 mm. and sub-standard rights to films being distributed by eight companies.

Picture Associates Installs Officers

The Motion Picture Associates, with more money in its treasury than ever before, will soon have an unemployment benefit fund for members, Jack Ellis, its president, told 125 members at the annual installation of officers, Tuesday, in New York's Hotel Astor. Among other speakers were Harry Hershfield, Emil K. Ellis and Morris Sanders.

New officers, besides Jack Ellis, are Moe Streimer, vice-president; Matty Cahn, second vice-president; Saul Trauner, treasurer; Moe Fraum, recording secretary; Charles Penser, financial secretary; Abe Blumstein, sergeant-at-arms; Jack Hattem and Joe Lee, trustees. Directors are Mr. Streiner, chairman, and Leo Brecher, Morris Sanders, Dave Levy, William Stein, and Jerome "Jerry" Wilson.

ARBITRATION AND CENSORSHIP IN CANADA FAVORABLE; NEW TAX OFF

Montreal Exhibitors Wary of New Levies; Attendance Improves in British Columbia; Regina Operators Protest

Reports on film censorship in Canada and the film arbitration boards in the Dominion for 1939 are considered by the industry to reflect cooperative progress. Only 17 pictures were condemned outright in 1939 against 23 in the previous year. The number of "refusals" is actually much less in the matter of pictures involved because one feature was rejected by five of the eight Provincial boards and is counted five times.

Before the arbitration boards 225 complaints were filed, 106 awards were made and 74 cases were adjusted before consideration. In 1938 there were 238 cases, of which 121 were settled by awards and 71 by preadjustment. The claims in the 225 cases in 1939 represented $74,887, the awards $40,668.

Rejections of films in Canada have declined steadily since 1932 when 101 pictures were banned by censors. Not only are fewer pictures refused licenses, but eliminations in films that have been passed have declined in the same proportion in recent years, it is pointed out.

The censors have taken the attitude that it is their business to safeguard the public on very extreme occasions and not to improve on the work of the film directors. The only real difficulty in Canada, it is said, is the continued opposition in Quebec to any pictures relating to divorce.

Lift Radio Ban

Radio censorship of political speeches in Canada will be lifted in the current national election campaign, but the ban on the broadcasting of public meetings will continue.

Regulations provide machinery for muzzling those who gave information of possible use to the enemy. Instead of submitting speeches to regional censors the speakers will be put on the honor system.

Drop Ontario Tax Aims

The Ontario Government has abandoned its plan for restoration of the amusement tax in the present session of the legislature because of many protests against the restoration of the tax, according to a semi-official announcement.

Theatre and film exchange corporations will be called upon to pay an increased profits tax, however, in an alternative measure introduced by Gordon Conant, attorney general. It provides an increase from 2 per cent to 5 per cent in the Provincial levy on corporation income.

The decision of the national Canadian Government to hold a general election March 26th, because of the war program, has had the effect of postponing film taxation measures. The next session of the Canadian Parliament will not be held until late in April.

Montreal Wary of Taxes

by R. J. O'LEARY

in Montreal

Motion picture house owners here are rapping on wood every time one mentions the possibility of a new war tax being added to their assessment sorrows.

The latest tax to be enforced in Montreal is a 2 per cent city tax on nearly all purchases amounting to more than 10 cents. It has been law (but not enforced) civic authorities say, for the last several years. The latest move is to apply it more firmly on neighborhood houses which give kitchen ware as premiums, charging ticket holders 10 cents for each dish or cup. There is no tax when an individual pays 10 cents for a single dish. But when he hands out 20 cents for a dish for himself and his companion he is liable to a tax of one cent.

The 13-year-old law designed to keep the children of Quebec Province out of theatres may soon be supplanted by a controlled system which would provide a regular fare of specially selected motion pictures, according to hints voiced by the Honorable Wilfrid Girouard, K. C., attorney general of the province.

The law would be replaced, it is believed, by a new form of government control. Plans are to appoint a censorship board composed of a Protestant minister, a Roman Catholic priest and other community leaders interested in the educational development and moral safeguarding of minors. They would select suitable pictures and children would be permitted to attend the showing of these pictures.

Motion picture houses have come in for considerable criticism at times when the government ban has been temporarily lifted for special pictures. It is said that the theatres did not fulfill their part of the bargain by rounding out the program with short subjects which were also fit for childish and adolescent consumption.

Theatre Admissions Improve

by E. S. ROBERTS

in Vancouver, B. C.

Theatre attendances generally have revealed an improving trend in recent months in British Columbia. "Hunchback" and "Gulliver" attracted January's best business to Vancouver's Capitol and Orpheum.

These are Famous Players' major downtown houses. The Orpheum, 2,900 seats, is expecting sell-out business for "Gone With the Wind," opening February 16 twice daily, at 75 cents for matinees, $1.05 evenings, with all seats reserved. It is scheduled for one week's run in this first showing in British Columbia.

Motion picture operators in Regina, Sask., have carried a protest to the Saskatchewan Government in an attempt to gain a reduction in the annual renewal license fee. Apparently there is no protest against the present examination fee and the initial license fee, as operators maintain that nothing should be done to reduce the standard of efficiency maintained by the operators. They are concentrating upon getting a reduction in the annual renewal fee.

The present examination fee is $5, the initial license fee is $10, and the renewal license fee is $10.

Representations were made to the government some time ago protesting that renewal fees were out of line with fees charged in other provinces and particular reference was made to the scale of fees charged in British Columbia which are somewhat lower than in Saskatchewan.

A net operating surplus of $357,454 for the year ending March 31, 1939, is shown in the annual report of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation released by the board of governors. Fixed assets of the corporation were increased by $346,561, due largely to the construction of new transmitters in the Maritimes and in the Prairies. These transmitters, CBA at Sackville, N. B., and CBK at Watrous, Sask., incomplete at the end of March, 1939, cost approximately $500,000 and were financed out of the government loan already voted.

CAMPAIGN EXPLAINED TO CIRCUIT MANAGERS

What was called a new idea to insure workable motion picture sales promotion campaigns was launched Monday when George R. Bilson, who is handling exploitation on Sol Lessers' "Our Town," United Artists release, addressed a meeting of all Southern California district managers of Fox West Coast Theatres.

Mr. Bilson not only told his listeners of the progress of the picture which is now being directed by Sam Wood, but also explained the manner in which it will be advertised, exploited and publicized. Reactions were listed and proposed sales ideas that met with objections were discarded.

In the next ten weeks Mr. Bilson will contact similar exhibitor groups throughout the West.

Atlantic SMPE Hears Discussion of Television

The Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held a meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York Wednesday and heard a paper on "Quality in Television Pictures" by Peter C. Goldmark and John N. Dyer of the Television Engineering Department, Columbia Broadcasting System.

The Society is conducting a campaign for new members to offset the loss of foreign memberships and a corresponding portion of its revenue from dues because of the European conditions.

Review Board Incorporates

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures filed membership incorporation papers with the New York secretary of state, Michael F. Walsh. The organization was formed over 25 years ago but had not taken out any form of incorporation papers. The organization is to continue with the same non-profit policy and according to its lawyer's office, will not issue stock.

Sonja Henie Sets Record

Sonja Henie and her ice revue has established a new record in St. Louis for a week's engagement of any single theatrical enterprise, grossing $120,000 in six nights. More than 80,000 persons viewed the show each night.

"Nazi Germany" Deal

National Pictures Corporation has sold "I Was a Captive in Nazi Germany," an Alfred T. Mannon production, for distribution in the Strait Settlements, Siam and Federated Malay States.

RADIO SHOWS TO EXPLOIT 10 FILMS; FRESH CROP OF FIELD OPENINGS

"Pinocchio" Merchandise Sales 40% Above "Snow White," Says RKO; 120 "Grapes of Wrath" Pre-release Requests

With Paramount this week turning to mass merchandising of new films via the airwaves, and other companies setting a fresh crop of dates for world premieres in the field, the business of exploding pictures upon the public and press with a concentrated volley approached normal procedure.

This week brought out "Pinocchio," "Seventeen," "Sidewalks of London," "Young Tom Edison," "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," all with a wide assortment of special attentions, put on along Broadway, Hollywood Boulevard, Miami Beach, Port Huron, Mich., Memphis or wherever the site of the premiere. New datings for this kind of treatment were set for "The Biscuit Eater" at Albany, Ga.; "Virginia City," at the Nevada place of the same name; "Rebecca," at Miami Beach, among others previously scheduled.

Predict "Pinocchio" Record

Surveying public reception of "Pinocchio" at New York City's Center theatre, last Wednesday evening, RKO sales executives predicted it would top the records set by "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

It opened for its first West Coast run last Friday, at the Hillstreet and Pantages Theatres in Los Angeles.

Andy Smith, Eastern and Canadian sales manager for RKO, said the picture would open up in key situations on a big scale by the first week in March.

RKO announced that "over a period corresponding to that of the early release days of 'Snow White,' the merchandising centered around 'Pinocchio' has sold in a volume 40 per cent higher than for the first Disney feature."

Running at the Rockefeller Center's New York Museum of Science and Industry is an exhibit featuring the production technique of animated cartoons, "aided" by the Disney studio cooperation.

120 "Grapes" Dates

Late Tuesday it was announced by the Twentieth Century-Fox home offices in New York that requests for pre-release engagements of "The Grapes of Wrath" numbered 120.

The picture, playing at New York's Rivoli theatre, is to have a gala premiere at the Four Star theatre, in Los Angeles, on February 27th. The following day, the picture will open at popular prices also at Loew's State, and Grauman's Chinese.

It will be the first time a picture has played at three theatres simultaneously in that city.

The picture is to open at the Capitol theatre, Cincinnati, next Thursday.

Herman Wobber, general sales manager, said last week that 20th-Fox would ask a guarantee of extended playing time from exhibitors, especially for pre-release engagements, and that it would ask single billing.

The film runs two hours and ten minutes, he pointed out; the firm feels that single billing will assure an adequate turnover.

Twentieth Century-Fox, it is understood, will have an assisting advertising campaign for pre-release engagements, and will require the exhibitor to increase his normal advertising budget for the engagement.

WISCONSIN THEATRE STATUTE HELD ILLEGAL

"Foreign" theatre corporations, of which there are a number in Wisconsin, are no longer subject to the 1935 privilege dividend tax as a result of a decision by the state supreme court ruling the levy unconstitutional.

The decision does not affect Wisconsin corporations, which remain subject to the statute. The tax was assessed on the privilege of declaring corporate dividends on income earned in Wisconsin by both local and foreign corporations. The rate was fixed at 2½ per cent by the 1935 and 1937 legislatures and increased to 3 per cent by the 1939 legislature.

As a result of the decision, the state must refund some $1,267,000 collected from foreign corporations operating in Wisconsin and will lose about $540,000 in future collections for the remainder of the biennium.

Mr. Wobber added, last week, that the firm will set between 100 and 150 day-and-date bookings for the picture, on March 1st.

The Twentieth Century-Fox newspaper advertising of the picture, featuring six original lithographs by Thomas Benton, famed American artist, attracted attention from the advertising editor of Editor and Publisher for January 27th. Warren L. Bassett wrote:

"This column gives a bow to Messrs. McCarthy (Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century-Fox) and Shanfield (Louis Shanfield, the company's art director) for attracting one of the country's greatest artists into the advertising columns."

The book from which the picture was made, of the same title, and by John Steinbeck, received the favorite fiction award for 1939, at the annual meeting, in New York this week, of the American Booksellers Association.

"Bullet" Premiere in Memphis

Warner Brothers' "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," starring Edward G. Robinson, opened at the Warner theatre, Memphis, last Thursday. The company, measuring preview reactions, installed, with the cooperation of Postal Telegraph, a teletype machine in the lobby. This was flanked by booths containing interviewers from the Press Scimitar and Commercial Appeal. The comments of patrons, given to these interviewers, were teletyped to exhibitors throughout the country, and Warner personnel everywhere in America, also to the amusement editors' desks of papers in large cities.

"Edison" at Port Huron

MGM'S "Young Tom Edison" was given a world premiere last Saturday evening at three theatres in Port Huron, Michigan, the Family, Majestic, and Desmond, all owned by the Butterfield circuit. The showings climaxed a three-day civic celebration, attaining a high spot Saturday morning, when the old "Sam Hill" train, featured in the picture, arrived in Port Huron, from Detroit, carrying press, political, and screen notables.

Among the notables present for the premieres and celebration were Mrs. Minna Edison Hughes, wife of the late inventor, Louis B. Mayer, of MGM, Governor Luren Dickinson, of Michigan, and others.

The notables were also guests of Henry and Edsel Ford at the Ford Company plant in Dearborn, and at luncheon, in Greenfield Village, near Detroit, on last Thursday.

In New York City, Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, son of the late inventor, and a representative of Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, were guests of honor at a luncheon, last Saturday, at the Hotel Astor, held simultaneously with a luncheon in Port Huron.

At 5:30 P.M. in Port Huron, Mrs. Hughes turned on a 50,000 watt beacon light, which is to serve as a permanent memorial to Thomas A. Edison.

Edison Pioneers Luncheon

The Edison Pioneers, former associates of Thomas A. Edison, marked what would have been his 93rd birthday at a luncheon in New York's Hotel Astor, last Saturday. Charles A. Edison, son of the inventor, and Secretary of the Navy, a guest of honor, paid tribute to his father's genius.

Last Thursday, in an address to the Advertising Club, in New York, Eugene C. Reed, vice president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., declared that part of the high standard of living admittedly prevailing in this country is the result of Mr. Edison's inventive genius. Mr. Reed said Mr. Edison was responsible for 1,151 inventions.

Members of the club heard, at the luncheon, a record of Edison's voice, in a speech he had delivered to the Electrical Association in 1908; and they also saw one of the first motion pictures ever made, produced by Edison in 1903.

"Virginia City" Premiere

Twentieth Century Fox's "Virginia City" will be premiered on March 16th in three of the leading theatres of Reno, Nevada. The picture will also be previewed that afternoon in a 200-seat theatre, in Virginia City, same state.

There will be the usual celebrations, and stars and newspaper men will attend.

"Rebecca" in Miami

United Artists' "Rebecca" will have its premiere in Miami, at the Lincoln Theatre, on March 22nd. It is scheduled to open in Dallas and Buffalo, on March 23rd.

Paramount Radio Exploitation

Paramount will use its stars and featured players to exploit ten Spring releases, "The Light That Failed," "Seventeen," "Road to Singapore," "Dr. Cyclops," "The Biscuit Eater," "Typhoon," "Buck Benny Rides Again," and others.

Other Premieres

Paramount's "The Biscuit Eater" will be premiered on or about April 10th in Albany, Georgia.

The same company's "Sidewalks of London," English-made, with Charles Laughton and Vivien Leigh, was shown for the first time in America last Tuesday, in Miami Beach. National release is Friday.

Paramount is exploiting "Seventeen" vigorously. Seventeen 17 year old girls were the company's guests early this week in Hollytests in 17 key cities.

ROACH SETS 6 FILMS AT $7,500,000; COLUMBIA, MONOGRAM SALES DRIVES

Universal Makes Promotions at Studio; Republic Holds Series of Field Conferences on Fifty-Two Features

Production attention this week gave emphasis to the business of budgets for 1940-41 in the Hal Roach camp, the while sales drives engaged the activities of Columbia and Monogram, studio promotions were the order at Universal, and Republic was engaged in a series of field conventions.

Roach Plans Six Films

Hal Roach's production schedule for his third season as a United Artist producer calls for six pictures to be made at a cost of $7,500,000. Details are to be worked in conferences with Murray Silverstone, head of the world-wide activities of United Artists.

"1,000,000 B. C." is almost finished and a road show pre-release engagement is under consideration. "Turnabout" and "Captain Caution" are in preparation, probably for release this season. The first of the Laurel and Hardy comedies for United Artists, "A Chump At Oxford", will be released about February 20th.

"Individual enterprise in the making of pictures has to be matched by the same individual enterprise in selling them," said Mr. Roach. "I think we have a great formula for success and, even more importantly, the greatest opportunity we ever had, this coming season."

Grover Jones, screen writer, and Richard Wallace, director have been signed by Hal Roach to work on three pictures the first of these is Kenneth Robert's "Captain Caution" and two other pictures. "Captain Caution" is now scheduled to follow "Turnabout" which is to go into production Monday.

Murray Silverstone said this week that United Artists new season release schedule may include five or six more pictures than the current list. The exact number of releases will be dependent to some extent on the outcome of Mr. Silverstone's conferences with producers on the Coast. The current United Artists schedule is expected to include 27 films.

J. J. Milstein, eastern representative for Edward Small Productions which are released by United Artists, left Monday for a Southern holiday. In about ten days he will go to the Coast for conferences with Mr. Small on the production schedule for 1940-41.

Columbia's Montague Drive

Columbia's annual sales and billings drive will be made this year in honor of the 15th anniversary with the company of Abe Montague, general sales manager. The drive opens February 17th and will continue until May 10th. The official title will be "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign."

Bonuses will be distributed to high ranking salesmen, bookers and branch managers who make the best record in the three months campaign. In addition grand awards will be given to those who make the best records.

Columbia features planned for release during the drive include: "Too Many Husbands", "The Doctor Takes a Wife", "Blondie on a Budget", "Five Little Peppers at Home" and "I Married Adventure."

Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, has been appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign."

Andre de La Varre has signed a contract with Columbia Pictures for a second series of Columbia Tours.

VERBAL CREDITS FOR BENNY FILM

The new Jack Benny film, "Buck Benny Rides Again," produced and directed by Mark Sandrich for Paramount, will have verbal credits as it opens on the screen. The names of the star and featured players in the film will be announced by Don Wilson, who also announces the Benny radio program.

Edward A. Golden, general sales manager for Monogram, left last Thursday on a tour which will take him to 15 Monogram offices in connection with the company's March for Monogram playdate drive. A sales meeting is scheduled in each exchange visited. Personnel from neighboring exchanges not on the schedule also will attend the meetings.

The cities on the schedule include: Atlanta, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo and Albany.

Among the releases during the drive period are: "The Human Monster", Bela Lugosi; "The Fatal Hour", Boris Karloff; "The Secret Four", "Son of the Navy", "The Gentleman From Arizona" and "East Side Kids."

John S. Harrington, manager of Monogram prints and accessories department, left Monday for a tour of the company's 29 branches. Mr. Harrington's tour began in Philadelphia and will take about six weeks.

W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, announced that "Torpedo Raider", a feature which is said to closely parallel the Graf Spee incident, will be released on February 28th. Walter Forde directed the picture based on the story of C. S. Forester. The picture was produced by GB and formerly known as "Born for Glory".

Norton V. Ritchey, Monogram foreign manager, reported that word had been received that the home of Nils Dahlstroem, managing director of Suomi Filmi which distributes Monogram product in Finland, was bombed and destroyed but Mr. Dahlstroem and his wife escaped injury. Suomi Filmi has moved from Helsinki to Tammerfors.

Universal Coast Promotions

Cliff Work, vice-president and general manager of Universal, announced Tuesday a number of promotions at the studio. Milton Schwarzwald has been put in charge of exploitation and of musical productions. Jack Gross will now handle "idea pictures." Marshall Grant, story editor, has been made associate producer. Don Brown, executive secretary for Mr. Work will be Mr. Gross's assistant. Greg Dowling, secretary to David Garber, operations manager, has been elevated to Mr. Brown's former position. Elmer Grether of the prop department has been made Mr. Garber's secretary. Leonard Cripps, former assistant, now becomes story editor, under the supervision of Dan Kelley. The first production to be made by Mr. Grant will be "Bombay Uprising."

Republic Sales Meetings

Republic held sales meeting last week in New York and Chicago. The Eastern regional sales meeting was held last Friday at the New York Athletic Club and the Chicago meeting Saturday at the Drake Hotel. Other meetings were scheduled for Atlanta, February 15th, at the Henry Grady hotel; Dallas, February 17th, Adolphus Hotel, and the West coast meeting at the studio in North Hollywood on the 19th.

Herbert J. Yates said that Republic will produce at least 52 features and four serials for the 1940-41 season with four specials budgeted at $750,000 each. Mr. Yates also said that the company planned to extend the exchange system where it was not possible to make satisfactory deals with franchise holders. He also pointed out that the company's domestic grosses were up about 20% for the first five weeks of 1940 which almost entirely offsets the foreign losses.

Discussions on a closer working arrangement between Republic's production and sales departments were held at the New York meeting. Republic recently inaugurated sales meetings three times a year at which the business of the previous quarter is reviewed and production matters discussed. Sales policy on "Dark Command" which has just gone before the cameras was taken up at the meeting. This film is one of the company's big-budget productions.

Those scheduled to attend the New York meeting were: Herman Gluckman, New York and Philadelphia franchise holder; Morris Epstein, New York branch manager; Max Gillis, Philadelphia branch manager; Jas. H. Alexander, Pittsburgh franchise holder; George Collins and Sam Fineburg, of the Pittsburgh branch; Sam and Jake Flax, Washington franchise holders; Jack Bellman, Buffalo branch manager; Arthur Newman, Albany branch manager; Sam Seletsky, New Haven branch manager; E. M. Morey, Boston branch manager; Nat Lefton, Cleveland and Cincinnati franchise holder; Sam Gorrel, Cleveland branch manager, and Max Margolis, Cincinnati branch manager.

Grainger Cites Progress

James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, and H. J. Yates and franchise holders from the Chicago area attended the meeting last Saturday. Mr. Grainger said, "Republic is making excellent progress and indications that such will continue are evident."

In discussing sales plans for coming product Mr. Grainger said Republic will serve about 8,000 theatres out of 10,000 possibilities. The Gene Autry pictures will serve about 98% of the possibilities he reported.

Also announced at the meeting was the signing of Judy Canova on a one year contract.

"Village Barn Dance", is doing a large business, Mr. Grainger told the group. He announced that much was expected from "Dark Command" and "The Lady from New Orleans", two of the bigger pictures on the Republic schedule.

Those scheduled to attend were Irving Mandel, franchise holder of Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis branches; Harry Lorch, Chicago branch manager; J. M. Frackman, Milwaukee branch manager; L. W. Marriott, Indianapolis branch manager; Robert F. Withers, Kansas City franchise holder; E. J. Tilton and H. M. Warren, Des Moines and Omaha franchise holders; Carl Reese, Omaha branch manager; Nat Steinberg and Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis franchise holders; Sam Seplowin, Detroit branch manager; Gilbert Nathanson, Minneapolis franchise holder.

Donald Barry will be Republic's new western star. He will be starred in a series of six outdoor action films. The studio is seeking a player for the serial, "The Red Rider", from the comic strip.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The House of Seven Gables

(Universal)

Classic

Based on the novel by Nathaniel Hawthorne, "The House of Seven Gables" relates the story of the curse upon a family occupying the gloomy old home in a New England town from 1828 to 1848.

The curse is finally evaded, but only after the house has been left by the two couples remaining. As the owner of the home, who waits 20 years for the man she loves, wrongfully imprisoned, is Margaret Lindsay. Her sweetheart is portrayed by Vincent Price, recently in "Tower of London."

The other couple is portrayed by Nan Grey and Dick Foran, while George Sanders is seen as one of the descendants of the family owning the house. The screen play was written by Lester Cole, whose latest, in collaboration, was "The Invisible Man Returns." That film also had Joe May director.

Burt Kelly was associate producer, as he was on "The Big Guy" and "Two Bright Boys."

Release date: To be determined.

The Ghost Comes Home

(Formerly called "Hooray, I'm Alive")

(MGM)

The Worm Turns

Frank Morgan here is seen as the small town owner of a pet store, bullied by his fellow citizens and henpecked by his wife, who finally turns into the town's favorite son.

His wife is portrayed by Billie Burke, as a hen-pecking rather than fluttery female; while Ann Rutherford, playing her first romantic lead, appears as their daughter. Opposite her plays John Shelton, last seen in "I Take This Woman." Reginald Owen is seen as a bull-fiddle player in an orchestra, with the cast including Nat Pendleton, Frank Albertson, Hobart Cavanaugh and Tom Rutherford.

Directing was William Thiele, who recently did "Bad Little Angel," with Albert Levoy producing.

Release date: To be determined.

Men without Souls

(Columbia)

Prison Melodrama

John Litel, Barton MacLane and Rochelle Hudson have the leading roles in this story, with Mr. Litel cast as a parson who believes that most criminals can be rehabilitated if their problems are understood, and who is appointed chaplain of a penitentiary noted for brutality.

An original story by Harvey Gates, the screen play was written by Robert Andrews and Joseph Carole. Andrews wrote the screen play of "Mutiny in the Big House," Carole of "Convicted Woman." Nick Grinde directed, as he did "Convicted Woman" and "Scandal Sheet."

Release date: To be determined.

Three Cheers for the Irish

(Warners-First National)

A Brogue and a Badge

Herewith a story about a retired policeman, whose Irish heart is practically broken when he has to turn his badge over to a rookie—and a Scotsman at that. To make matters worse, the rookie elopes with one of his three daughters.

Elected he is, and forgive he does, as twins result from the union of his daughter and the Scotsman. Thomas Mitchell is the protagonist in the case, Priscilla Lane, Virginia Gray and Irene Hervey his daughters, Dennis Morgan the Scotsman. Rounding out the cast are Frank Jenks, Alan Hale, William Lundigan and Henry Armetta.

Samuel Bischoff, in sixth place in the Grand Rating of champion producers from 1931 to 1939 in the Quigley Publications annual polls, acted here as associate producer on the Hal Wallis side of the studio. Lloyd Bacon directed from an original screen play by Richard Macauley and Jerry Wald.

Release date: March 16, 1940.

The Cheyenne Kid

(Monogram)

Western

Complications arising from the sale of some steers, and a gambling debt, are the concern of "The Cheyenne Kid," which has Jack Randall in the title role, supported by Louise Stanley, Kenneth Duncan, George Chesebro, Frank Yaconelli, Reed Howes, Charles King and Forrest Taylor.

The picture was produced by Harry Webb, with Raymond K. Johnson directing, as he did on "Special Agent K-7." The original screen play was written by Tom Gibson, who contributed, in collaboration, to the treatment of "Wild Bill Hickok."

Release date: Feb. 24, 1940.

TAXES UP IN KENTUCKY, SOUGHT IN TWO STATES

Chain Store Levy Proposed in Mississippi, Special Assessment in New Mexico

The passage by the Kentucky legislature of a bill reviving an occupational tax on theatres and certain other forms of business throughout the state, the introduction of a chain store tax bill in the Mississippi legislature which would impose a heavy license fee plus a gross receipts levy and turn receipts over to old age assistance expenditures and the possibility that New Mexico will put an assessment tax on films leased to exhibitors in the state were developments of the week along the legislative front.

The Kentucky bill calls for an annual assessment of 20 cents a seat in every theatre in the state. Similar legislation was passed two years ago but was shelved later when it was found that the expense of collecting the tax was exceeding the tax collected.

Another Kentucky Bill

Another bill has been introduced in the Kentucky legislature to levy a tax of 15 per cent on all cash awards given by motion picture houses, or any other places of amusement. Pink G. Curd, author of the bill, said that since Bank Night was made legal by the last legislature, "we might as well get some revenue out of it." The bill mentions cash awards only.

The Mississippi bill introduced by State Senator Evon Ford of Taylorsville combines, he says, the best parts of the Louisiana and Florida chain tax bills, both upheld by the United States supreme court.

The bill provides for a graduated license tax based on the number of operating units of a company, regardless of location. Thus, an operating company with 20 units in the United States but ony one store or theatre in Mississippi, would nevertheless come under the provisions of the proposal.

The levy would be $30 per unit on chains having up to 20 establishments; $100 per store on chains of 20 to 40; $250 per unit on 50 to 100; $500 on 100 to 250; $800 on chains of 250 to 500 units and $1,000 on each unit in chains of more than 500 stores or theatres.

The tax on gross receipts would be one-half of one per cent on the first class, one per cent on the second, two per cent on the third, and then increases one-half of one per cent with each class. Taxes would be computed on gross receipts in the state.

The New Mexico assessment would be against the distributor not the theatre, according to G. S. Carter, state sales tax director, who recently returned to Santa Fe from Hollywood conferences.

A committee of the Moline, Ill., city council and theatre owners plan to confer on an increase of license fees for the four Moline theatres from the present flat fee of $50 to a sliding scale. Alderman Harry Roman, sponsor of the ordinances and chairman of the committee, proposed a $150 fee for theatres with 500 seats or less, and that the scale be increased at a rate of 20 cents per year on the additional capacity.

The Virginia Senate has passed a bill for the regulation of billboard advertising with a companion bill now being in committee in the House of Delegates. The bill is to increase taxes on all forms of outdoor advertising and compel the advertiser to remove boards 30 days after the attraction has played.

Chicago received $197,500 in license fees last year from 312 theares, with 327,910 seats, according to the report of Louis Rixmann, collector. This was approximately the same amount as received in 1938.

The Florida supreme court has ruled against the Tampa Theatre Building, Inc., in its effort to reduce the assessed valuation of a combined theatre and office building by about $200,000.

New York Bills

The New York Assembly Monday unanimously passed the theatre ticket broker measure sponsored by Assemblyman MacNeil Mitchell which retricts the sale of theatre tickets to 75 cents above originally printed price. The measure, which now goes to the Senate, also transfers licensing authority over ticket brokers from the Secretary of State to the License Commissioner of New York City and mayors elsewhere.

Assemblyman Max Turshen on Tuesday introduced a concurrent resolution proposing an amendment to Section 9, Article 1 of the state constitution, to empower the legislature to authorize and allow the operation of Bingo under religious and charitable auspices. If carried by the legislature the resolution will be put to the people for a vote on election day.

This is the first resolution introduced in the legislature seeking to legalize Bingo but three Bingo bills, one of which Mr. Turshen introduced, have been submitted in this session. The others were introduced by Assemblyman Aaron F. Goldstein and Senator John T. McCall.

Other Legislation

Changes have become effective in Wisconsin's unemployment compensation law which provide, among other things, for a reduction from three to two weeks in the waiting period before the unemployed become eligible for benefit payments.

The Wisconsin Industrial Commission, disturbed because many school children, who are minors, are requesting permits for appearances in amateur shows and talent nights staged at film theatres, has invited school principals to pass on permit applications.

In San Francisco, an ordinance is before the board of supervisors which would put new theatres of more than 300 seats in the Class A construction group as a safety measure. The old ordinance permits frame theatres of fewer than 400 seats outside the fire limits.

Film carriers in Illinois will register under the new state motor law which goes into effect shortly. The law provides full insurance protection for all departments.

Police authorities in Columbus, Ohio, are planning to introduce an ordinance in the city council prohibiting theatres from admitting children during school hours and those under 14 at late shows unless accompanied by parents or guardians.

Repeal of the Nashville Sunday film law is being sought in the city council by Councilman Charles Riley. The ordinance permitting Sunday films was passed a year ago next Wednesday after a bitter fight in the council.

A bill has been introduced in the Rhode Island legislature by Representative John R. Cioci which would permit Sunday legitimate performances in Providence, Woonsocket, Burrillville, West Warwick, Central Falls, Cranston, Pawtucket and Newport, if such shows are approved by local licensing authorities.

Roosevelt in East

James Roosevelt, head of Globe Productions, is scheduled to visit Baltimore, Washington, and Philadelphia exhibitors on February 23rd and 24th, as part of his announced policy of gaining market information at its source.

Outlaw Bingo in Delaware Ruling

The Delaware attorney general from his office at Wilmington has handed down a ruling outlawing Bingo as a lottery in the state corresponding to the sale of lottery tickets. As a result of the ruling, churches, welfare organizations and numerous other groups in the state, which rely on the proceeds of games for a source of income, may be forced to seek new fields.

While Andrew J. Kavanaugh, superintendent of the Department of Public Safety at Wilmington, declined to comment on whether there would be any police drive to break up the game, police have already warned operators of the illegality of the practice.

Seek Milwaukee Rehearing

Operators of the Bahn Frei Hall in Milwaukee, restrained by Charles W. Trampe, head of Film Service, Inc., from renting the hall for Bingo, are seeking a rehearing on the recent Wisconsin supreme court ruling that Bingo is a lottery.

Norris E. Maloney, district attorney of Madison, so far is the only district attorney in the state to advise Bingo operators he will prosecute as a result of the state's high court ruling. Because of the warning, church and fraternal organizations in Madison have discontinued the game.

Screen Quiz has been ruled a lottery by Barnet Hodes, corporation counsel of Chicago.

The Tennessee court of appeals has affirmed the decision of the circuit court of Davidson County in a Bank Night suit involving $280 in which a verdict for the defendant, Crescent Amusement Company, had been given.

In Mobile, Ala., Ricardo Montiel, manager of the Saenger theatre, largest house in the city, has been indicted by the county grand jury on a lottery charge in connection with the operation of Bank Night. Mr. Montiel was listed with 12 other persons on lottery charges.

The diocesan convention in Detroit last week of the Protestant Episcopal Church resulted in a ban on all games of chance in any form at churches of that denomination. The ruling was issued by the Bishop of Michigan, Frank W. Creighton, and applies to Bingo parties particularly.

Denver Giveaway Spurt

Giveaways are again warming up in Denver. The Orpheum is entering the field after remaining out ever since RKO took back the house after it had gone through receivership.

Fox Denver houses are revamping their weekly Ford giveaway and cash offering. In the future the Fords will be offered only to the first number drawn, and if not won will be carried over until three are offered, when one will be given, no matter how many numbers will have to be drawn. The others will be carried again if not claimed on the first number.

The Fox Denver houses are continuing their offer to double any offering made by the Pot o' Gold program, the only stipulations being that the party called must be a Coloradan and be in a Fox Denver theatre. Fox houses outside Denver but in the Intermountain area are offering to match the Pot o' Gold offering but limit the amount to $1,500 a week.

Another Newsreel Theatre

The Circle theatre, in downtown San Francisco, has been converted into a newsreel house, under the name of the New Circle Newsreel theatre, showing a one-hour program of shorts and newsreel subjects. The program is changed once a week. It is the city's second newsreel theatre, the Telenews having opened last September.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Conversation Piece

Sam Zimbalist, producer of such diverse and successful screen fare as "The Crowd Roars" and "Lady of the Tropics," each a monthly box office champion in the Quigley Publications polls, took time out one afternoon last week and discussed the province of stories and characterization, the marquee-import of each. It started, naturally enough, with Mr. Zimbalist's latest, "Boom Town." Work's to start soon.

"Yes, in fact a sort of 'Cavalcade' of oil," he said. "With Gable. We'll get Tracy too, if we can work out the schedule. It takes two men—roughnecks in the old fields, builds them up to oil titans. Background? Mostly Texas. An original story, by James Edward Grant, with Jack Conway to direct. Screen play by John Lee Mahin, you know, 'Too Hot to Handle,' 'Last Gangster,' collaborated on 'Captains Courageous.'

People, Not History

"Only as far as 1918, not back to the beginnings of oil—it's no history. It's the people that count, the oil, or whatever a background may be, is secondary. In 'Gone With the Wind,' for instance, it's Scarlett, Rhett, Ashley, meaning Leigh, Gable, Howard, not the Civil War. Here it's an adventurer, in the business of making money, like many another we know, for the thrill and excitement, rather than the additional sums he may add to what he's already accumulated. The other character is set, stolid, the girl he loves married to the first. Only after she's married to him does she realize that she's fastened herself to a comet that'll drag her through everything, for better or worse."

The tempo speeded up, with quietly insistent telephonic biddings to witness a new series of screen tests in one of the projection rooms of the stately Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer administration building. "It's the 'B' pictures that are plotty — successful pictures have no plots, they have great characters instead. Audiences are too familiar with plots, they know them all too well. It's characters that count."

Character and Maturity

Came to mind, in interchange of opinion, the possibility that emphasis on character could be indicative of screen maturity, a maturity attained in a far shorter span than that taken by other forms of expression. That could be translated into terms of Dostoievski and "The Brothers Karamazov." Like the other forms, the screen started the same way, relating a narrative. Edwin S. Porter's "Great Train Robbery" was the photographing of an incident, not character delineation.

"Of course, and add Tolstoy. Think, too, of the characters like 'Zola.' Then there was the piece of business in George Hill's 'Tell It to the Marines,' where he had Billy Haines go through the process of squeezing a blackhead as he caught his reflection in a washroom mirror while on a train. It fitted perfectly with the characterization of a callow youngster — and was completely real. Those are the valuable pieces of business, because most intimate, most immediately recognizable.

"Or take Bob Taylor, and one of his most successful pictures, 'The Crowd Roars.' As a prizefighter, he moved situations around. They didn't move him around."

PRODUCTION HOLDS A LEVEL KEEL

While finishing only four pictures this week, compared to last week's six, Hollywood's studios started ten, compared to the six of the preceding seven days, had 34 shooting against the 27 of last week, and 16 being prepared, the same number as in the prior period. Being edited were 66, four more than last week.

Twentieth Century-Fox completed work on "I Was an Adventuress" and "Viva Cisco Kid." Warner Brothers finished "Saturday's Children," and Republic wound up "Pioneers of the West."

Started were "And One Was Beautiful" and "The Mortal Storm," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Midnight Limited," Monogram; "The Ghost Breakers," Paramount; "The Saint Takes Over," RKO Radio; "Rancho Grande," Republic; "Sandy Is a Lady," Universal, and "All This and Heaven Too," "An Angel from Texas," and "Torrid Zone," Warners.

MGM had six shooting: "40 Little Mothers, "Two Girls on Broadway," "Edison, the Man," "Waterloo Bridge," "Pride and Prejudice," and an as yet untitled "Dr. Kildare" picture. Following closely was Twentieth-Fox, with five: "Sailor's Lady," "Earthbound," "Star Dust," "Lillian Russell" and "Charlie Chan's Cruise." Columbia had "The Doctor Takes a Wife;" Paramount, "Destiny;" Principal Productions, for United Artists release, "Our Town;" RKO, "My Favorite Wife," "Curtain Call" and "The Romantic Mr. Hinklin;" Republic, "Forgotten Girl" and "Dark Command;" Universal, "It's a Date," "Alias the Deacon" and "Ma! He's Making Eyes at Me," and Warners, "Sea Hawk" and " 'Til We Meet Again."

10 FILMS, 20 PLAYERS ARE NAMED IN FINAL ACADEMY NOMINATIONS

Results of Balloting of 12,000 Members Will Be Announced at Banquet on February 29th; Research Council Expands

Final nominations for the awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were made this week. Ballots have been sent to the 12,000 members and the winners will be announced at the annual banquet February 29th in Hollywood.

Ten films have been nominated for the "best-picture" award and five persons have been named in each of the other classifications: performance by actor, actress, supporting actor, actress, direction, screenplay and original film story.

The actors and actresses nominated for the best performance awards and their rank in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame poll of box office money makers are as follows: Robert Donat (No. 3 in the British poll); Clark Gable (No. 4); Laurence Olivier (in Group III); Mickey Rooney (No. 1); James Stewart (in Group I); Bette Davis (No. 6); Irene Dunne (No. 14); Great Garbo (in Group III); Greer Garson (in Group III) and Vivien Leigh (in Group II of the British poll). The motion picture year Sept. 1, 1938, to Sept. 1, 1939, was covered in the HERALD-Fame study.

The Nominees

The pictures and persons nominated by the Academy are:

Best Picture—"Dark Victory" "Gone With the Wind," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Love Affair," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Ninotchka," "Of Mice and Men," "Stagecoach," "Wizard of Oz," "Wuthering Heights."

The winner of the best picture award in 1938 was "You Can't Take It With You" (Columbia); the 1937 winner was "The Life of Emile Zola" (Warner Brothers).

Best Performance by Actor—Robert Donat in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips"; Clark Gable, "Gone With the Wind"; Laurence Olivier, "Wuthering Heights"; Mickey Rooney, "Babes in Arms"; James Stewart, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

The 1938 Academy actor award went to Spencer Tracy for his role in "Boys Town" and in 1937 he won for "Captains Courageous."

Best Performance by Actress—Bette Davis in "Dark Victory"; Irene Dunne, "Love Affair"; Greta Garbo, "Ninotchka"; Greer Garson, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips"; Vivien Leigh, "Gone With the Wind."

Bette Davis won in 1938 for "Jezebel" and Luise Rainer took the top honors in 1937 for her part in "The Good Earth."

Best Performance by an Actor in Supporting Role—Brian Aherne in "Juarez"; Harry Carey, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"; Brian Donlevy, "Beau Geste"; Thomas Mitchell, "Stagecoach"; Claude Rains, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Last year the Academy award for the best supporting actor went to Walter Brennan for his work in "Kentucky" and in 1937 the honor went to Joseph Schildkraut for "The Life of Emile Zola."

Best Performance by an Actress in Supporting Role—Olivia De Havilland in "Gone With the Wind"; Geraldine Fitzgerald, "Wuthering Heights"; Hattie McDaniel, "Gone With the Wind"; Edna May Oliver, "Drums Along the Mohawk"; Marie Ouspenskaya, "Love Affair."

The 1938 award was won by Fay Bainter for "Jezebel" and the 1937 by Alice Brady for "In Old Chicago."

Best Direction—Victor Fleming for "Gone With the Wind"; Sam Wood, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips"; Frank Capra, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"; John Ford, "Stagecoach"; William Wyler, "Wuthering Heights."

Frank Capra won last year with "You Can't Take It With You" and in 1937 Leo McCarey took the award for his direction of "The Awful Truth."

Best Written Screenplay—The late Sidney Howard for "Gone With the Wind"; R. C. Sheriff, Claudine West and Eric Maschwitz for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips"; Sidney Buchman for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"; Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder and Walter Reisch for "Ninotchka"; Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht for "Wuthering Heights."

In 1938 the screenplay award went to George Bernard Shaw for dialogue and screen play on "Pygmalion." Two years ago by Norman Reilly Raine, Heinz Herald and Geza Herczeg for "The Life of Emile Zola."

Best Original Film Story—Felix Jackson for "Bachelor Mother"; Mildred Cram and Leo McCarey for "Love Affair"; Lewis R. Foster for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington"; Melchior Lengyel for "Ninotchka"; Lamar Trotti for "Young Mr. Lincoln."

Last year the honors went to Dore Schary and Eleanore Griffin for "Boys Town" and two years ago William A. Wellman and Robert Carson for "A Star Is Born."

Rooney Among Adults Now

Mickey Rooney was nominated this year in the actors group for the first time. Last year he and Deanna Durbin were given miniature trophies as outstanding child players. A colored player was nominated for the first time. Hattie McDaniel was picked for her supporting role in "Gone With the Wind."

Of the ten pictures nominated by Academy members for best production honors three were Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films; one each from Warner Brothers, Selznick-International, Columbia, Hal Roach, Walter Wanger, RKO, and Samuel Goldwyn. Six of the ten players nominated for best actor or actress awards appeared in pictures released by MGM; one each in Goldwyn, Columbia, Warner Brothers and RKO films.

Last week the Newspaper Film Critics of America made their nominations (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Feb. 10. p. 56). The critics did not include pictures not generally released in 1939 so "Gone With the Wind" and "Of Mice and Men," both named by the Academy, were not listed by the critics. The eight other pictures named by the Academy are on the critics list.

Walter Wanger, Academy president, named last week the committee which will select the winner of the special effects award. The committee is composed of the following: Farciot Edouart, Paramount Studio, chairman; Fred Albin, Lionel Banks, James Basevi, John Cosgrove, John Fulton, Arnold Gillespie, Byron Haskin, Bernard Herzburn, Kenneth Lambert, Harry Leonard, Louis Mesenkop, Jack Otterson, Elmer Raguse, Roy Seawright, Fred Sersen, Hal Shaw, James Stewart, S. J. Twining and Vernon Walker.

Nominations for the color short subjects, music, song and sound recording Academy awards have already been published.

LOEW'S, WHN ON TALENT QUEST

James J. Walker, ex-Mayor of the City of New York, this week accepted the invitation of Loew's Inc., and station WHN, to preside over a new radio program to be known as "Jimmy Walker's Opportunity Hour." The initial presentation of the program will originate from the stage of Loew's State theatre, New York City, February 26th. It will be given weekly thereafter from nine to ten p.m.

Mr. Walker, in accepting the invitation, said: "New York, which really means the metropolitan district with its more than eleven million population, has the largest entertainment seeking audience in the world yet its lamentable quota of representatives in this field would make it appear like a thriving hamlet of about two thousand honest deserving souls. That figure never did set right in my mind . . . if it is for a lack of opportunity I am going to find out."

John Ford and Frank Capra were named the favorite directors of the 40 students of the film course conducted at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. Alfred Hitchcock and Rene Clair were listed as the next choice.

Research Council Expanded

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been expanded to include the investigation of problems in laboratory processing, photography, cine technology, sound recording and optics.

Darryl F. Zanuck, Council chairman, named chairmen for each of the fields, as follows: John Nickolaus, laboratory; John Arnold, photography; Grover Laube, cine-technical; Loren Ryder, sound, and B. F. Miller, optical.

Nathan Levinson, Warners, was re-elected vice-chairman of the Council, and the finance committee included Mr. Zanuck, chairman; Mr. Levinson, John Aalberg, RKO; E. H. Hansen, 20th Century-Fox.

Rifkins Get Five Houses

Liberty Theatres Corporation, Boston, headed by Herman Rifkin, former Republic franchise holder, and his son, Julian Rifkin, has acquired five theatres from the Winchester Amusement Company. The theatres, located in Springfield, Mass., are the Phillips, Strand, Liberty, Jefferson and Garden. The Rifkin interests also include the Suffolk and Majestic theatres in Holyoke and the Academy in Northampton.

Long "Harvest" Run

"Harvest," French film, will set a record for length of run at the World theatre, New York, when it completes 21 weeks on February 25th. It will be followed by "The Baker's Wife" for an indefinite engagement. The previous record is held by "Mayerling," which ran 20 weeks, after 26 weeks at the Filmarte, New York.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A local doctor attended a performance the other evening at W. Varick Nevins' theatre in Alfred, New York, and neglected to tell the box office cashier where he might be located within. An emergency call arrived for the Doc along about midway of the show, and after attendants failed to locate him, the lights were turned on and Mr. Nevins announced that Dr. Hitchcock was wanted out front. The Doctor did not appear, although he was definitely known to be in the house. Meanwhile the audience had started to laugh as though the whole thing was a joke, and finally Exhibitor Nevins recognized the Doc in his auditorium seat, grinning broadly. After a great deal of persuasion he was made to realize that he was really wanted for a quick operation, but before leaving, Mr. Nevins, stumped at all the laughter, asked him the reason for the hilarity. Seems that, unknown to Mr. Nevins, the house lights had been turned on and his announcement made just after the screening of an advance trailer for "The Secret of Doctor Kildare," at the end of which a siren blows and a narrator intones, "Calling Doctor Kildare, calling Doctor Kildare."

Twentieth Century-Fox Studio, at Movietone City, Cal., has an employees' loan agency, to keep borrowers away from such gentry as "loan-sharks." Last year, the studio's Employees' Credit Union loaned $527,895; it has loaned $2,185,349 in its six years.

To discourage entanglements with loan-sharks and personal-loan companies, some home offices in New York discharge employees whose wages are garnisheed for personal loans unpaid either by themselves or others for whom they have signed as co-makers. New York legislators are trying to have legislation passed which would make it a misdemeanor for an employer to discharge an employee because a garnishee order has been obtained against the worker's wages.

Radio's Lanny Ross, on Thursday afternoon, had as guests on his Columbia Broadcasting program one of the very few groups of entertainers guesting on his daytime program. The unit comprised a chorus of 28 voices. They sang impressively, "None But the Lonely Heart." Listeners probably did not know that all were blind.

By way of recognizing this leap year, Russell Birdwell, press agent for Producer Wesley (Columbia Pictures) Ruggles, will invite the wives, sisters, mothers and girl friends of Hollywood's male critics and columnists to preview and pass judgment on "Too Many Husbands." Not a single male film critic will be allowed within hailing distance of the showing. The ticket seller and ticket taker will be women. The usual out-front line of policemen will be supplanted by policewomen from the Los Angeles force. Search is now on for a feminine projectionist to run the machines. Anything for attention.

Anent Orson Welles'—Orson Welles of radio and films—comparatively recent radio drama depicting an imaginary invasion of the earth by Martians, which so frightened credulous New Yorkers that thousands of them fled from their homes, researchers of the Federal Writers' Project of New York now find that this incident seems to be proof that human nature changes little. They base their conclusion on a panic of similar proportions that swept the city more than 100 years ago when a gentleman named Miller announced loudly that the world was coming to an end.

This prophet delivered himself of this startling prediction early in 1832. The date he set for the extinction of the world was April 23, 1832. No hour was given, however.

Hundreds of good citizens made haste at once to put their accounts in order and otherwise prepare for the end. Evidently there was not the slightest doubt in their minds that on the dread day, as predicted by Mr. Miller, hurricanes would sweep down from the north, fire would rain from the sky and New York would vanish like a puff of smoke.

Many merchants gave their stocks away to anyone who would take them. There is no record of the number of unbelievers who profited from these offers, but there is evidence that not all merchants lost their wits during the crisis. Some Bowery dry-goods store owners were canny fellows who could smell a trade boom a mile off, and so they placed large placards in their shop-windows offering "WHITE MUSLIN FOR ASCENSION ROBES," and did a rushing business.

On the night of April 23rd, frightened citizens gathered in halls and churches and waited anxiously. The end, however, did not come and the next morning they went home to catch up on lost sleep.

The prophet was not dismayed by his failure. He informed the city that he had miscalculated the day by some two months, an error which he tried to explain.

J. A. Tanney's expert deciphers of cryptics and translators of strange writings from the inland countries of these United States, have emerged, triumphant, with the answer to the following direct-mail order:

"This person," concluded Mr. Tanney's translators, "evidently wants slide tape for stereopticon slides, but, on the other hand, he may be fixing to enter a contract with some one, and for that reason wants 'sly' paper."

On the day, the other day, when Samuel Goldwyn announced that he would not distribute his new "Westerner" through another company, but would send it through United Artists, all court arguments with that company notwithstanding, United Artists announced to the press that "The Westerner" will feature a song, "Come Home, Father."

Mr. Arthur Baer, reminiscing a bit on the growth of the cinema, gives due recognition to the modern standardization and stabilization of the great industry that grew from little nickels, recalls, particularly, the haphazardness of the makeshift nickelodeons of the days of Harry Davis, when "showmen" took over stores, painted windows black, hung bedsheets for "silver-screens," and ran a projector from howdy in the morning to s'long at night. The only interruptions were recesses of five minutes while the operator fanned the machine with his derby.

The seats were camp chairs catered by the local undertaker, Baer remembers. He says they were barometers of vital statistics. Quite often the undertaker came in and removed 15 or 20 chairs. If he looked happy, one knew they were for a wake. If he looked glum, they were for a wedding.

The seats were not fastened to the floor, but were arranged loosely on both sides of the main and only aisle that ran from the projector to the silver bed sheet. The result was the picture was blotted out by every arrival.

The fact that the chairs were movable resulted in a lot of shuffling and intramural emigration. If a fellow saw a pretty girl on the other side of the aisle he would slide his chair alongside her. By and by the aisle would be wandering around the nickelodeon like a cowpath in the hill country.

Hollywood actors, actresses, extras, how are your heels?

The Screen Actors Guild carries word from the studios to its membership that production heads have ordered all persons who work on sound stages to replace all leather heels with noiseless rubber ones, because the "clackety-clack" of leather heels is picked up by a sound track recording from an almost unbelievable distance.

Correspondent E. H. Mayer, in Cincinnati, describes "the boss" as one who has practically nothing to do—that is, nothing to do except: to decide what is to be done; tell somebody to do it; listen to reasons why it should not be done, or why it should be done by somebody else, or why it should be done in a different way; follow up to see if the thing has been done; inquire why it has not been done; follow up a second time to discover that it has been done, but done incorrectly; conclude that as long as it has been done, it may as well be left as it is; consider how much simpler and better it would have been if he had done it himself in the first place, but to realize that such an idea would strike at the very foundation of the belief of all employees that the boss has nothing to do.

Northwest Passage

Adventure, Historical

Spencer Tracy, Number Three in the Quigley Publications' box office poll and virtually habitual winner of Academy honors, might well have been toiling through all his many previous pictures in patient waiting for this one, so appropriate is it to his talent, personality and manner. This one presents him as the ruggedly heroic Major Rogers of Rogers' Rangers, a courageous fighter on the side of Britain's American Colonials in the French and Indian wars, circa 1759. He was never more at home than in the leather shirt and the high melodrama of this picture, a vast, deep and thrillingly filmed narrative sure to go down as among the year's outstanding films. It is, an extensively experienced preview audience seemed to agree, approximately the best adventure picture produced.

Mr. Tracy's spectacular performance profits from several strikingly congenial circumstances. For one, itself a production guarantee, the film was produced by Hunt Stromberg. For another, it was directed by the seasoned and sure King Vidor. It is beneficiary of some outstanding script writing by Laurence Stallings and Talbot Jennings, and it springs from the tremendously successful book by Kenneth Roberts. Distinctly on the profit side, too, is a stunning use of Technicolor, so effectively applied here as to make the proscenium seem a paneless window looking out upon the vast stretches of river, mountain and plain which make up the expansive setting. It prospers, also, from fine supporting performances by Robert Young and Walter Brennan, plus excellent support from all members of the large cast.

Author Roberts' novel, dealt with here only to the extent of Book One, which leaves Book Two available as a suggested follow-up to the present picture, is a record of stirring deeds achieved by strong men. Major Rogers and his valiant Rangers, less than 200 in number, are sent into the enemy country to destroy the Abenaki Indians, murderous allies of the French. The dangerous journey to the Indian village of St. Francis, by stream, portage and over barren terrain, is negotiated doggedly in the face of treachery, natural disaster and daily peril. The Indian village is attacked, the Indians killed, their buildings burned, and then begins the tortuous retreat, marked by prolonged hardship and imminent starvation, less than one-third of the company surviving to set off again, perhaps in Book Two, in quest of a northwest passage.

The expedition occupies more than 90% of the footage and all of this is powerful material. It supplies audience entertainment of the highest order, straight, manifestly authentic melodrama rich in honest thrill and utterly free of artificiality. Dialogue, like action, is straight stuff, lusty and colorful when it should be, interspersed with long, effective silences more eloquent than words. Impressive for its frequent complete silences, too, is the tactful music score by Herbert Stothart.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal., to a press and professional audience which the picture captivated completely.—William R. Weaver.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Producer, Hunt Stromberg. Directed by King Vidor. Screen play by Laurence Stallings and Talbot Jennings. Book by Kenneth Roberts. Young Tom Edison

(M-G-M)

Biography

Your editor, Terry Ramsaye, friend of the late Thomas A. Edison and lifelong student of his works, told you the essential news about this picture last week on the editorial page. Referring directly to the picture he wrote, "All of the narration is in episodes gleaned from research, but in the gleaning and making worn round and smooth by the processes of tradition and euphemisms of cinema until they are symbols—but all symbols of homespun humanity, blunt father, tender mother, tinkering problem child, small town scorn and small town pride." The sentence is quoted here both as more accurately and completely descriptive than any this typewriter seems to have in it and so that those of you who file these reviews will have it at your fingers' end when you look for it.

Mr. Ramsaye saw "Young Tom Edison" in a projection room, in company with other intimates of the inventor. Your present correspondent saw it in a Hollywood theatre, in company with some 900 other run-o'-mill reporters, studio attaches and paying guests, and they all liked it. They liked it in terms of hearty laughter, tense excitement, hushed sympathy for the misunderstood boy on the screen and, finally, spontaneous and sustained applause. It must be good.

The editor has indicated that some of the story incidents which make up the picture are from the inventor's "oft told boyhood reminiscences," which seems to dispose of the matter of authenticity. Your aisle-seat observer adds that it would make no difference, judging by what he saw and heard of audience reaction, whether the incidents were factual or imaginary. The young man in the picture wouldn't even need to be Tom Edison, a condition which a screen preface takes note of, to hold the customers in the palm of his hand. He wouldn't even need to be Mickey Rooney, but he is, and that helps in a number of ways, including the marquee.

This Mickey Rooney isn't the one you're accustomed to. He isn't Andy Hardy and he isn't himself. He is an extremely competent young actor, never merely the Number One box office star of 1939, submerging his personality in a characterization and making it stand alone. He is more like the Rooney of "Boystown" than any of the others, but a far more able performer than he.

Master Rooney has outstanding support, on screen and off. His mother is played by Fay Bainter and his father by George Bancroft, his sister by Virginia Weidler, all admirably. His picture is the work of John W. Considine, Jr., who produced the sensationally successful "Boystown," with Orville O. Dull associate producer and the skilled Norman Taurog directing. The screen play is a composition signed by Bradbury Foote, Dore Schary and Hugo Butler, based on material amassed by H. Alan Dunn. Many names, much credit, enough for all.

"Young Tom Edison" is a picture for all of the people in all of the places.

The Farmer's Daughter

(Paramount)

Humor in Show Business

Producer William C. Thomas and his merry aides supply herein a gay and healthfully laughable comedy dealing freshly and knowingly with that most amusing of subjects, when properly approached, show business. No topic was ever more fertile in good hands, nor more forlorn in bad, and this treatment of it is tops.

Specifically concerned in the Lewis R. Foster screen play based on the Delmar Daves story is the production of a musical comedy in a rented barn somewhere upstate from New York City, and adventure in what has become popularly known as the "straw hat theatre." Directed with light touch by James Hogan, the tale is told for laughs all the way, and they are good laughs, deriving from good situations, from able characterizations, and from gags developed, by well timed stages, from first degree laughter starting at the waistline to second and third degree laughter cerebrally sponsored. Everything from satire to slapstick is called up to keep the humor pot boiling, and it never is allowed to cool.

Particularly responsible for the success of the film, on the acting side, is Charlie Ruggles,

British Intelligence

(Warner Brothers)

Spy Melodrama

The spy play of ancient vintage, "Three Faces East," from the pen of Anthony Paul Kelly, which has been moulded into screen features at least twice before, once by Cecil B. DeMille in 1925, and again in 1930 under the sponsorship of Warner Brothers with Erich von Stroheim and Constance Bennett, now has Boris Karloff and Margaret Lindsay starring.

The rejuvenation is effected in fast paced melodramatics, though a bit confusing as to the relative national positions of the principal agents.

Although timed in the First World War, dialogue has been pointed up to indicate the successive martial situation of today. The final reel features a London air bombing and interspersed throughout the running length are newsreel excerpts of war front activity. In one sequence a clumsy young subaltern is shown being lectured by his German superior and told that his kind will be the ruin of Germany. Make-up and dialogue indicate that the comic character is a housepainter by the name of Adolf.

Seen at the Globe in New York City, where an almost capacity holiday audience seemed to be fascinated by the spy antics and outspoken with "Bronx Cheers" during German sequences.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Director, Terry Morse. Screen play, Lee Katz. Based on the play by Anthony Paul Kelly. Cameraman, Sid Hickox. Art director, Hugh Reticker. Calling Philo Vance

(Warner Brothers)

Detective Melodrama

"Philo Vance," the astute amateur detective. swings into the melodramatic spirit of the times by becoming involved in espionage activities. The picture, based on the late S. S. Van Dine's "Kennel Murder Case," which Warners previously had made under that title in 1933, again has dogs play an important part in the solving of a double murder, but the rest of the story has been modernized.

James Stephenson plays the role of "Philo Vance"; in 1933 William Powell was "Philo." Others are Margot Stevenson, Henry O'Neill, Edward Brophy, Ralph Forbes and Donald Douglas. The picture was directed by William Clemens from a screen play by Tom Reed.

The screen play of "Calling Philo Vance" has followed the style of Van Dine, however, in the parading of a number of suspects. Many clues are provided, and audiences may have decided on the culprit along about the time "Philo" does, but their solutions will not be as complete.

There is plenty of action.

The Man from Dakota

(MGM)

Civil War Melodrama

This Wallace Beery vehicle is a strange mixture of Civil War melodrama and that blustering variety of personal comedy in which the star was proficient when the screen was young. All of the events in the picture are melodramatic, but Beery's performance is continuously comic, creating an extraordinary auditorium condition in which an audience witnessing such serious matters as escape from a Confederate prison, flight through swamps, maniacal murder and homicide of more orthodox kind, finally the rescue of Northern troops from Confederate ambush, forgets all about thrilling to the spectacle and laughs like children used to at Sennett comedies.

It's a curiously compounded film, a novel use of war background, effective in the humor department because Beery plays it strictly for laughs, and yet somehow giving off the impression that the war might have been something like this in fact. The thing doesn't analyze, but it seems to entertain.

Beery's chief associates in the strange goings on are John Howard and Dolores Del Rio, both giving straight performances but never obscuring the soberly clowning star. The story is by MacKinlay Kantor, which suggests it may have had comedy aspects to begin with, but the screen play is by Laurence Stallings, not commonly given to light writing. It is an Edward Chodorov production directed by Leslie Fenton, and contains a number of episodes staged in elaborate and technically impressive manner.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., to a mixed audience which laughed heartily and steadily at the Beery performance.

Free, Blonde and 21

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

Settings with a deal of eye-appeal and the comedy of the elastic-jointed Joan Davis constitute the highlights of this second feature in the "Hotel for Women" grouping, filled, as was the first, with highly personable young talent.

The story, such as it is, deals principally with two young women guests of the hotel and those chapters in their lives which bring romance to one, and to the other presumably a jail sentence.

Sol Wurtzel was executive producer, Ricardo Cortez directed and the original screen play was contributed by Francis Hyland.

The work of the cast and producing staff is patently designed for the pseudo-sophisticate fringe which admires a certain pattern of high life.

The Marines Fly High

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Richard Dix and Chester Morris take top honors in "The Marines Fly High" as a sort of a "Flagg" and "Quirt" combination, characterizations in which they evidently pleased the preview audience in Los Angeles. The feminine romantic appeal in the action melodrama is conveyed by Lucille Ball and Steffi Duna.

The locale is an unidentified Central American country which enlists the aid of the United States Marines to organize its militia against foraying bandits led by a chief desirous of overthrowing the government. The story carries the principals through a number of adventures leading to the suppression of the revolt and the death of the rebel leader.

The late George Nicholls, Jr., and Ben Stoloff receive credit for the direction of the screen play of Jerry Cady and Lieutenant Commander A. J. Bolton, who adapted a story by A. C. Edington. Robert Sisk was the producer.

Outside the 3-Mile Limit

(Columbia)

Secret Service Melodrama

"Outside of" the title, "Outside the 3 Mile Limit," another Jack Holt vehicle from Larry Darmour's studios for Columbia release, is a rapidly moving, convincingly told melodrama of a Secret Service agent's search for the traffickers in spurious money emanating from a gambling boat in Southern California waters.

Recent news stories concerning the escapades of Southern California gamblers, aboard barges, make of this an exploitable product. A federal man is killed. The boat puts out to sea and finally, after a mutiny, comes to a South American haven. The gangster chief there, however, is not so "reformed" as the fugitives have been led to expect, which complicates matters.

Holt, long a star of motion pictures, is supported by a nameful cast consisting of Harry Carey, Sig Rumann, Eduardo Ciannelli, Donald Briggs, Irene Ware, Dick Purcell, Ben Weldon, Paul Fix and George Lewis. Lewis D. Collins directed the film with an eye toward emphasis on action. The screen play is by Albert DeMond from a story by Eric Taylor and DeMond.

Horrors of War

(Merit Pictures)

War Documentary

In 1929 United Artists released "She Goes to War," a romantic war story that was memorable for its battle scenes. A few months ago Mitchell Leichter reedited the picture, removed most of the romance and again released the picture under the same title. It was reviewed in Motion Picture Herald, issue of Nov. 25, 1939.

Currently showing at one of New York's smaller Broadway theatres is a Maple Attraction entitled "Horrors of War." A credit sheet given reviewers reads: "The film is a documentary and presents vivid battlefront scenes, uncensored by war or military authorities." The battlefront scenes are for the most part from "She Goes to War," and other productions, but all sequences in which leading players might be recognized have been removed. These battle scenes are sandwiched between stock and newsreel shots of the troopships leaving for France and the playing of the National Anthem at the end of the picture. Occasional off-screen commentary relieves the monotony of the simulation of constant gunfire.

Reviewed at the Central theatre in New York, where the audience was unresponsive.—George Spires.

Produced by Maple Attractions and released by Merit. Running time, 51 minutes. Release date, Feb. 7, 1940. General audience classification.

Parole Fixer

(Paramount)

Melodrama

With constant agitation for reforms of parole systems underway in many states, Paramount's "Payrole Fixer," dealing with a dishonest attorney obtaining paroles by payoffs to a prison board and through misleading influential persons for convicts who return to crime, has a timely showmanship element. It is the second picture to be made from the book of the FBI director, John Edgar Hoover, "Persons in Hiding," and it tells intimately the details of the periodic retraining of his men and their application of science to criminal investigations.

The action-packed screenplay by William Lipman and Horace McCoy, as well as the compendious direction of Robert Florey, makes of this Edward T. Lowe production a picture that had the press-professional audience sitting on the edge of the seat.

The cast consists of William Henry, Virginia Dale, Robert Paige, Gertrude Michael, Richard Denning, Faye Helm, Anthony Quinn, Harvey Stephens, Marjorie Gateson, Charlotte Wynters, Lyle Talbot, and Louise Beavers, among whom Miss Gateson delivered one of the outstanding portrayals of a society woman whose chauffeur, for whom she obtained a parole, kidnaps her daughter.

Finland Fights!

(Yorke - Finnish Relief Fund)

Propaganda Plea

The cause of Finland's struggle against the Russian undeclared war of invasion is espoused in this brief plea extended by the Friends of Finland in behalf of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., and produced under the direction of the Emerson Yorke Studio of New York City.

Paavo Nurmi, famous Finnish runner, speaks in pictures for the first time in defense of his fatherland's welfare. Briefly seen also are the Finnish Minister to the United States, Hjalmar Procope, paying an instalment on Finland's debt to this country, and Jan Sibelius, composer. There are scenes of industrial, agricultural and cultural life of the little country. In conclusion former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., speaks a few words for the humanitarian cause. Prints are available for free showings.—Running time, five minutes.

In the reviews of two British productions, "Middle Watch" and "Traitor Spy," which appeared in the issue of December 30th, the casts were transposed.

March of Time, No. 7

(RKO Radio)

The Vatican of Pius XII

Said to be the "first complete motion picture story of the Vatican that has ever been made," the newest edition from the March of Time pages becomes important material for screening, whatever the patron's church affiliations, the subject is of importance to all interested in the position of the Pontiff of Rome in world peace efforts. Not only is the spiritual significance of St. Peter's portrayed but also the architectural and artistic treasures of the Vatican City and the governmental and industrial aspects of the Papal State. The camerawork is at its best in catching the splendors of the Basilica of St. Peter's, the murals of Michaelangelo in the Sistine Chapel and masterpieces in the Vatican galleries. Visits of inspection are made to the Vatican library, the crypts beneath the Cathedral where the Popes are buried, the Vatican radio station, post office and shops. And of first interest is the presentation of the spirit and presence of Pope Pius XII.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Drums of Fu Manchu

(Republic)

Serial

Based on the Sax Rohmer novel and handled by two directors, William Witney and John English, Republic assigned six writers to adapt the book to the screen and has produced a serial thriller on the exploits of Fu Manchu. Though the cast, which includes Henry Brandon as "Fu Manchu" and William Royle as "Sir Nayland Smith," the detective in pursuit of the Oriental culprit, may not be too well known, the name of "Fu Manchu" offers exploitation suggestions. The story deals with "Sir Nayland" efforts to recover a stolen plaque that will reveal to "Fu Manchu" the secret of a tomb and give him power to dominate the world. The first episode, which was screened in Republic's projection room in New York, gave promise of a fast-paced and exciting serial. The first chapter ran a half hour; the others will be 20 minutes. There are fifteen chapters in all.

Harvest Time

Terry Toon

Paul Terry's latest cartoon in color deals with the insects of the forest. At harvest time, as they are busy gathering food for the winter, a lazy vagabond grasshopper supplies music on his violin. The grasshopper is abused by the workers until at the big party at the completion of the harvest, when the grasshopper rescues the queen of the party from a spider. An interesting seven minute cartoon.

U. S. Treasury

$$$ Galore

Another in the series of "Washington Tours" takes the audience through the United States Treasury. The patron sees how money is actually made, from the first steps in engraving the plates until the final signatures and numbers are printed on the bills. The series also reveals a number of ways counterfeit money can be detected. Old money, in circulation until worn, is brought back to the Treasury which destroys it by cutting it into small pieces and then giving it an acid bath. This series continues to be one of the more interesting and educational short subjects.—Running time, 10 minutes.

FILMS FOR THEATRE, NOT CRITIC: MARY PICKFORD

Preparing to Resume Production, Says She Has No Sympathy for "Art" Films

Mary Pickford, once the first lady of the screen and "America's Sweetheart," is a producer "beyond all else," and a member of the motion picture industry, "beyond all else," she emphasized this week at her Sherry-Netherlands apartment in New York, as she outlined her plans for a "comeback" in producing pictures. Miss Pickford seemed a bit piqued that her acting ability had obscured her producing career, which began in 1914—"though most people do not realize that."

Miss Pickford will make at least two pictures, but "won't make a move" until she has the very best books or plays, she insisted, for when she makes a film it must be "a boxoffice success, not necessarily an artistic success."

Choice of Directors in 1914

Miss Pickford said that she was very proud of the fact that in 1914, in her contract with Adolph Zukor, she had the choice of directors, story, and cast; and that, in 1918, when she signed a contract with First National, her first independent production was "Daddy Long Legs," upon which she had spent her own money.

"I have been a producer ever since," she remarked, and added:

"I'm still of the opinion that I was when I bought 'Daddy Long Legs' and paid the insane and unheard of sum of $40,000, and the awful price for 'Pollyanna' of a $50,000 guarantee against 10 per cent of the gross, that the play is the thing.

"I'm not going to move until I get that, whether it takes six months or a year. I'm in no hurry. I have no overhead nagging me. And I know of many people who would be glad to be with me at any time.

"Of course, I may have to buck the combines in securing some players and technicians, but I would, in that case, rather have my good story, with even unknown players, rather than the opposite."

Miss Pickford has been in New York looking at what she called one of the biggest plays. "And I stand as good a chance as anyone in getting it," she added. It wouldn't be her first production, however, she added, for it may run in New York for at least another year.

May Remake Story

She may take a great story that has been pictured before, and "do it carefully and beautifully," rather "than accept something ordinary."

She cited the success of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," calling it "one of Selznick's biggest successes in the boxoffice." She predicted that James Roosevelt's newly formed Globe Productions probably would score heavily with its first production, "The Bat." The play, she noted, ran 900 performances.

"While I see the possibility that Mayor LaGuardia might build up the East, Hollywood is so thoroughly organized, and you meet so many people of this industry there—the whole town being built around pictures—and those people are such a help to you, that I can't see moving anywhere else. It's taken 25 years, remember, to build up Hollywood."

By Staff Photographer

". . . I may have to buck the combines"

Miss Pickford hasn't decided where to produce, but says it will be "wherever we get the most efficient service." She declared she didn't want any million dollar offices, but wanted the money to be on the screen.

Calls Critics Ahead of Times

Miss Pickford wants to make pictures only for the boxoffice. "When I think of all my silent partners, the exhibitors, I know I have no right to think of the critics of the papers.

"Ours is an art—but also an industry. I never had sympathy for those who wanted to produce 'art' pictures, and ignore the public. These weird ideas that appeal only to a minority—they're not for me. I'd never expect the exhibitor to go on a hunger strike with me."

Miss Pickford noted that whenever she had made a picture that pleased the critics "it was always a boxoffice failure." The critics are "just ahead of their times; what they want today, the public may want five years from now. That's the best I can say for them, out of respect to them."

Miss Pickford is collaborating with Adela Rogers St. John on a story probably to be published before it goes into a picture.

It will be the Pickford Corporation that produces, Miss Pickford said. That is the corporation she formed in 1926. United Artists has the distributing franchise. If, she said, partners are taken in in a financial setup, they will not be included in her corporation. She has enough money for four pictures, she said.

Miss Pickford is turning her outside interests over to her business managers.

British Business 80% of Normal

With the war now in its sixth month, British theatre business is now approaching normal, Zoltan Korda, British film director and brother of Alexander Korda, producer, said in Chicago on the weekend on his way to Hollywood.

Theatres now are doing 80 per cent of normal, he said, while night clubs are booming.

Blackout restrictions have cut down night patronage, while matinee business is greater than ever before, said Mr. Korda, adding that new lighting systems are being developed. Government regulations meanwhile prevent price increases.

Production plans call for 100 to 150 pictures from all the companies, he said. This is about the same number as was produced last season, but the cost of the new productions will be considerably less, Mr. Korda believes. Most pictures probably will be shot on interior sets, he predicted, as war regulations prohibit gatherings out-of-doors.

Actors are forming stock companies, Mr. Korda related, a condition making it more difficult to get suitable casts.

While in Hollywood Mr. Korda plans to get preparations started for "Jungle Boy" which his brother Alexander will produce and which he, Zoltan, may direct. Sabu, Hindu boy star, now in America for personal appearances, will have the title role.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Films

Of eight pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week two were approved for general patronage and six were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Death Goes North," "Special Inspector." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Broadway Melody of 1940," "Convicted Woman," "Manhattan Shakedown," "Murder Is News," "Sidewalks of London," "Typhoon."

RCA Photophone Holds Business Outlook Good

Homer B. Snook, RCA Photophone reproducer sales manager, after a long trip into the South and Mid-West, expressed the opinion in New York this week that the outlook for theatre equipment sales during 1940 is "very good."

Mr. Snook said, "My talks with exhibitors, chain operators and others on the 'firing line' in the motion picture industry lead me to anticipate a volume of equipment business substantially ahead of 1939, which was a good year as far as RCA Photophone is concerned. The brighter outlook is the result of increasing boxoffice receipts and an overall improvement of business conditions throughout the country."

"Road to Glory" Evidence Weighed by District Court

A $1,000,000 plagiarism suit brought against Twentieth Century-Fox by Robert H. Sheets, a soldier stationed at March Field, Cal., is under consideration by Justice James W. Morris after one of the longest hearings in the history of the district court in Washington.

Mr. Sheets claims the authorship of "Road to Glory" and witnesses have testified they either read the manuscript or saw him writing it in 1935. The film company argued that Mr. Sheets' manuscript was not in existence when the production was decided on, and that the scenario was the combined work of several established writers. The film was produced in 1936.

RKO - Center Theatre Suit Settled

RKO Radio's $164,751 breach of contract against the Center Music Hall, Inc., and Rockefeller Center, Inc., was settled on undisclosed terms when a stipulation was filed in the federal court. Plaintiff claimed the violation of a contract which provided for the exhibition of films for five years.

The suit, which was filed in 1936, charged the defendants with the exhibition of only 11 pictures in 1935-36 instead of the required minimum of 22.

Sonn Loses Court Plea

Philip J. McCook, New York supreme court justice, denied an application of H. & S. Sonn, Inc., to strike out the answers of RKO Film Booking Corp., RKO Service Corp., and the White Plains Hamilton Corp., for the failure to submit books and records on an examination before trial. Suit is for $200,000 damages, charging failure of the defendants to pay 50 per cent of the net receipts of the RKO White Plains Hamilton theatre under a lease with the plaintiff.

Damages Asked

Damages totaling $20,000 was asked in a suit filed in district court against Paul Townsand, manager of the Liberty theater and Standard Theatres, Inc., of Oklahoma City. The suit, filed by Woodrow Wilson Claiborne, alleged Mr. Townsand was responsible for his false arrest and imprisonment on charge of robbing the Liberty theatre in Dec., 1937. He was acquitted before a district judge.

Appeals for Dismissal

Virgil C. Crites, plaintiff in a patent infringement suit against Warner Brothers, United Research Corp., Radtke Patents Corp., and others, filed in federal court in New York this week a notice of appeal to the circuit court for the dismissal of the suit. He had charged infringement of patents for optically reproducing sound.

Decision Reserved

Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York supreme court reserved the decision on an application of Local 258, United Theatrical and Motion Picture Service Employees union, for an injunction to restrain the United Retail and Wholesale Employees of America, CIO, from suspending its charter.

Comerford Estate Put at $2,000,000

M. E. Comerford, late motion picture theatre circuit owner, owned personal property valued at nearly $2,000,000 at the time of his death in Miami, Fla., an inventory of his holdings on file with the register of wills at Scranton, Pa., discloses.

The appraisal of the estate showed a total net value of $1,739,171.32. Mr. Comerford died on February 2, 1939.

Frank C. Walker, executor of Mr. Comerford's will, recorded the inventory. It showed the estate to consist principally of holdings in some 30 theatre companies and several real estate corporations.

Mr. Comerford's most valuable property, the inventory revealed, was 1,000 shares of Penn Realty Company, which was listed at $386,760. His next biggest holding was 3,334 shares of Meco Realty Company to the value of $376,018.99.

Principal among the estate's other assets were: 1,150 shares of North Penn Theatres, $175,195.66; 616 2/3 shares Metropolitan Theatre Company, $126,219.33; 500 shares Capitol Theatre Company of Hazleton, $103,013.23; 333 1/3 shares Luzerne Theatre Company, $78,369.96.

Additional amusement company enterprises listed among the stock holdings were: 84 shares Carbondale Theatre Company, $24,128.16; 167 shares Comerford Theatres, Inc., $72,739.38; 389 shares Federal Theatre Company, $45,316.39; 334 shares Hyde Park Amusement Company, $56,961.34; 84 shares Shawnee Amusement Company, $23,805.37; 334 shares West Side Amusement Company, $56,078; 25 shares Savoy Theatres Company, $30,000.

The inventory listed $24,000 in cash.

Mr. Comerford at the time of his death owned or controlled approximately 125 theatres in Eastern and Central Pennsylvania and New York State.

He bequeathed the bulk of his estate to his widow, his daughter and many relatives. During his lifetime his philanthropies were large and widespread.

Willard Patterson Succumbs on Coast

Willard C. Patterson, Warner Theatre executive, died Monday at Palm Springs, Cal. He had been assistant to Joseph W. Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers Theatres since 1936.

Mr. Patterson was born in Atlanta, Ga., February 6, 1887, and attended the University of Georgia. From 1914 to 1924 he was in the legitimate theatre business as advance agent, manager, publicity agent and at one time was manager of the Criterion and Metropolitan theaters in Atlanta.

In 1924 he became divisional manager, Universal Theatres, in Atlanta, and in 1927 divisional manager Publix Theatres Southeast in Atlanta. He became director of public relations for Warner Theatres in 1930.

Funeral services will be held in Atlanta Saturday from the funeral parlors of Patterson & Son. Nat Fellman of the Warner Theatre executive staff, will represent the company at the funeral.

Suit Dropped

The suit of Societe Agatos, S.A., for $3,000 against Du World Pictures, Inc., was discontinued in the New York supreme court this week. The plaintiff charged failure to pay a percentage on distribution receipts for the plaintiff's film, "Sans Famille," under a contract made in 1935.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas—A picture better than any of the "Thin Man" series. Douglas gives his usual suave performance and Blondell takes care of her part to perfection. Could not ask for a beter show from any company. Excellent for the best days of the week. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CLOUDS OVER EUROPE: Laurence Olivier, Valerie Hobson—Very satisfactory to ordinary business. Played January 12-13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COAST GUARD: Randolph Scott, Frances Dee, Ralph Bellamy—Inclement weather has cut down show goers. Those who witnessed the performance reported very favorably. Played January 26-27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Edward Arnold—Probably the most unusual piece of entertainment to hit the screen for many a year. James Stewart puts on a show that should come awfully close to winning him the coveted "Oscar" for 1939. We always expect a grand show from Capra and we always get it. This is certainly one, if not his greatest, achievement.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—An excellent production that pleased the patrons. With the exception of the American flag waving, it would have been shown here without a single bit of criticism. Running time, 131 minutes. Played January 29-31.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains—This must be a super-picture, from all we have heard about it, but it just didn't jell for us. About two-thirds of a house the first night and half as much the second. The acting is excellent and it may be quite superb as fiction but, unfortunately, it will leave a lot of people with the idea that the Senate is made up of a bunch of men with very inferior minds, seasoned with a few crooks. One gets the idea that the President of the Senate (who is not a Senator at all) is about the only man in the lot who has his feet on the ground. Running time, 130 minutes. Played January 27-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

NORTH OF THE YUKON: Charles Starrett, Linda Winters, Sons of the Pioneers—The first Starrett I ever played and am well pleased in every respect. Well produced and full of action with a good story and singing by the Sons of the Pioneers. Drew way above average which is unusual for this theatre where this star has never played before. Starret seems to have considerable following due to surrounding theatres playing him regularly. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 2-3.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

RIDERS OF BLACK RIVER: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—We have never had a bad Starrett. This is a good western in all respects. Running time, 59 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TRAPPED IN THE SKY: Jack Holt, Katherine DeMille—Good program picture but no drawing power. Played January 27.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

First National

CODE OF THE SECRET SERVICE: Ronald Reagan, Rosella Towne—A good action feature for a double bill. Some of the stock shots did not fit well in the picture and the underwater scenes looked like a revival of "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang." But it is a picture that will please. Double billed with "Law of the Pampas." Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 1-3.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—With the temperature below zero on both evenings this was played, it still drew better than average midweek business. The second night was decidedly good due undoubtedly to word of mouth advertising. A dandy plot that moved right along to a stirring court room climax. This is designated as a "B" picture but is in every sense far superior to most of the socalled "A's."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A swell picture that made audience come out and tell you what a good picture it was. Played the week before Christmas and business was much better than average. Play it by all means. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 17-19.—L. C. Militor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall—This is only a program picture, but was enjoyed by my small town audience. Plot held up all the way and seemed to interest all who came. Can recommend it. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, John Garfield, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Consensus that it was slow and not up to the former pictures of this cast, and we are of the same opinion. Some of the situations seemed forced. It had not the spontaneity that the others have had and too many babies.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—Here's something you better pass up if possible. If this is entertainment, we'll take something else. About the most silly piece of nothing we have played in months. Played January 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—Don't let the advertising deceive you. Played on Bank Night and it wasn't the picture they came for. Absolutely too much Russian (to get out of the theatre). Running time, 94 minutes. Played January 18-20.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Hard to report on. English locale that many do not like. So we had split opinions on it. Muni's fans went for it but we had a number walk out on it, though it was not that bad. Very heavy, as most all of Muni's pictures are, and that may have been the reason that some walked out.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—Good program picture, especially suited to small towns. Played January 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Used this on my once a week double bill and it proved a very good draw. I left out the usual Western and actually did more than average Friday-Saturday business. Heretofore, I found with few exceptions that a western is essential as one end of a Friday-Saturday double feature. "Blackmail" is exciting entertainment, which is what most of the Friday-Saturday fans are looking for. —L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey —This picture's setting and background of Southern prison camps and oil towns makes it rather depressing, and left me thinking that I had not been exactly entertained. It is well done, however, and will get by at a moderate gait, but will not be received with any considerable enthusiasm. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 20-21.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Better see this one before you play it. It starts out as a gangster picture but goes screwy in the middle. Scene shifts to England, changes into a costume picture, and ends up a tragedy. E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—Very good picture but not for small towns. —Played January 22-24.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—This was a fairly satisfactory program feature but 67 minutes of Frank Morgan is a little too much for us. Virginia Weidler was very good. Played this to the lowest Monday-Tuesday business in several months, partly due to bad weather. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 26-27.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Here's the kind that you enjoy running and it pleased. One of the best Hardy Series to date. Played January 4-5.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—A break in a cold wave running nearly an entire month helped to bring in overflow business. This very excellent Hardy Family picture (some said the best yet) gave me the third highest gross from MGM in the past two and a half years, exceeded by only "Boys Town" and "Test Pilot."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker—Well, they can just forget the Marx Brothers as far as the star is concerned. They are gradually dropping in box office draw and their stuff is always the same, so why pester the theatre going public any more? Played January 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Just a fair program picture that didn't draw. Played January 24.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY (reissue): Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—No regrets that we got this reissue from Metro as every patron expressed complete satisfaction and admiration for acting of Charles Laughton as "Captain Bligh." This feature is tops. Good BO on this. Running time, 133 minutes. Played January 18-19.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—A splendid picture from all angles except box office. Business very bad but those that came were well satisfied. Played January 31-February 1.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Pleased and business fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Moderate entertainment. Just misses being really funny. Low gross. Played February 2-3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew

Ayres—This is a rank one, boys. The patrons came out with "What's it all about" expressions. Good for Cash Night or its equivalent. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 17-18.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. General patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—The coldest nights in four years cut business in half on this third in the series of Kildare. This is probably the best of the trio and will further popularize the future exploits of Doctors Kildare and Gillespie.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Here is a series which bids fair to become as popular as the Hardy Family series. It really has everything it takes to make mass entertainment. And along with our two good friends, Barrymore and Ayres, the cast always includes two or three swell girls and a host of strong support. Give us more of them! Played January 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP
ROCKEFELLER CENTER, NEW YORK

STABLEMATES: Mickey Rooney, Wallace Beery—Rooney and Beery never fail to draw them in here and this was no exception. This is a nice little feature and fairly well acted. Enough said. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 1-2.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland—Too much is enough, and there is not enough important matter in this story to justify two and a quarter hours of high speed dialogue. Notwithstanding the star-money spent on it, so far as I am concerned it is only a second-class picture. To me, it was not entertaining and I am sure that I am not alone in this opinion. Running time, 134 minutes. Played January 13-14.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Paramount

ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Virginia Dale, Jean Cagney, Joseph Allen—There was no secret about what the public thought of this one. No cast. Labor pains. Ain't that something to foist onto the public. The producers don't need to look far for what is wrong with the business. Product. The sooner they get it through their heads that they can't produce from 50 to 60 pictures a season and bat even a fair average the better the exhibitor and the producer will be off. We will both get more money. We don't starve to death on a carefully produced picture that has known stars and a story to build upon.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Jean Cagney, Joseph Allen, Virginia Dale—Good light entertainment. Just serious enough to make it seem interesting. Absolutely no box office for us, however. We even had a local name orchestra on the stage to help but gross was bad. Played January 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Jean Cagney, Joseph Allen, Virginia Dale—A very entertaining little picture that pleased on a double bill. During the past few months there has been more real entertainment in some of the "B" product than in most of the "A" pictures. While producers are thinking of discontinuing production of "B" product, we suggest that they continue the "B's" and cut out most of the "A's." Played January 26-27.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Engrossing story but seemed to lack something that the old silent version had. Business was a big disappointment. It seems that this type of story with a foreign setting will not go over. With an American setting, however, a rough brutal story seems to go over big, as evidenced by the three leading grossers for 1939: "Jesse James," "Dodge City" and "Union Pacific."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour, John Howard—Another outstanding attraction from Paramount. I ran this only two nights, when word-to-mouth advertising would have given me a nice third evening. Tamiroff reaches his greatest height in this very fine production. Business for two nights was more than for three on "Beau Geste," played just a week earlier.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—A fair picture but the public was not very enthused about it. If we ever play another feature length cartoon, it will be at a flat rental and "B" prices. Played January 21-24.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Little gnomes, elves, peewees, ogres . . . all manner of weird little folk grotesquely caricatured . . . . and animals, birds, even flowers can be amusing and lovable in color motion picture cartoons but these foolish attempts to reproduce Princes, Princesses and big flabby Gullivers seem to end in disaster, with the persons portrayed jerking across the screen, exuding less personality than the bottle of ink from whence they came. The detailed tying up of Gulliver is interestingly drawn and the shot of the Lilliputians crossing a plank bridge at night, presumably taken from underneath the bridge, showing shafts of lantern light as the boards sag, is excellent. But you can't hide under a bridge for 70 minutes, and "Gulliver's Travels" is far from being in the class of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Business here was far from expectations. Played January 23-24.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Helen Broderick, Allan Jones, Akim Tamiroff—Good comedy which pleased fair business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Helen Broderick, Allan Jones, Akim Tamiroff—One of the best to come from Paramount in quite some time. I made the mistake of wasting this on a midweek change. Did better than average in that spot but would have pulled a good many more dollars on a Sunday change. Tamiroff has only a small part but it is about the best comedy bit I have seen in many a month.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna—A good "Hopalong Cassidy" feature that did not do average business. Our patrons miss "Windy." It should not be difficult to find another character like George Hayes to take his place in these features and it would be a great help here at the box office. Double billed with "Code of the Secret Service." Running time, 131 minutes. Played February 1-3.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Andy Devine, Alan Mowbray—Eighty-five minutes of nonsense which netted our audience an equal amount of laughter. Andy Devine and Martha Raye always did "rate" with our boys but now they must move over and make room for one "Bob" Hope who is coming fast. This picture is sure to "click" wherever anyone of this trio is popular. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 3.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna—A much better picture than we expected from reports we've read. It's really worth attention. Book it where your audience is intelligent. It is serious stuff and well done. And why wouldn't it be? Lewis Milestone directed. Pat fine. Played January 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna, Roland Young—I'm not a continual griper, but this one didn't even draw expense on my best dates with good weather. And no wonder. My Sunday patrons came out making numerous statements that didn't boost my Monday crowd. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. General patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Frank Craven—This is a fine family picture, though it grossed poorly even in combination with "The Barricade." Played January 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda, George Raft, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore—We enjoyed good business on this one in spite of the cold weather. Would advise anyone who hasn't played it to play it as old as it is.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—Still a great picture. Not the box office tonic some old ones have been, however. Played January 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Republic

HEROES OF THE SADDLE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Average western which drew fair business on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Just what it takes to beat an attendance slump. Best Friday-Saturday business in the past two months and certainly pleased the crowd. If Republic can't get them in on Saturday, it's time to close down. Doubled with "My Wife's Relatives" (Republic). Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 1-2.—J. F. Bobbitte, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Edward Ellis, Anita Louise—A sleeper that really pleased. Ellis very popular.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders, Wilfred Lawson—For a mountainous title this is one of the flattest pictures of the current season. It is difficult to understand what prompted the film. It has absolutely no plot and there is scarcely a bright spot or memorable incident in the whole piece. This correspondent peered over the backs of empty seats and cringed to see polished actor Wilfrid Lawson, clad in skins, giving off savage yells. While I was still waiting patiently for a bit of redeeming footage, "Allegheny Uprising" ended on a discordant note that caused me severe shock and embarrassment. Leaping on her horse, Claire Trevor gallops in the wake of her big silent John Wayne. But ere she is out of sight, she gives vent to the worst line of the year, "I'm going with my man!" Another one like this and we'll start an "Exhibitors Uprising." Played January 30-31.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

BAD LANDS: Robert Barrat, Noah Berry, Jr., Andy Clyde—Played with "Way Down South" as double bill and drew the few customers in. Played January 12-13.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—This was not up to expectations, although the little girl is very fine in her work as a skater. The story is weak and doesn't seem to be too well produced. At that, this is far from being what we would call a very poor picture. Rates about average.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker —Good light comedy that seemed to please. Played January 25-26. — Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Hampden, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone—A very fine picture that pleased all. This makes us realize the story is the thing. — C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—Patrons divided. Some very good comments but also had a few walkouts. Played December 26-27.—Loyd L. Moreland, Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—One of the most pleasing pictures we have played. Business good.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Sally Blane, Alan Mowbray—Very poor picture. First I've ever played here and very disappointed. Poor story. Played with RKO "Bad Lands" as double bill which drew the few customers in. Played January 12-13.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce—Another Lemon programmer that failed to make film rent. One of the weakest program pictures we ever played. Played January 15-16.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

BARRICADE, THE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—Good but not the type of picture that is popular here. Gross weak despite coupling with "Our Neighbors—the Carters." Played January 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—The pictures Fox puts Jane in seem to get worse and this is one of the worst we have ever run. Played December 13.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Excellent Friday-Saturday business but this poorest of all Withers pictures isn't going to help any on bringing them in on her next show.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Fox will have to put Jane Withers in better pictures if she is to draw any business. This took a nose dive at the box office. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 26-27.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Port Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren Williams, Binnie Barnes, Wendy Barrie—I doubled this with "Housekeeper's Daughter" and attracted a fine crowd. If your audience likes sophisticated comedy that is very well done, this should go over. Your farmer friends won't like it, so keep it away from their days. The brilliance and clarity of the print I had on this impressed me and the rest of the staff. The sound also seemed to be way above average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 3.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Excellent color and plenty of thrills make this an exceptional film. Good crowd the first night and they thought it was swell, but it didn't hold up the second night. I haven't the slightest idea why not, as the weather and competition were not bad. Your crowd will get a kick out of the main Indian. He almost steals the show. It is the best color feature we have shown yet and that is saying quite a lot. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 1-2.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOLD THAT CO-ED: John Barrymore, George Murphy, Marjorie Weaver, Joan Davis, Jack Haley—No draw. Good comedy. Somewhat out of season type of picture. Played January 29-31.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—One of the same old Hollywood stories. No drawing power. Played January 11-12.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche—An exceedingly good production to very ordinary business. Played January 5-6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Patric Knowles—A nice little program picture that pleased very much. Give us more of S. Erwin in this class of story.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Marjorie Weaver, Stuart Erwin—Here's a dandy family picture. People actually came out saying, "That's a swell little picture." It was little and light, but if it pleases, that's what counts. Played despite biggest basketball tournament to good business. See! I do say good things about a good picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. General patronage.

QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Eddie Collins—This is entirely too foolish. Eddie Collins overdoes his humorous part and all in all I must call this the lowest ranking of all the Jones Family series. For me they are a good draw and I can't get them fast enough, but a few more like this and they will be on the way out.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—A long drawn out affair that was surely not worth the price. It may have cost lots to make but the only thing to keep audience awake was the earthquake scene. Then you could just as well relax and resume your slumber. Absolutely no box office. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 21-23.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Although we played this just a week before Christmas, which is ordinarily the poorest season in the year, this drew nicely, in fact, well enough to rank our 10th highest gross of 1939. Picture is one of the best that ever reached the screen.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Here is an excellent picture worth letting your churches know about. Very good comments from audience of those who seen it but because of playing arrangements it was too old when I got it. Box office bad. But play it if you haven't. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 31-January 2.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: Jean Rogers, Robert Kellard—It failed to draw on family night. Some laughs in it but no stars. Running time, 57 minutes. Played January 30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DRUMS: Raymond Massey, Valerie Hobson, Sabu—Very good production and was well received. Some patrons expected more, due probably to vigorous campaign carried on at time of release, but on the whole everyone satisfied. Should be good in any situation. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 11-12.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Billie Burke, Hugh Herbert, C. Aubrey Smith, Zasu Pitts—No particular reason for this picture's existence. Certainly it lacked much of a story. Small draw. Played January 31-February 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, C. Aubrey Smith, Billie Burke, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Was surprised to hear so much adverse criticism on this production. I thought that this was very good entertainment but the cash customers panned it, maybe on account of the print. Running time, nine reels. Played February 8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith—Nicely produced on lavish scale. Fair business getter. Played January 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith—Recommend your patrons see this one from beginning. It is hard to understand otherwise. For English made picture and no special stars to build up, this picture did average Sunday business. Recommend playing it on Friday-Saturday, though. Little bit too bloody for Sunday patronage. Running time, 115 minutes. Played January 14-16.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—I doubled this with "Day-Time

VILLAGE BARN DANCE
"Well, here we are in the old village barn again, ready for another program of fun, frolic, friendly philosophy, and fancy music. Let's start things off with a good, old village barn dance."

Wife" and had an extremely successful box office. This one seemed to be the main draw of the two. It is not as funny as they advertise it, naturally; however, after it gets started, it did get plenty of laughs. Joan Bennett is certainly not hard to look at and they have stressed her resemblance to Hedy Lamarr. The fireworks sequence went over the best here. It would go well on July 4th. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 3.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—I don't know whether Joan Bennett was for just added scenery or for a marquee name. But her part wasn't for dramatics. A nice bit of fireworks at the last. Would make a swell Fourth of July show. Patrons badly disappointed. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. General patronage.

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—Against our better judgment we were obliged to move this from a mid-week booking to Sunday-Monday due to our having nothing available to replace a hole left by the exchange pulling our dates on "Another Thin Man." The picture is very fine but too artistic for Penacook and it fell way below normal average for the days. Played January 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett—Played this late, but very good action entertainment for a small town audience. Enjoyed very much here. Running time, 9 reels. Played January 18. —A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—Excellent. Played January 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART: Roland Young, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Janet Gaynor, Billie Burke, Paulette Goddard—Was a bit "leery" of this one but to my surprise it went over very well. Nothing outstanding about it but the plot runs along smoothly and acting rather good. Some very funny situations in picture which were highly appreciated by audience. Fair box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 25-26.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—An ordinary gangster story plus "Charlie McCarthy" to put the show over. Our first "McCarthy" feature and did about 40 per cent better business than our first Durbin, which we recently showed in the same spot. Average business first night and considerably better than average the second. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 28-29.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Mischa Auer, Charles Winninger, Una Merkel, Brian Donlevy, Irene Hervey, Allen Jenkins—Has some of that famous Capra stuff. It's all old hat; any deadhead can understand it, but "Destry Rides Again" is interspersed with bits of good business. James Stewart handles his role to the delight of all comers. He drinks milk and doesn't carry a gun at first, has them all cowering at the curtain. It's genuine fun from start to finish and is the best Western extravaganza since "Union Pacific." The remark of a farmer sitting behind me epitomizes what I could say of Marlene Dietrich's role. When questioned "Ain't dat Marlene Deetrick" by his friend, he replied "Might jest as well be." It was. Played January 26-27.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Stack—Our audiences, though small, on account of severe winter weather, found this feature highly praiseworthy. Played January 19-20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—A very good picture that will please. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 5-7.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—A dandy picture continuing Deanna's long line of great entertainments. Business was fairly good. Played January 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan—Just a good show. A swell little picture with a lot of hit tunes that no one should be afraid to run. Really a pleasant surprise. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle—Good picture, nice music, okay hula. Played January 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TROPIC FURY: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Beverly Roberts—Second half of a double bill. So far have played this series on double bills and am glad of it. They have not had box office or have been the pictures Universal had me believe. Business fair because other half double bill, "Hell's Kitchen," which had drawing power alone. Running time, 62 minutes. Played December 28-29.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

> Writes J. F. Babbitt, manager of the Stearns theatre at Stearns, Kentucky:
> "When placed in charge of the local theatre I had no previous experience at all in the picture show business, and 'What the Picture Did for Me' department helped me more than anything else in buying and booking, and has continued to furnish very valuable information.
> "We feel that everyone operating a theatre, especially the independents, should report on features and shorts as their duty to other fellow exhibitors, as well as the show business in general."

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Terrible for small towns, same as RKO "Love Affair." No draw. Why don't they put Irene Dunne in pictures to cover small towns; is well liked but not in the above type of stories. Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 18-20.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—This pleased 100 per cent, I believe. Not much in cast, no pretentious settings, but just the kind of program picture which makes a hit with our people. Played January 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, "Dead End Kids"—Played with "Tropic Fury." Business fair because "Hell's Kitchen" had drawing power alone.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Pass this one up! Poorest picture I've shown of Bette Davis. It was a shame to waste glorious color on such a picture. I never sat through so much misery as well as the customers. Left town myself third day to avoid the complaints. No draw. Running time, 106 minutes. Played December 24-26.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Beautiful but dumb, that is, from the box office angle. It was a gorgeous picture, but who wants to see such stuff. Not many in this town. Played January 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—As has been said, here's the gangster picture to end all gangster pictures. It is the last word and, for those who like pictures of this kind, it's really entertainment! Drew some extra business. Played January 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—My customers still turn out for a good gangster picture with the right cast in it. This picture has it! Business much better than average. It may be a percentage picture, but if your customers still like Cagney and you can make money on a picture like this, it's worth it. Best picture from Warners this year for me. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 28-30.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—One of the best Cagney pictures we have had in a long time. Played January 29-30.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris, Frank McHugh—We played this a year ago and thought we might do extra business by bringing it back. But was sadly disappointed, although it was a good picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: No. 7—A good single reel. Even if the patrons don't sing, it is entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GLOVE SLINGERS: Broadway Comedies—Here is a comedy that we thought was terrible, but much to our surprise and gratification, the audience ate it up. Who are we to judge? It must have pleased. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HISTORIC CITIES OF INDIA: Columbia Tours—A very interesting travel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JAI ALAI: Special Sport Thrills—Different and good. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE IN SWINGTIME: Color Rhapsodies—Just as good as anybody's colored cartoon. Drew applause.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN EARS: Color Rhapsodies—Amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOUSE EXTERMINATOR, THE: Phantasies Cartoons.—Quite good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOW IT CAN BE SOLD: Andy Clyde—A very good Andy Clyde comedy that pleased. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RATTLING ROMEO: Charley Chase—A very good comedy with lots of laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLUE DANUBE, THE: Cartoons—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOOKWORM, THE: Cartoons—Real good. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CITY OF LITTLE MEN: MGM Miniatures—Very good short on Father Flanagan's Boys Town. Should really have played this with "Boys Town" but could not get it on that date and was forced to play late. However, was well liked. Running time, 10 minutes. —A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

CRIME DOESN'T PAY SERIES: Good series and interesting, exposing to the public rackets to be careful of, etc.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

DAD FOR A DAY: Our Gang—As good as any. The new kid who cries so heartrendingly drew the sobs in great style. This is a fine short for any theatre celebrating "Father and Son's Day" or just "Father's Day," if you care to keep it that long.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAY OF REST, THE: Robert Benchley—Splendid and human.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—The best dramatic short of the year. So realistic we were nearly obliged to set up first aid for those with weak stomachs. They'll talk about this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HELP WANTED: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These are the best two-reelers on the market.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOT ON ICE: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good short on ice hockey, a game which all my patrons know and follow closely and no one tried to pick holes in this short, which speaks well for its truthful portrayal of the good old Canadian game. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

LAND OF ALASKA NELLIE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—The weakest from this excellent series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAD MAESTRO, THE: Cartoon—A knock-out of a cartoon. Just about the best we have had this season, with the one exception, "The Blue Danube." Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE POTATO: Pete Smith Specialties—One of the poor Pete Smiths. They happen so seldom that we must mention it. Just fair. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley—Another laugh provoking Benchley.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR LESSONS: Our Gang—Very good. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TIT FOR TAT: Laurel and Hardy Reissues—I'm really sorry I ever got this as my audience panned it relentlessly. It may have been all right at the time of issue but today slapstick is out. My advice is to lay off this one. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

VALIANT VENEZUELA: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—As usual, this is the tops of all travel. Do not waste it, but use when you must build up a weak feature. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BREAKING THE NEWS: Paragraphics—Interesting shots of various activities within the "busy bee," Madison Square Garden. If variety is the "spice of life," the Garden and its employees should certainly be "spicy." A short anyone will enjoy. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HERE'S HAL: Hal Kemp and His Orchestra—An average musical reel that will please. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HOLD YOUR BREATH: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Interesting shots of an underwater track meet. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N J. Prison patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Getting a lot of very poor prints from this firm, maybe on account of war shortage.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: Very good shorts. Should be played in all theatres. Running time, 10 minutes.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEET MOMENTS: Headliners—Our audience was well satisfied with the music of "Russ" Morgan and the singing of "the girl who sang alone" but as for the male-female duo, well, they did not register at all. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

ACT YOUR AGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—The first half of this is slow but the last half makes up for lost time. It was a real laugh getter. Better play it. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BANDITS AND BALLADS: Ray Whitley Comedies—The poorest of this series. Band OK but construction very crude. Whitley band well liked, and a little money on plot and production would make them very popular.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DONALD'S NEPHEWS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Just a fair cartoon with too much noise. I have seen lots better than this from Disney. Running time, eight minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

FIVE TIMES FIVE: Dionne Quintuplets—Nicely produced. The Quintuplets are more fascinating than ever. Woollcott's narration excellent. Good enough to excuse RKO'S subtle plug for "Swiss Family Robinson."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HELLO MAMA: Nu-Atlas Productions—Good. Pleased here, especially the hillbilly part. Some exhibitors pan these Nu-Atlas musicals but I have found everyone good so far and my people like them. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

SIX MORE SHOWMEN SENDING REPORTS

Six showmen, three of them from Canada, contribute for the first time to "What the Picture Did for Me" in this issue. They are:

A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake theatre, Bissett, Manitoba.
Daniel Korman, Palace theatre, Englehart, Ontario.
A. C. Stock, Iroquois theatre, Petrolia, Ontario.
Joe E. Edwards, Liberty theatre, Johnston, S. C.
W. H. Hoffman, Lamar theatre, Arthur, Ill.
L. C. Molitor, Stewart theatre, Stewart, Minn.

Read the reports of these exhibitors in the columns this week.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 1—As expected, the boys broke out with a round of applause after this one. They are eagerly looking forward to the others in this series but hope the recording will be better. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SLIGHTLY AT SEA: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—This comedy hits Edgar's oldtime stride. It's plenty funny in typical Kennedy frustration style. Excellent. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CLOCKING THE JOCKEYS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Interesting but nothing out of the ordinary. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

EVERGREEN EMPIRE: Magic Carpet Series—This short concerns lumbering in the northwest and is not as good as a single I got last summer gratis, put out by the Weyerhouse Timber Co. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 6: Vyvyan Donner—Good. Color helps 100 per cent to put it across.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FILMING BIG THRILLS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very good. Much favorable comment. With shorts like this available there is no need for double features. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

FILMING THE FLEET: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very good. Fits in on any program and well worth running. Be sure to mention it in your advertising as it will help to draw. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

FIRST ROBIN, THE: Terry-Toons—A very good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GANDY GOOSE IN A BULLY ROMANCE: Terry-Toons—This made the crowd laugh better than anything played in a long time. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

HUNTING DOGS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Very good. Many favorable comments on this reel. Should be advertised and fish and game clubs notified when it is being shown. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

LAND OF CONTENTMENT: Magic Carpet Series—Very good travelogue on New Zealand. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

MONKEYS IS THE CWAZIEST PEOPLE: Lew Lehr—Fair. Not what I expected from Lew Lehr as narrator. Running time, 10 minutes.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: This, in my estimation, is the finest newsreel on the market. No need to say more than that. We play it every week. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

NICK'S COFFEE POT: Terry-Toons—Just fair. Merrie Melodies and Disney spoil you for other cartoons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SKY FIGHTERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—An excellent short subject that is interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia,. Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry-Toons—Very poor coloring. Decidedly below Disneys and Merrie Melodies. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

VILLAGE BLACKSMITH, THE: Terry-Toons—Poor print on this cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

WICKY-WACKY ROMANCE, A: Terry-Toons—Fair color cartoon that will pass. Running time, seven minutes.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

Universal

BIRD ON NELLIE'S HAT: Lantz Cartunes—Fair cartoon. There never has been one from him that I could rate as excellent. Running time, seven minutes. —L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

BOY MEETS JOY: Pinky Tomlin, Joy Hodges—Here is a good musical for any day of the week. Music is good and the different acts excellent. Very good. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: No. 62—"America Takes to Skis." It's a dandy action reel. Excitingly protographed.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SILLY SUPERSTITION: Lantz Cartunes—Just a fair cartoon. We do not get good black and white cartoons any more. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 67—This series is good on any program and fits in nicely. Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 68—Poor. Not as good as some others we have played. Had nothing of special interest in it that would make it stand out. Just a program filler. Running time, nine minutes.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

Vitaphone

CHICKEN JITTERS: Looney Tunes—Just fair—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CLEANING UP: Cross and Dunn—Sound poor. Nothing to it. Not even a good musical. Why don't they make more two-reel comedies? Running time, 18 minutes.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

FILM FAN, THE: Looney Tunes—Swell black and white cartoon. One of Porky's best. Running time, seven minutes.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

HAPPY FELTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Felton should cut out the dancing, as he is terrible, but the two dancing numbers are worth the reel. They are very clever kids; should go far. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Looney Tunes—Some clever new cartoon gags and a dandy finish that hit my crowd just right. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LITTLE LION HUNTER: Merrie Melodies—Excellent color cartoon. Leave it to Warner Bros. to put out swell cartoons along this line. Running time, nine minutes.—L. C. Molitor, Stewart Theatre, Stewart, Minn. Rural patronage.

MERRIE MELODIES: All very good. Equals the Disneys. Running time, eight minutes.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

MIRACLE OF MILK, STATE OF NEW YORK: This reel is supplied gratis, having been produced by the Bureau of Milk of the State of New York. It is not entertainment and not worth paying the transportation on. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

Serial

LONE RANGER RIDES AGAIN: Robert Livingston, Chief Thunder Cloud—We used the Lone Ranger Badges to help put this serial over in midweek, giving 10 free admissions each night to the persons holding the badges with lucky numbers. The first night doubled usual midweek business and continued to give us better than average business until cut down by cold weather. This is a satisfactory western serial and should go good in small towns, although it is a little old. Running time, 15 chapters.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

Western Electric Perfects Its New Microphone

Further developments in the design of the so-called "cardioid" microphone, which Western Electric brought out about a year ago, have resulted in a device that is the equivalent of six distinct instruments in one unit, according to the company's announcement. The new "multimike" is said to be directly adaptable to the specific acoustic characteristics of each studio.

The instrument may be made "non-directional," "bi-directional," "cardioid directional," or be switched to three degrees of "hyper-cardioid" operation, thus eliminating pickup of sound from undesired sources. Additionally, in public address work the new microphone is said to permit a material increase of amplification before the "singing" point is reached. Its use is expected for both radio and motion pictures.

Major studio sound department heads were the guests of Erpi at the Hollywood laboratories this week. A general discussion of current activities and developments in sound recording were held and new Erpi equipment was demonstrated. The new apparatus was described by T. E. Shea, engineering vice-president of Erpi and Donald Mackenzies, director of engineering.

To Form Mexican Unit

Lillian Schoen, daughter of Professor Max Schoen of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and former Federal Theatre actress, has left Pittsburgh for Mexico City to form a stage company composed primarily of Mexican motion picture players. Miss Schoen will collaborate with Alex Fernandez in productions at the Regis theatre there, which has been a film theatre.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A PAT ON THE BACK

It's one of those days. Indigestion inside, fog outside, papers filled with war, a dull lunch date. Work, work—and what does it get you? You know.

Well, let's look at the mail. Here's a letter. It's from Arnold Stoltz, up in Utica. He notes what a fine job the Round Table is doing for the man in the field. Further down in the pile, Jimmy Redmond, from Fairbury, Neb., writes to say how proud he is to be a member of the organization. A couple of other members send along a pat on the back that say how lost they'd be without the Herald.

You begin to feel better. Tummy stops growling. Fog starts to lift. Mebbe the world isn't going to hell in a hurry after all.

That's how it goes. The little lift you did not expect, the cheery nod from out on the firing line and the sun shines again.

So we sit back and think the best tonic for those all-gone "blues" is a hail from a pal. And the thought strikes that, humans being what they are, more of the members themselves ought to exchange a few bows when the occasion calls for it. And there's plenty of occasion, too.

For instance, one man picks up an idea in the pages used successfully by a brother-manager. It takes only a few minutes to pen a thank-you note. When a member steps up to a bigger job, with the good news set down here, that should rate extra attention to the extent of a personal congrat. from as many of his fellow-members who can get around to it and want to say so.

Isn't very much to do but it sure counts a lot to the lad on the receiving end. Ray Bell describes it well in writing us about the grand letters he has been receiving from the boys he topped for the Big Prize.

"I like this spirit," says Ray. "I know you will, too. That's why I mention it. It's nice to know that, while others are competing with you for the smile of the moment, they can be gracious enough to cheer you on. It's of such stuff that your Round Table regulars are made."

The Round Table essentially is a business department. That it can also be a fraternity of goodwill between men who meet only in these pages is a virtue the membership should encourage.

Today's top news features John Burhorn's promotion to circuit field representative of Indiana-Illinois Theatres, as announced by Alex Manta, president. Winner of the 1938 Silver Grand while manager of the Gayety, South Chicago, Burhorn a short time later was stepped up to City Manager, from which post he now goes to the bigger job.

"Thanks to the Quigley Awards," writes the Round Tabler.

PROBLEM INTO PROFIT

The situation described on another page wherein Johnny Manuel solved the problem of what he terms "quasi-censor" boards in a manner mutually satisfactory to the P.T.A. and theatre, contains much food for thought perhaps as digestible in other sectors where similar conditions arise.

Guided firmly by the Round Tabler without yielding to what might have become unfair pressure, the new setup not only does away with any possibility of organizational dynamite, but allows for added publicizing of the theatres' weekly programs and makes possible future assistance from the same source when Manuel needs it.

Since the motion picture has become everybody's business, no manager can consider his theatre safe from local censorial pressures of varying degrees. It would appear that compromises as effected by Manuel can be made without endangering the theatre's grosses or prestige.

To the many descriptions of "able theatreman" may be added the following, a bow to Manager Al Hamilton, of the Empress, South Norwalk, Conn., in the "About Norwalk" column of the local Sentinel:

"Here is one of the most successful showmen in the state. His success has been built up on the ability to think quickly in terms of promotion, know what the public wants, and on the foundation of a fine, winning personality."

Round Table In Pictures

One of a large collection of ship models owned by Carroll Cooney, president, Waldo Theatre Corp., of Waldoboro, Maine, is the sailing vessel, above right, displayed in a recessed glass-encased section of the lobby wall of the theatre. Indirectly lighted and resting in a sea of carefully laid velvet to simulate a ship in motion, the model, according to C. T. Cooney, Jr., is considered by the best authorities as the finest example of old hand-whittled work extant.

Two weeks ahead of opening of "Housekeeper's Daughter" at the Strand, Muncie, Ind., Mel Grundy used the lobby cutout panelboard illustrated above. Copy was written by the theatreman and illustrations were sketched in. Articles displayed at base were purchased from the five-and-ten.

5 MEN TRIED TO KEEP HOUSE WITH The HOUSEKEEPERS DAUGHTER
but keeping house wasnt in her line!
Hilda didnt know a pot from a pan
but what she couldnt do with a man,
She couldnt cook or sew with a cinch,
she did her best work in a clinch
They all ran after the Housekeepers Daughter who did things to them she hadnt oughter!
She might have been only
The HOUSKEEPERS DAUGHTER but she knew what to use to lead men to SLAUGHTER
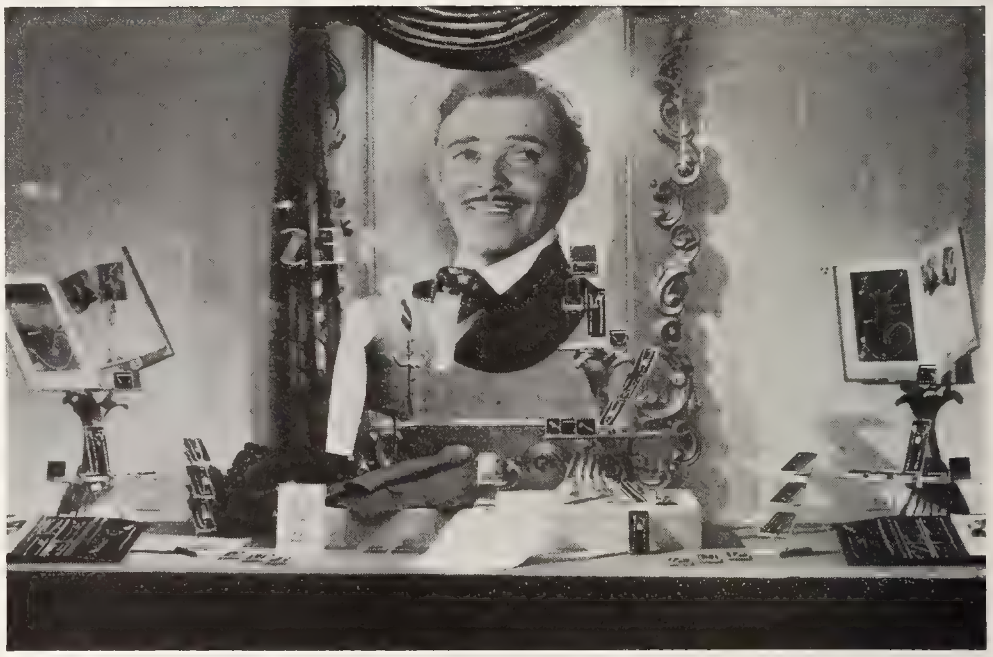
Dont Fail
TO MEET the HOUSEKEEPERS DAUGHTER
SHES COMING SUNDAY



Reproduced above is one of the numerous window displays promoted by Round Tabler Les Pollock for his "Gone With the Wind" engagement at Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. In addition, an attractive Valentine window was spotted, featured by big cutout heart in which figures of Butler and O'Hara were planted. . . . In a sports shop, directly opposite Yale University, Bob Russell of Loew's Poli, New Haven, promoted his display for "Everything Happens at Night". Skates, skiis, and other paraphernalia were set against a background consisting of large photo of Sonja Henie with appropriate tiein copy.

"Do You Know" Folder Attracts for Laby

Excellent reaction from the public and his home-office heads on an unusual institutional copy slant is reported by Manager George Laby, at the Victory, Holyoke, Mass. The idea is in the form of a four-page folder, four by nine, cover headed "Do You Know?", with inside listing "little known facts everyone should know", interspersed with "facts" on behalf of the theatre.

For instance, Laby lists extraneous material, such as the fact that a peach is the only fruit not mentioned in the Bible, that a madstone is a stone that actually cures dog and snake bites. These "facts" are followed with plugs in the same type and setup about the theatre policy, sound equipment, etc., which are again followed by other outside material.

In all, George includes some 15 different "facts", with seven having to do with the Victory and arranged so that none will be passed up by interested readers.

Atlanta Newspaper Replates Front Page for "Twenties"

Front page replate with banner head and full-column story topped by picture cut, was the featured publicity promotion engineered by Manager Tommy Read for his date on "Roaring Twenties" at the L & J Fox, Atlanta. In addition "Fox Theatre Edition" was carried in the masthead panels. Papers were distributed by regular newsboys on the downtown streets on opening day. Added publicity was arranged in a Sunday paper in the form of a Special Sunday feature story written by one of the paper's by-liners was arranged in the Constitution, contents localizing the date by a report on the events taking place in Atlanta during that decade.

Other exploitation featured speakeasy style admission cards bearing theatre's phone number and playing of tunes popular in the '20s via radio and by hotel dance bands. Working with Read on the campaign was Cameron Shipp, Warner Southern field exploiteer.

Manuel Ties PTA to Weekly Bulletin for Picture Rating

Confronted by demands of the local P. T. A., which demanded that Saturday programs be arranged for children appeal, Manager Johnny Manuel, Schine's Strand, Delaware, Ohio, solved the problem by inaugurating a weekly one-page mimeograph Movie Guide, edited and issued by the organization under Manuel's supervision and distributed at P. T. A. expense to the 1,200 parent-members. The Guide rates the week's attractions at the theatre, material condensed from Motion Picture Review Digest. It was given an official sendoff by the local press, the P. T. A., direct mail campaign to the membership and distribution at lunch clubs, where the plan was endorsed by the various club secretaries.

Although it was agreed the Guide was to be edited by the organization, Johnny kept the plan in hand by okaying proofs and making copy changes that might prove damaging to the box-office. "A little salesmanship convinced them that no picture is totally bad, so no reviewer should tell people to stay away," writes the Round Tabler.

In order to avoid possible losses in children's business from attractions rated objectionable for the youngsters, Manuel has started a Saturday morning kid show, also sponsored by the P. T. A., the program to be selected especially for the juveniles. Regular prices are charged and attendance aided by the parents anxious to put over the special showing.

For the future, plans include a printed booklet instead of the mimeograph, with picture comments from the theatreman and articles of industry import. Funds for the printing will be raised at a series of theatre benefits sponsored by the P. T. A. In all, Johnny is pleased with the outcome and recommends the plan to other theatremen who feel pressure from similar sources.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Perkins Guides Reception Of Gulliver, In Person

With Dave Ballard, the eight-foot giant exploiting "Gulliver," in town to do a job for the date at the Calvin, Northampton, Mass., Manager Dave Perkins kept the big fellow busy with a number of visits and receptions. For publicity purposes, the Mayor posed with the costumed giant at City Hall. Stops were made at schools and colleges with special after school matiness announced, and children's home visited where Ballard told the kids about Lilliput. All schools in the drawing area were also approached and of interest is the attendance in a body of pupils and teachers of local school for the deaf.

Publicity was generous, papers carrying daily news stories on the giant in addition to usual theatre copy. Window displays and co-op ads followed Ballard's visits to department stores and book shops, stores stressing the various Gulliver items on sale. Perkins also planned stencilled giant footprints pointed in the direction of the theatre from the main street but ice and snow spoiled the effect.

THEATREMEN EXPRESS PREFERENCES FOR REPORTER STYLE IN REVIEWS

Round Tablers Endorse Method Employed by Hartford Times and Other Leading Dailies; Say Public Asks Facts Only

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The long-moot question of whether newspaper motion picture reviews should in the best interests of pictures be more objectively approached comes to a bit of a boil with the recent publication in these pages of an article on "stream-lined" reviewing, employed and described by Julian Tuthill, widely known drama critic of the Hartford Times.

Communications from members concerned with this important public relations point of view, subscribe to Mr. Tuthill's reportorial style as fairer and less damaging, while stressing the definite value of criticism, per se, to the boxoffice returns. That these returns can be strengthened by the "reporter" style without weakening critical prestige is indicated by Robert M. Paskow, Warner Theatres Jersey zone ad head, who as an example cites success in selling the reporter-style to all of the newspapers in Newark, N. J.

Decries Personal Criticism

"For many years it has been my sincere conviction that critical reviews of pictures should be abolished and the reportorial style adopted instead," Mr. Paskow writes.

"Naturally my personal views are biased because I became infuriated at times when we were spending our good cash to tell the public we had a swell picture and some super-man of a critic would place his review alongside of the ad and in bold type would say "It Stinks" or less harsh language, which sounded about the same.

"There were many reviews, however, that were grand and I would even quote selected raves for follow-up ads. So far this sounds like a Mexican stand-off.

"However, over a period of years we have convinced the local critics that they have been too severe generally. Today each paper in Newark uses the reportorial style of telling the public about our first-run product.

"We believe that pictures should be reviewed without the rating of stars, bells, etc., although I cannot truthfully say that the box-office is affected one way or another. We do know, however, that many pictures boosted by raves have been box-office flops and vice versa.

Says Average Patrons Unaffected

"The industry as a whole has benefited greatly by critics' reviews because, good or bad, it is publicity and publicity creates attention.

"The average movie fan is unaffected by the critics' point of view," the Warner ad head continues, "because invariably he has been disappointed after seeing the picture, one way or another, and his faith in his popular critic has been shaken. The public wants the facts only, not merely opinions. They don't want to know too much about the plot, just enough to whet their appetites.

CHECKER NOVELTY SELLS "NINOTCHKA"

There should be many checker players in Danville, Ky., according to the reception given the miniature checker-boards and counters distributed by Manager W. D. Yeakle, for "Ninotchka," at the Kentucky. Accompanying the novelties was a card reading: "Get the Jump on Old Man Gloom. Laugh Your Troubles Away," etc., etc. Card and board were put together in small imprinted envelopes carrying cut of board.

"Julian B. Tuthill's explanation of 'Stream-Line' reviewing is most enlightening and covers the subject perfectly," Mr. Paskow concludes. "His major premise is based on fact and he sticks to facts. He says: 'When a motion picture editor sets himself up as a critic of public taste and cinema art, he is assuming a vast responsibility.' And yet there are such people who not only can assume this responsibility, they actually do. They are the critics that contribute much to the entire industry, because they have understanding, they are tolerant and appreciative of the fact that Hollywood never starts out to make a bad picture. They understand that pictures are not really good or bad, but that more people like a certain type of picture than others."

Calls Stream-lining Step Forward

While his situation presents no problem as has to do with the current discussion, A. J. "Kal" Kalberer, who manages the Switow & Sons Theatres in Washington, Ind., states he has been in spots with enough of a close-up to entitle him to speak on the subject. Mr. Kalberer also makes a distinction between criticism and critics in voting for the Tuthill system.

"We believe Julian B. Tuthill's 'Streamline' reviewing of motion pictures is a very definite step-forward in journalism. It has been our experience that far too many motion picture critics have taken themselves much too seriously and placed their own personal opinions on too high a pedestal," writes the Hoosier State member.

"Picture reviewing in general, when in the hands of men and women who realize the responsibility of such a job both to the readers of their newspapers and to the industry itself, in our estimation is okay. However, the number of 'smart-alec,' fresh-from-the-copy-desk critics far outnumber the fair-and-square movie editors and critics. The damage heaped upon the motion picture industry and theatres in general by this type of critic, commentator and 'what have you' is, in our belief, nothing short of alarming.

"We have, and believe every other theatre manager has, the utmost respect and confidence in picture critics and editors who have some love in their hearts for the business in general, who realize the vast importance of the necessity of its being, who have an appreciation of the tremendous amount of money, effort, art and skill which goes into the making of a motion picture. It is these men and women who are most valuable to the industry, to readers and listeners.

"We believe the industry needs critical opinion," says "Kal," "but feel that it is never entitled to the one-man panning that it takes. Mr. Tuthill has hit upon one of the fairest and most sensible systems that could be devised and if more newspapers would follow his lead we are sure our business would be far better off.

"Throw the radio commentators with their star-ratings and bells to the wolves. They have hurt our business more than anyone realizes. But mind you, even these fellows could help us if they were less interested in self-glorification and more concerned with the best interests of both their public and the industry from which they gain their livelihood.

"In some ways the industry has created this situation because of its ever ready willingness to cater to some of these people. Ballyhooing the critics' opinions, good or bad, may help to sell motion picture advertising in newspapers, but it does not sell merchandise at the box-office."

Expressions from other members on Mr. Tuthill's "stream-lining" will be published in following issues.

Egan Gives "Royal Visit" Well Rounded Campaign

Dignity was the keynote of the campaign arranged by Pete Egan and publicist George Shafer at the Palace, Calgary, for the showing of "The Royal Visit," official Canadian government pictures of the tour of Their Majesties last summer. His Honor the Mayor, prominent officials of the Red Cross Society and others were invited to the premiere, guests introduced over lobby microphone by announcer Gail Egan, son of the theatreman, on a Red Cross tiein.

Souvenir booklets were printed for the occasion, numerous window displays promoted, special cards placed in cafes and hotels about town and 10 per cent of the night's proceeds were donated to the Red Cross.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Redmond Sells Schools

Concentrating on the schools, Jimmy Redmond for his date on "Gulliver's Travels" at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., two weeks ahead mailed study guides to all schools within a radius of 30 miles, asking the teachers to bring the children to the show at a slightly reduced price. Day ahead of opening groups of boys and girls dressed in character covered different localities. Numerous store tieups were effected, which brought window displays and ads and Jim distributed imprinted skull caps.

FIRST-TIME NEWS BREAKS MARK DATES ON "WIND"

Added reports of "Gone With the Wind" campaigns, at Loew's theatres show socialites in every situation topping the openings with dress premieres, fully covered by the press with picture layouts. First announcement of playdates was page-one in most every situation. Full page co-ops were common, lead editorials numerous. In St. Louis, the Post-Dispatch ran a first-time special supplement, developed by J. E. Harris, adman, and Manager Harold Evens, at the State. In Baltimore, Billy Saxton promoted a 12-pager in the Home News.

Cleveland saw the first "Baby Parking Lot," a news enterprise sponsored by Milt Harris and Jack Lykes, for the Stillman date. Ads are being run offering to take care of the baby while mother is at the show. Behind the buildup of Ray Bell and Angie Ratto, in Washington, the Daily News put over a 12-page supplement for the Palace engagement. Widely publicized "black tie" premiere was followed by page one pictures of the next day's boxoffice line, started at five in the morning. Benefit for the Finns copped extra space with women's pages going overboard on interiors and costumes in the picture.

Local Sponsorship General

Bell promoted a local subdivider to build a replica of Tara in a new development, found newsworthy enough for a front-page break with other following stories on corner-stone laying, house plans, decorations and furniture. The merchant co-op campaign was topped with four full pages taken by one department store.

In Columbus, Ohio, Fred Oestreicher worked with Manager Clint Wander at the Broad to have the University Club sponsor the opening, the audience to attend in costumes worn at a ball in honor of the picture. The same was promoted in Indianapolis with the Junior League, by Manager Ward Farrar. In Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal grabbed extra space by hiring a popular debutante to press agent the opening at the Poli-Majestic and in Memphis, Cecil Vogel hit the dailies with a special premier luncheon for the "Belles of the Old South," pinning it on a wire from Vivian Leigh inviting them to the party. Full-page picture layout resulted. In many Southern spots, the Colonial Dames cooperated, attended openings in costumes of the period.

Contests Find Quick Acceptance

Contests for Scarlett O'Hara doubles were successful and most generally used, Milt Harris clicking with a Clark Gable doubles contest, in addition. In Reading, Pa., George Peters made a first-time front page with a tiein for best Civil War costumes. George Freeman, in Springfield, Mass., Frank Murphy, in Syracuse, and Martin Burnett, in Dayton, ran Leap Year proposal contests. In Houston, Texas, a "Stand-in for Scarlett" tiein was put over by Francis Deering and Homer McCallon.

Sam Gilman had a six a. m. line of waiting boys from a nearby town at the boxoffice with blankets and lunch boxes, the local dailies and the boys' hometown paper going heavy for the idea on the Harrisburg, Pa., date. Les Pollok hit a different slant for space, playing up the picture's unusual projection and Technicolor quality.

60 Warner Houses Cooperate

In Philadelphia, the campaign for the opening at the Boyd was started 18 days ahead, some 60 of the Warner theatres in the zone running trailers, showing 40 by 60 posters, distributed policy and price heralds. Managers made reservations for patrons. To give the premiere an added importance, the Boyd was closed entire day of opening.

Sponsorship was not turned over to any one organization, the various social and art society groups allotted limited quantities of tickets. Every endeavor was made to provide for the general public, as well. The Junior League had eight of the members in the lobby, in costumes of the period and following the opening, gave a "Wind" ball at leading hotel, the event strictly "social register," proceeds devoted to charity. The party was encouraged by the Warnerites, reports Ev Callow, because of the tremendous publicity value which created an all-time high locally.

Front-page art in the Record tied in on the contest, marked the opening gun in the hunt for a local Scarlett to wear an original costume used by the star. Gown was displayed in a downtown window and contest ran 12 days, to big returns, finishing again on page one. Junior League feted the winner, a model, at the opening and as guest of honor at the ball following. Interest was heightened by the Cinderella atmosphere created by lack of the winner's social background, says Callow. Girl was provided with a suite at top hotel, entertained widely, furnished with beauty services and new clothes.

Travelling Display Welcomed

Daughters of the Confederacy also took hold with a Robert E. Lee birthday luncheon, day after the premiere. Papers carried this as part of the opening, guest of honor being India Wilkes, who played in the picture. Rare Confederate battle flags were loaned by the Daughters for lobby display at the theatre. Other high socialites also contributed to the publicity with parties and other newsworthy events.

Radio cooperation was in keeping through the advance, the premiere broadcast at three different periods. Callow assigned three of his department for window displays, with a total of 175 secured. Total of publicity in stories and art, totalled nearly 40,000 lines in addition to breaks in the local weeklies and suburban papers.

Prominent in the various campaigns described was the presence of the M-G-M traveling costume display, supervised by Billy Ferguson, exploitation chief.

(Below) First of the national ads by M-G-M on "Young Tom Edison" was timed to break on Edison's birthday, day after the premiere in Fort Huron, Mich. The 145 lines on 2 col. was pointed to humanize the inventor and to indicate the role as a fitting Mickey Rooney characterization. Other national ads will break weekly until general release date, March 15.

TODAY IS EDISON'S BIRTHDAY

Sometime today, when, with the push of a button, you light up a room, think for a moment of Thomas Edison, the man who started dreaming about electric lights in his boyhood and who didn't give up his dream until he made it come true!

The entire world honors Thomas Edison today. But in Port Huron, Michigan, the cheers will be the loudest, the memories most personal and vivid! Because there Tom Edison lived as a boy, and there the exciting motion picture that depicts the early life of this great American is having its premiere with Mickey Rooney playing the role of "Young Tom Edison"—the first of two M-G-M films re-enacting the life of Thomas Edison.

It's the very real story of a typical American boy . . . his pranks and pals, his family and his town! Not quite typical, perhaps, because young Tom was the 'scapegoat' of his community—he forgot to do his sums and tripped into trouble—and spent more time than folks approved down in the cellar dreaming and fussing in his home-made laboratory. But the beginnings of great dreams are here . . . the heart of big ideas . . . the foundation of inventions as wonderful as the phonograph, the electric light, the motion picture and myriad more!

"YOUNG TOM EDISON" will be shown in New York next month . . . to be followed sometime later by "EDISON THE MAN", starring Spencer Tracy.

ROBERT HOLLAND
needs no further introduction than our stating he is the son of Sid Holland, one of the most active members and followers of the Round Table and Quigley Awards Competitions. It is beginning to appear that Bob is the veritable chip off the old block. His first position in theatre business was an usher's job and soon after was made manager of the Orpheum in Elkhart, Indiana. Very recently Bob moved to Lockport, New York, and is now the assistant manager of the Palace Theatre there, which house belongs to Schine's Theatres Circuit.

acts as the manager of the Mayfair Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa. He began at this same house when it opened, in 1936, serving as usher and the next year became the assistant. At the demise of the then manager Jack took over and is doing a fine job of work.

managing the Parkway Theatre in Chicago, Illinois, has been in showbusiness for fifteen years. He started as an usher, was promoted to chief usher, assistant manager and also did the work of a press agent. During the time vaudeville was in its prime Steve produced a vaudeville unit. Thus, with so much experience, we know he is doing a good job of work at his present spot.

began life in the theatre in 1933 at the Greeley Theatre in New York City. His first job there was that of an usher and then he was promoted to chief usher. He became a doorman next and then was made superintendent. The next position that came his way was an assistant managership and finally he attained the skipper's post. You're close by Round Table headquarters, John, so come and see us.

acts as the assistant manager at the Granada Theatre, in the metropolitan district of New York City, which house belongs to the Five Boro Theatre Circuit. Jack lays claim to thespain qualities, having entered show business at the early age of nine, appearing in vaudeville with Gus Edwards and his Kiddie Revue. He also worked in movie shorts, on the radio and stage, doing all this before his present activities.

is in showbusiness now for about three years. He started as an usher at the Robinhood Theatre in Grand Haven, Michigan, and then transferred to the Grand, in the same vicinity. A few months later he became the doorman and in the early part of 1939 attained the managerial post at both the Grand and Robinhood houses. The quick step-up easily shows that Tom does his duties well.

ALBERT J. BLASKO manages the Jeffrey Theatre in Chicago, Illinois, which belongs to Warner Bros. He started in the music library at the Chicago Theatre, then worked on two trade papers and became advertising manager for Essaness Theatres. He managed the Castle, State and Madison houses in Chicago before locating at his present spot. Please forward contributions for our pages, Albert, so the other members may learn of your doings.

is a newcomer to the moving picture industry and although he has been in the theatre for a few months is already ensconced in the manager's seat. Bill is now doing a good job at the Wallins Theatre in Wallins Creek, Kentucky, and we anticipate reports from him regularly on his activities there.

began his career in theatrics in 1935 at the Mayfair Theatre in Miami, Florida. He worked up to chief of service and was then promoted to assistant manager of the Rosetta in the same locale. The next move brought Leonard to the Capitol in the same capacity and then he obtained a manager's job at the Biltmore in Miami, from where he now communicates.

started at the State in Auburn, California, about ten years ago by distributing heralds for the theatre. Shortly after he was made an usher, then was appointed assistant manager. His next job was a manager's post, which he secured at the Avenal Theatre, Avenal, Calif., belonging to United California Theatres, Inc., Circuit.

started in showbusiness as an operator in 1929 and since then has held many managerial posts at various houses, owned either by other circuits or himself. His territory covered Brantley, Alabama, and Reynolds, Georgia. At the present time Ben is at the Ritz Theatre in Brantley, doing a fine job of work and liking this spot very much. We thank you for the kind sentiments you display for the Round Table, Ben, and hope our ideas continue to be valuable for you.

MAURICE M. MEEK
acts as the assistant manager of the Ellinwood Theatre, a Weber house in Ellinwood, Kansas. Working at this same place for three years Maurice held a number of jobs there, delivering bills, ushering, doing doorman duty. Let us hear from you, Maurice, at not too infrequent intervals, on your activities at the Ellinwood.

LAWRENCE E. WALTER
is the publicity manager at the Logan and Midelburg Theatres in Logan, West Virginia. He began his career when he worked in small sign shops which catered to theatres, then left this job to enter the theatre itself and secured his present spots. Larry likes his position and feels he has a swell future to which to look forward.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"WIND" and RIPPLES

WIDE spreading ripples of impress are running across the motion picture from the impact of "Gone With the Wind". It was inevitable that there should be effect and after-effect in this sensitive and continuously readjusting industry, with the tossing in of this unprecedented product with its qualities of displacement in terms of time and dollars.

The first question which most concerned showmen, in all branches of the industry, was about what the public would do about it. That seems answered now, with the public paying for it—and, remarkably enough, return engagements being booked.

The next question, about what the effects and consequences of the impact are to be within the business of making and purveying pictures, is just now finding expression. The most immediate consequences have become apparent, variously in various territories, with the readjustments of release schedules, subsequent runs and related matters, where extended runs of this triple length picture have so absorbed playing time. The pattern of reaction and readjustment is necessarily shaped according to distribution conditions and schedules in each region.

Yet to be discovered statistically, too, is the much debated question as to whether the consequence of the "Wind" project will be to draw to that picture a lion's share of a fixed national picture dollar, or if, as may be so, the effect is to increase that amusement expenditure in behalf of the screen in general. In the few situations where indicative figures can be had at this date there is evidence that the competitive pictures have enjoyed apparent increases.

Turning back to the first such impact upon the art and industry in the arrival of "The Birth of a Nation", the picture which decided that "feature" was to have its way over "program", it was clear enough that new customers were being won. But the situation is far from parallel. "The Birth of a Nation" went to the public in the many still surviving and flourishing legitimate stage houses of the metropolitan centers and the many roadshow houses of "the sticks". The picture theatres were substantially unaffected at the time. They still played for a dime and got the dime audience.

Today's super-picture, however, comes into the movie theatre and this time the issue between "feature" and "program" is in the home of the program, which has to make room.

ONE of our statistically inclined executives has made a calculation that "Gone with the Wind" is just seven times an "A" picture in terms of effect on playing time and in apparent gross. It has, for instance, taken the place approximately of seven typical "A" pictures in its Capitol theatre run in New York. Its known performance in a representative first-run house in a typical eastern city, at its advanced prices, has grossed seven times the average for that house. The national gross to date is calculated at $9,000,000; the forecast now is for a final gross in the order of seventeen to eighteen millions. But there the seven factor stops. The cost was somewhere in the region of typical totals for only three or four "A" pictures.

THE Hollywood producers controversy about who is to have Benjamin Franklin as a subject would seem to be susceptible of a ready compromise. Why not cut Mr. Franklin into two parts. We have had two pieces of Abraham Lincoln, and M-G-M has sawed Thomas A. Edison's career in two. There's enough of the sage of Philadelphia to make several portions.

CLASSIC DECLINE

THERE is ironic coincidence in the fact that within the same twelve-month the Long Island estate of the late Mr. Otto Kahn should be taken over by New York street sweepers association, and that the Metropolitan Opera, to which he gave so much prideful attention, should toss aside the social monopoly of the Diamond Horseshoe with a beckoning to any one with the price, and a drive to be "the People's Opera."

Stripped of its tiara of social pretentiousness, opera will be indeed put to the test of its intrinsic merits as entertainment. It has been obvious enough down the history of the entertainment arts that it has been the tiara that sold opera.

It is most certain that if champagne was abundant at ten cens a seidel, beer would outsell it.

Opera owes its origins to the endeavours of the days when there were no media but people and voices, no other tools of expression. It has survived by subsidy, royal patronage. It stands in the world of entertainment about as a show horse does to transportation. It's just a reminiscence.

WHILE some patriots of the metropolis are looking about for a million or two to save the Metropolitan opera for New York, out in Shelbyville, a Missouri village, the merchants have subscribed to a syndicate to build an eight thousand dollar motion picture theatre. Their project is to keep trade at home that now goes eight miles away where there's a movie show. Now they will be learning about zoning and protection.

DESPITE the welter of radio oratory and the profusion of talk in pictures, the lecture business is on the upturn. It is just possible the public has had so much free speech it has decided to see if there is some worth paying for.

SILVERMINE notes: The first flight of northbound mallards are pausing with much profane quacking on the icy waters of our Tinker's Dam. They make intimations that there is to be another spring. The house is knee deep in the seasonal fiction of the seedsmen's literature. The Shirley Temple, Mary Pickford and Gloria Swanson gladiolus are still listed, all less costly. We are still looking for a Mickey dahlia and a Louella violet.

Nickel Arcades

LONG HELD VISIONS of a circuit of "cocktail lounge" movies in thousands of bars and grilles, clubs and cafeterias from coast to coast began Wednesday to assume the tangible when James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President and producer for United Artists, agreed to produce short subjects for automatic projectors, under a contract signed in Hollywood this week between "Jimmy's" new Globe (UA feature) Productions and Mills Novelty Company, reputedly the largest distributor and manufacturer of automatic entertainment machines in the U. S. A., principally the nickel-in-the-slot music machines.

Thus does the motion picture return to the scene of its beginnings, in a nickel arcade, at Edison's Kinetoscope Parlor, 1155 Broadway, New York, in the "Roarin' Twenties," and to the scenes of its first expansions, at the "penny arcade" movie emporiums of William Fox, in Williamsburg; Marcus Loew, at 125th Street, and Adolph Zukor, on East 14th Street, all located in New York.

James Roosevelt agrees to produce one short subject each week, in sound, at his United Artists Studio headquarters in Hollywood, using both 16mm and 35mm widths for the reported 100,000 movie-slot-machines that will dot the country from Coast to Coast and Lakes to Golf.

The average length of the pictures will be two-and-a-half to three minutes, but footage will vary in accordance with the performance requirements of individual subjects. Sources and types of subjects were not disclosed.

Wednesday's agreement also provides for the immediate incorporation of a separate company to be owned jointly by "J. R.'s" Globe Productions and Mills Novelty. This company will buy or lease the machines from Mills, and will service them with films and mechanically.

Previous discussions in print, and otherwise, concerning "cocktail lounge" circuits, brought outbursts from exhibitors fearful of competition and from unions which did not relish the idea of motion picture film running through any type of projector without a union projectionist present for the proceedings.

Chicago police on Wednesday started to halt the showing of 16mm sound pictures in taverns, claiming saloon keepers did not have film permits. Local breweries were supplying equipment and films, usually fight films or travelogues. About 25 saloons have been using free film shows to attract business.

Jimmy's "Pot o' Gold"

JAMES ROOSEVELT will make his bow as a motion picture producer with a subject that is at present under fire by his potential exhibitor customers. On Tuesday he signed Horace Heidt and his band to appear in a picture based on the Tums "Pot o' Gold" $1,000-a-week radio cash giveaway. Exhibitors have placed their box office losses every Tuesday night, on account of that program, at $1,000,000. The winner must be at home to collect the award.

After independent Michigan exhibitors appealed to the Federal Communications Commission and to Congressmen to stop the program, the Commission referred the complaints to the Department of Justice. The agency which handles the matter retained Merlin Hall Aylesworth, formerly of newspapers, radio and films, "to look into the matter" and see if there is anything illegal about the "Pot o' Gold." Meanwhile exhibitors in various parts of the country have set up their own "Pot o' Gold" schemes to match the Tums awards.

And now James Roosevelt is going to make a "Pot o' Gold" film.

Mr. Roosevelt also announced this week that he would make a film based on the life of the American educator, Horace Mann. Houston Branch will do the screenplay.

On Washington's Birthday James Roosevelt addressed the Philadelphia Women's Council of the B'nai B'rith at the Penn Athletic Club, on motion pictures.

Ads Clean

THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU this week formally and officially observed that the nation's advertisements are clean, that they are no longer "seriously deceptive."

It will be remembered that the organized motion picture business, back in 1930, was one of the first to turn, voluntarily, to the matter of raising its advertising standards, forming the Advertising Advisory Council, to which most companies submit their advertisements, trailers, outdoor displays, stills, and other forms of publicity and exploitation for approval.

In 1938, a typical year, 148,000 different pieces of advertising matter were submitted by the film companies.

Quigley on Trends

MARTIN QUIGLEY delivered Wednesday before a convocation of 600 members of the faculty and student body of Loyola University at Los Angeles, a discussion of current trends and influences in motion pictures.

Red-Film Birthday

ON SUNDAY, the "Daily Worker"—New York organ of the American Communist Party—observed the 20th anniversary of the Russian film industry, remarking that "Soviet culture has given a leading position to the movies as an art form . . .," that Russian films have won acclaim from the world, and that the "Soviet cinematographic industry holds third rank in world production."

Meanwhile, in New York, Amkino, for 13 years the distributor of Russian films in America, prepared to close its offices at the end of this month, because of admittedly sparse business.

Holding down the telephone in an office from which much of the personnel have been dismissed, Nicola Napoli, manager of Amkino, said on Wednesday that "about six" American distributors—none identified—had offered to take over, and that he was awaiting word from Moscow.

Bioff "In" & "Out"

WILLIE BIOFF decided, apparently abruptly, he would have to fight it out on the home grounds, this week.

On tidings of the signing of a writ of extradition by California's Governor Olson, Bioff flew, under an assumed name, from Hollywood to Chicago to land in the midst of reporters and policemen. He was taken into custody, taken to jail, under the documents of the 18-year-old pandering conviction, his current trouble, and an hour later was released again in bail of $5,000 on an application for a writ of habeas corpus, set for hearing Friday. He discussed his plight with reporters and attributed his current difficulties to "the interests" and "the Communists." He did not indicate what these divergent foes might have in common in the matter. He said that he would be in conference with George Browne, IATSE head.

Bioff wired his resignation as chairman of the Conference of Studio Unions to Los Angeles from Chicago, and received in reply a refusal to accept it, along with a vote of confidence.

In Hollywood the issue between the studios and labor continued a stalemate—the employers asking cancellation of labor's last 10 per cent increase, labor standing pat on refusal. Reopening of the discussions "is expected," says Hollywood. Details on page 18.

In Chicago, John Prystalski, chief justice of the criminal court, by whom Bioff was freed on bond an hour after he had been locked up, on Wednesday asked an inquiry.

Gold for Critics

"IF PARSONS* can get away with it, so can I," and with that, James (Jimmy) Fidler, radio critic of pictures and picture personalities, took to the air from Hollywood this week, flew east and "sat down" at Pittsburgh airport, to ride from there to Warners' Stanley theatre, to start, on Friday, an eight-week personal appearance tour of key theatres in key cities.

Fidler, following close on the high heels of Louella (Hearst-International News) Parsons' tour of eastern theatres, is reputedly getting upwards of $5,000 per week from the same field of exhibition from which there has emanated in recent weeks some very strong opposition to his aircastings of film criticisms which, theatre owners claim, hurt their box offices by discouraging attendance of listeners to "Jimmy's" soap-and-shampoo program for Procter and Gamble.

Hollywood producers, who also have criticized Fidler, for his air gossipings about their picture personalities, are supplying the Fidler personal-appearance shows with a retinue of stars.

Next to join the parade of the air-and-print film critics to theatre stages for personal appearances will be Jimmy Starr, of the Los Angeles Herald-Express, who apparently feels that if Parsons and Fidler can get away with it, so can he—for eight weeks, likewise with a bevy of beauties from the studios, starting at Loew's State, Longacre Square, New York, any week now.

*(When Louella Parsons started her personal appearance she said, "If Winchell can do it—I can." She did.)

France's La Guardia

"MAURICE PAGNOL (producer of "Harvest") is the Mayor LaGuardia of France," according to Andre Heymann, president of the French Cinema Center, distributors of the film in the United States. The resemblance, said Mr. Heymann, is that for five years M. Pagnol has been trying to get the French film industry to move away from Paris, just as New York's mayor is trying to get the American film companies to move from Hollywood.

France's "New York," which is clamoring for film production, is Marseilles, which "offers many more advantages than Paris," according to M. Pagnol (just as New York is a much better place in which to make pictures than Hollywood, in Mayor LaGuardia's opinion).

M. Pagnol offered to bring Paris stage stars which head the casts of about 90 per cent of France's films by airplane to Marseilles. Both sides have been "slandering each other for five years," according to Mr. Heymann, "but now Marseilles is an important film production center."

Neely's Synopsis

OPPONENTS and proponents of the Neely anti-block booking bill, now in Congress, were "at rest" this week, at least superficially, and only temporarily. There was a lone blast, against the bill, on Tuesday, by the directors of the Screen Writers Guild in Hollywood, who resolved that the bill was bad, especially its synopsis clause, which was declared inimical to the best interests of screen writers, the motion picture industry, and the public at large.

Grosses Slide

"GONE with the Wind's" multi-million-dollar receipts notwithstanding, Uncle Sam's amusement taxes in January touched the lowest point in ten months, dropping almost $500,000 from the December income of $1,974,534, to $1,486,534, reflecting lower box office receipts, at least at theatres charging 40 cents or more, to which admissions the federal tax is applicable. Receipts for the month were $77,600 under the $1,564,134 reported for January, 1939.

Despite the drop in taxes in January, however, the Internal Revenue Bureau reported from Washington on Wednesday that admission tax collections for the first seven months of 1939-40 were about $328,000 above those for the corresponding period in 1938-39. From July 1, 1939, to January 31, 1940, revenues were $12,206,619, compared with $11,878,708 from July, 1938, to January 1939.

Theatres in virtually every section from the Ohio Valley to the Eastern Seaboard suffered in varying box office degrees from the "big blow" and "little blizzard" last Wednesday and Thursday, followed by later winds, sleet and rain on through Tuesday. New England was hit hardest. In many places in that section, and elsewhere, film deliveries were halted or curtailed. Broadway business was jarred from the very favorable position it had held for many weeks previous. But when the storms lifted, so did intake.

"Star Salaries"

THE HALLS of Congress this week finally resounded with formal and official apologies for previous Congressional criticisms of those "million-dollar" salaries of Hollywood. Representative Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma, made the unusual admission; last year he attacked star salaries on the floor of the House, after the usual annual U. S. Treasury Department release of top-bracket salary lists had brought the usual newspaper headline attention to Hollywood's large salaries without taking into consideration the large taxes paid thereon. The industry for years has been irked by this out-of-proportion presentation in print of gross incomes.

Congressman Boren's "apology" this week came after he had put into the Congressional Record a letter from Manny Strauss, New York attorney, calling attention to the decision of Justice Louis A. Valente, of the New York supreme court, holding that the compensation paid Loew executives was not only fair but profitable to the stockholders of the corporation.

In that letter Mr. Strauss told the Congressman that "it seemed to me that if you were advised that a justice of the New York supreme court, after careful and thorough inquiry in a truly conducted trial of issues, had ruled that these compensations were not only fair but profitable to the stockholders of the corporation, you would not hesitate to add to the Record by the inclusion of such an opinion from such a source.

"It seemed to me also that you might fairly add to the Record the fact that with respect, for instance, to Mr. Louis B. Mayer, Mr. Schenck and Mr. Rubin, on the amounts of compensations mentioned by you, each of them necessarily paid to the United States upward of 60 per cent on those amounts in federal income tax alone."

The United States Treasury, in Washington, reported Monday that 55 persons had incomes of $1,000,000 or more in 1938, six more than in 1937—the 55 getting a total of $107,724,000, compared to the $85,416,000 of the 49 in 1937. Recipients' names were not disclosed; they will be published later.

NEELY AND BLOW AT "B'S" BRING 40 INDEPENDENT FILMS TO MAJORS

Outside Producers Have Their Day; RKO Radio Leads with Twenty-one from Units Not on Regular Roster

With the threat of passage of the Neely bill to bar block booking and a serious attempt to "abolish the 'B's'" as contributory causes, Hollywood for 1940-41 will have more than 40 films produced by individuals or companies outside the normal production staffs of the seven large companies—United Artists, of course, always has adhered to the policy of releasing independently produced product.

Heading the list is RKO Radio, which this season has 21 pictures being made by eight individual or corporate producers other than those constituting the regular RKO Radio roster. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer currently is releasing the Selznick International's "Gone With the Wind," and recently has added Irving Asher and Pandro Berman to its extensive staff of producers.

Twentieth Century-Fox and Hughes

Twentieth Century-Fox, while having no releasing arrangements with outside producers, has been rumored to be in such a deal with Howard Hughes, which would indicate a joining of the trend. Mr. Hughes has signed a two-picture agreement with Howard Hawks, the films to be made at the General Service Studios in Hollywood. Additionally, increased production authority will be given Sol M. Wurtzel, formerly in charge of lower-budget pictures, with Mr. Wurtzel taking in hand the more expensive productions. Lucien Hubbard, Ralph Dietrich and Walter Morosco have been made associate producers, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of February 10th, thus, as with MGM, enlarging the roster of producers, possible against the day when the passage of the Neely Bill would call for more individualized attention to each picture made.

The European War, as well, is seen by Frank Lloyd to be stimulating unit production. Mr. Lloyd contributed "Rulers of the Sea" as an outside production for Paramount release last year, and now is making "Tree of Liberty," which will be a Columbia release. That company also will release "Jane Addams and Hull House," to be made by Charles Rogers, and already has placed on release "Music in My Heart," produced by Irving Starr.

12 "Outside" for Paramount

Paramount plans to release 12 "outside" productions in the current season, nine of these being provided by Harry Sherman pictures, made at General Service.

Warner Brothers, in a definite departure from previous company policy, although it formerly released Cosmopolitan pictures, has announced that work will start April 15th on "The Life and Death of John Doe," made by the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin combination, with William Holman, business manager of the unit. The story is an original by Richard Connell and Robert Presnell. The present Warner policy along the line of releasing independently produced product was indicated by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, who said, while attending the company's midseason sales conference this month, "Other outstanding producers will find it to their advantage to use the channels of Warner Brothers for production, because of the thoroughness of our distribution and our merchandising skill in presenting their pictures to the public."

SEQUELS ON INCREASE

Sequels caught Hollywood's fancy in production news this week, as RKO announced that David Butler would produce and direct Kay Kyser and his orchestra in a sequel to "That's Right, You're Wrong."

Other sequels planned are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's follow-up on "Boys Town," with Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, for which Father E. J. Flanagan and his boys' home will get an announced sum of $100,000; and the same studio's follow-up for "Northwest Passage."

Norman Taurog, who handled "Boys Town," will direct Tracy and Rooney again. J. K. McGuinness will write the story, which John W. Considine, Jr., will produce.

Universal, in addition to "Green Hell," made by Famous Productions, will release "The Boys from Syracuse," based on the Rogers-Hart stage play, and produced by Jules Levey. It also has been reported that Frank Lloyd will produce and direct three pictures for that company.

The 21 films produced by sources other than the regular RKO Radio production staff, for 1940-41 release, are as follows: "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," based on the Robert Sherwood stage play, with national release date to be determined, and "The American Way," based on the stage play by George Kaufman and Moss Hart and now being prepared; both produced by Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, under the corporate name of Max Gordon Plays and Pictures, Inc.

Four films based on novels, "Swiss Family Robinson," by Johann Wyss; "Tom Brown's School Days," by Thomas Hughes; "The Deerslayer," by James Fenimore Cooper, and "Little Men," by Louisa May Alcott, are on the RKO Radio schedule for production by The Play's the Thing Productions, headed by Gene Towne and Graham Baker. February 16th has been set for the release of the first.

Harold Lloyd will produce "Three Girls and a Gob," an original by Grover Jones, for the same company, while Stephens-Lang productions have signed to produce three "Dr. Christian" films a year for three years, with "Meet Dr. Christian" released last November, and "Courageous Dr. Christian" currently in the cutting room. Erich Pommer's first vehicle is to be "Water Gypsies," based on the novel by A. P. Herbert, with Mr. Pommer to produce two or three pictures for RKO Radio release. "One of Six Girls," an original by Vicki Baum, has been tentatively scheduled as the second.

Now in the cutting room is Lee Garmes' "And So Goodbye," an original by Mildred Cram and Adele Comandini, as is Franklyn Warner's "Isle of Destiny." Mr. Garmes also will produce three more pictures for RKO, it has been reported.

Boris Morros' Plans

A film based on the Phillips Lord radio program, "We, the People"; a modernized version of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata"; a motion picture version of the French play "Si Je Voulais" ("If I Wish"), by Paul Geraldi, and a musical are to be made by Boris Morros for RKO release; while Orson Welles, under a four-way contract to produce, direct, write and act, is now preparing film versions of "The Smiler with a Knife," a novel by Nicholas Blake; "Heart of Darkness," Joseph Conrad novel, and an as yet untitled original. Additionally, it has been reported that Harold B. Franklin will produce a picture based on the play, "The Drunkard."

Besides the nine films produced by Harry Sherman for Paramount in 1940-41, that company will release "North West Mounted Police," produced by Cecil B. De Mille, working under a separate corporation, Cecil B. De Mille Productions. Last year, similarly, his "Union Pacific" was made for Paramount release. Also, a second Max Fleischer cartoon feature will follow "Gulliver's Travels" for distribution by the same company, which set this month for release of "Sidewalks of London," an Erich Pommer-Charles Laughton picture.

United Artists Expansion

While United Artists never has varied from its policy of selling the films produced by its producer-partners and certain others, this group has been expanded considerably in the last year. Added producers are Richard Rowland, who will make "Three Cheers for Miss Bishop," based on the Beth Streeter Aldrich novel; David Loew and Albert Lewin, who recently purchased the screen rights to "Night Music," stage play by Clifford Odets; Sol Lesser, now engaged on "Our Town," stage play by Thornton Wilder, who also will produce a film directed by Ernst Lubitsch, and James Roosevelt, who will make "The Bat," based on the play by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, and "Love Song," from the Ursula Parrot magazine story, as his first two pictures.

These, of course, are in addition to the films produced by David Selznick, Charles Chaplin, Alexander Korda, Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger, Edward Small and Hal Roach which United Artists releases.

NEW CONTRACTS FOR NOLAN, PIAZZA, BISCHOFF, SCHULBERG, GINSBERG

Studios Add to Production Personnel, Sales Forces Continue Active; Republic, Monogram Business Up

Proximity of a new producing season—the present one already is three-quarters over—apparently is pointing toward an expansion of studio personnel. In recent weeks, at least two score important studio executive, producer and associate producer appointments have been effected; another half dozen were made this week—all expected to have some influence on the quantity and quality of product for 1940-41.

In the week RKO signed J. J. Nolan to be chief of studio and appointed Ben Piazza to head talent and all casting; Columbia engaged Sam Bischoff and Benjamin P. Schulberg to produce; MGM contracted Charles Friedman, producer; Henry Ginsberg joined Paramount, and Fred Kohlmar became an associate producer and production assistant to Darryl F. Zanuck. RKO, in addition, named David Winkler in charge of all studio commitments and there were other engagements made, talentwise, for the new season.

"New blood" in production comes through the organization of a new Hollywood project sponsored by Nat Wachsberger and Harry Brandt, who is head of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York. Both are already engaged in distribution through Film Alliance of the United States, formed last year.

Republic Pictures this week continued field sales conventions, reporting sales were up 25 per cent. Columbia set up special inducements for their salesmen now participating in the "Montague Anniversary Campaign." Monogram reported advance billings at a new peak.

Nolan Made RKO Studio Head

J. J. Nolan was appointed vice-president of RKO in charge of the studio by George J. Schaefer, president, prior to Mr. Schaefer's return to New York. Mr. Nolan's duties will be executive and administrative, apart from those of Harry Edington, in charge of high budgeted pictures, and Lee Marcus, handling medium budget pictures.

The RKO setup is now similar to that of Paramount, where Y. Frank Freeman is in charge of the studio and William LeBaron heads production. Mr. Nolan started with the old Robertson-Cole Company, RKO predecessor about 20 years ago. He served in the publicity and accounting departments of the home office and was assistant secretary of the company. In 1934 he was transferred to Hollywood as assistant treasurer and last year was made Mr. Schaefer's assistant.

While in Hollywood Mr. Schaefer obtained Ronald Colman's signature to a contract co-starring him with Ginger Rogers in "Change Your Luck." Formerly Colman insisted on solo starring roles. Other contracts concluded by Mr. Schaefer included Carole Lombard for three films at RKO; a contract with Harold Lloyd for the production of Grover Jones' story, "Three Girls and a Gob"; plans for the second Kay Kyser picture with David Butler producing and directing and the appointment of Ben Piazza to head the studio talent department. Mr. Piazza is credited with bringing to the screen Robert Taylor, Rosalind Russell, Jean Harlow and others.

PARAMOUNT TO MAKE INDUSTRIAL PICTURES

Paramount has informed leading advertising agencies that the company now plans to make industrial pictures. Lou Diamond, head of short subjects and music interests, will have charge of the new productions, which will be made in the West or in the East.

Mr. Diamond said that the films will not be exhibited in theatres but will be designed primarily for showing to radio broadcast audiences, as now is done several times weekly in advance of the Lucky Strike programs. The industrial films will be made at any length from one minute to one hour running time. The subjects will probably be built around the advertiser's operations.

RKO has acquired the screen rights to Theodore Dreiser's novel, "Sister Carrie," for production this year. RKO also has obtained six French pictures from Nat Wachsberger for distribution in the South American territories.

The company said all its billing records for a single week were broken in the first week of the Ned Depinet drive. The leaders are New Haven, B. Pitkin, manager; Montreal, M. Plottel, manager and Seattle, E. A. Lamb, manager. The leading district is the Northeastern led by Herb MacIntyre, captain of the drive.

Wachsberger-Brandt Company

Nat Wachsberger, executive vice-president of Film Alliance of the U.S. and Harry Brandt, a principal in that company, have formed a new producing company in Hollywood. The group plans to bring French stars and producers to California. Mr. Wachsberger left Baltimore Friday on the clipper to complete arrangements in France. Only French players speaking English will be signed.

The schedule calls for six productions for the spring and summer, with shooting to begin about April 1st. Distribution will be handled by the exchanges of Film Alliance, of which Norman Elson is sales manager. Offices in the RKO building will be enlarged.

Film Alliance will continue its distribution of foreign pictures. The company was organized last June and nine pictures of the program of 25 are being distributed.

Republic Sales Meetings

Republic held sales meetings last week in Hollywood, Atlanta and Dallas. James R. Grainger said in Hollywood that Republic's business as of February 1st was 25 per cent over last year's figure for the same time, and by the end of May he predicted that at least 8,500 contracts will be signed by the company. At present the number signed is 7,633.

In explaining the system of quarterly meetings Mr. Grainger said:

Our system of quarterly meetings has given us many advantages in laying plans for subsequent quarter-year periods. Instead of meeting once a year and thrashing out our problems, we can discuss certain sectional difficulties four times yearly and thus keep a closer contact with our exhibitor customers as well as our men in the field. In other words, we can find out our mistakes four times a year instead of once a year and can be guided accordingly.

Those attending the conference besides Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, were J. T. Sheffield, franchise owner; Ed Walton, Seattle branch manager; J. H. Sheffield, Portland branch manager; Sid Weisbaum, San Francisco branch manager, and Francis Bateman, Los Angeles branch manager.

Mr. Grainger and Mr. Yates also had studio conferences with M. J. Siegel, production; E. H. Goldstein, studio manager; Alfred J. Cohen, scenario editor; Earl Kurtze, special representative; William Saal, special sales representative and Walter Compton, publicity director.

Those who were to attend the other divisional meetings were:

In Atlanta: A. C. Bromberg, Southeastern franchise holder and managers, including Carl Floyd, Atlanta; Henry Glover, Tampa; J. H. Dillon, Charlotte; L. V. Seichshnaydre, New Orleans; William Snelson, Memphis.

In Dallas: W. G. Underwood and Claude Ezell, Dallas franchise owners; Sol Davis and B. F. Busby, franchise owners for Oklahoma and Little Rock, respectively; Lloyd Rust, Dallas manager, and Morris Loewenstein, Oklahoma City.

"Dark Command," Republic's leading film this season, is to have its world premiere in Lawrence, Kan., where the story is laid, sometime in March.

One of the oldest names in radio, Jones & Hare, will disappear when Marylin Hare goes to the Coast next month to make a film for Republic. Billie Jones and Ernie Hare have been known to vaudeville and radio for many years. Miss Hare last year stepped into the spot left vacant by her father's death. Auditions will be held at WMCA to pick a new partner for Jones.

Columbia News

B. P. Schulberg, formerly with Paramount, has been signed to produce for Columbia. Mr. Schulberg, after producing independently, had joined Paramount in 1925, and subsequently was made manager of West coast production. In 1935, he joined Columbia, then returned to Paramount for a number of years.

Columbia has signed Sam Bischoff, former Warner producer. His first assignment is "Singapore."

Larry Darmour may make two or three features a year for Columbia release, it is reported.

Jack Segal, in Europe on a mission for Columbia's foreign sales manager, J. A. McConville, reported this week, by cable, from Paris, that there was "considerable improvement" in business in the belligerent countries and neutrals.

Columbia has set up comprehensive plans for its "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign" in honor of A. Montague, sales manager. There will be a series of national awards, based on billings, to go to the personnel of the first 12 branches to show the greatest improvement in billings at the end of the 12 week period which began last Saturday and ends on May 10th. There will also be special territorial awards to branch managers, and personal awards to bookers of the six leading branches.

The company will release "Blondie on a Budget" nationally, on next Thursday; this is the fifth comedy based on the cartoon strip.

Hal B. Wallis, in charge of Warner production, arrived in New York Monday morning, accompanied from the coast by his wife, the former Louise Fazenda, with the belief that production of the "right" kind of pictures by Hollywood will offset the decline in revenues resulting from the European war. There will be no program "trend," he added; the 1940-41 season will see diversified pictures but all will have action, he said, of Warner plans.

It was not possible, now, to detail Warner production plans; these are still being set, he said.

Mr. Wallis was in New York for the opening of "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" at the New York Strand, on Friday. He also expected to see current plays on the New York stage, and confer with home office officials.

He was honored, on Tuesday afternoon, by a cocktail party in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.

In Hollywood, it was announced that Kurt Burnhardt, former director in Germany, had joined Warner Brothers and would do a picture for Henry Blanke.

Ritchey Deprecates War

The European war has not affected the foreign market of Monogram as much as observers feared it would, Norton V. Ritchey, manager of the company's foreign department, said this week, basing his comments on reports from the Paris, Brussels, and Stockholm offices.

Meanwhile, Monogram's advance playdate totals for the next eight weeks will establish a new all-time high for the company, according to W. Ray Johnston, president of the company. The "March for Monogram" playdate drive, last week, had the Denver office in first place, Washington second, Omaha third.

Edward A. Golden, sales manager, announced the following circuit deals for the company's 1939-40 program: G. C. S. Circuit, and Indiana-Illinois Theatres, Chicago; Switow Amusement Corporation, Indianapolis; Popkin and Ringer and Warner Brothers, Los Angeles; H. and F. Theatres, Memphis; Warner Brothers Management Corporation and Consolidated Amusement Corporation, New York; Affiliated Theatres, Inc., Omaha.

MGM "Boom Town" Plans

An MGM announcement says that Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, and Hedy Lamarr will have leading roles in "Boom Town," one of MGM's most ambitious production items of the year." Sam Zimbalist will produce.

It was also announced that Father Flanagan, of Boys' Town, Nebraska, will appear in an MGM picture, sequel to its "Boys' Town." Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, of the first picture, will appear in the sequel.

The company has signed Charles Friedman as writer, producer, and director.

Alexander Korda, head of London Films, arriving in New York this week for conferences with United Artists officials, said his production plans, disrupted by the war, are indefinite. He will supervise the shooting of exterior shots in the Arizona desert and the Grand Canyon for the "Thief of Bagdad" which will complete the picture. The war prevented making these scenes in Africa as was planned.

Zoltan Korda, brother of the producer, will direct the sequences with three members of the cast, June Duprez, Sabu and John Justin.

Mr. Korda will confer with Murray Silverstone in Hollywood regarding his future plans. He said it was uncertain whether "The Jungle Boy," starring Sabu, would be made in Hollywood as he had contemplated.

Other United Artists product plans include announcements from James Roosevelt, head of Globe Productions, that he will produce a film on the life of Horace Mann, American educator; from the Argosy Corporation concerning the production of Eugene O'Neill's "The Long Voyage Home" for Walter Wanger Productions as one of its 1940-41 releases, and the acquisition of world distribution rights, outside the United States and Canada, for a new feature length film to be made from footage brought back from Africa and the Far East by the Armand Denis-Leila Roosevelt expedition. The Denis-Roosevelt expedition's last picture was "Dark Rapture."

INCREASE IN NEGRO FILM PRODUCTION

Thirty-three new projects aiming to service the 388 all-Negro motion picture theatres in 175 cities in 28 States are planned for this year. Negro film houses have increased 67% in two years and this accounts for the spurt in the production of Negro pictures.

Goldberg and Port have announced that they will make three high budgeted films in addition to the 12 pictures scheduled for release by International Roadshows. The Aetna Film Corporation is producing a mystery melodrama centered on the activities of a Negro newspaper. Argus Pictures is also working on a Negro production.

Jed Buell has announced the incorporation of Dixie National Pictures, Inc., which will produce and distribute Negro films. The first productions planned are a series of eight all-Negro pictures. Exchanges will be opened in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Dallas and Charlotte, N. C. Six Negro pictures are being made in the East at the Seiden Studio in New Jersey by Jubilee Pictures Corporation.

Zanuck To Film "Married a Nazi"

Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th Century-Fox production chief disclosed last weekend in Hollywood that he will film "I Married a Nazi." The story, by Oscar Schisgall, ran serially in Liberty Magazine.

In a further realignment of his production staff Mr. Zanuck has appointed Fred Kohlmar, his production assistant, an associate producer. Mr. Kohlmar was formerly a writer for Samuel Goldwyn and recently a producer at Columbia.

Independents Active

World Pictures Corporation has announced that 12 featurettes will be released during the next six months. Irvin Shapiro, general manager of the company, said that the reception given by exhibitors to "Ski Chase" and "The City," three reel subjects released recently by the company, had led to the decision to release at least 12 more films of that type.

J. S. Berkson and B. H. Mills, former Republic franchise holders, have announced that their recently formed Screencraft Pictures will release "War Angels," a series of six Tim McCoy westerns and a series of six "Thrill-O-Dramas."

New Goldwyn Suit In UA Dispute

In a 154-page complaint filed last Thursday in federal court in New York, Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., named United Artists Corporation, London Film Productions, Ltd., and Alexander Korda as defendants and asked the court to adjudicate that the Goldwyn distribution contract had been legally cancelled. The complaint also sought an injunction against United Artists and its employees to restrain them from interfering with the plaintiffs and with any company which the plaintiffs may deal with in the distribution of Goldwyn films for the period up to December 2, 1945, the normal expiration date of his contract with United Artists.

On the same day, William Bondy, federal judge, rendered a decision refusing to dismiss the suit of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., for $54,559 and interest against United Artists. The court decided that Mr. Goldwyn was the legal owner of a claim for payments under the Silverstone Plan and had not assigned it to the Bank of America as claimed by United Artists.

Mr. Goldwyn's complaint filed on Thursday was in most respects similar to one recently dismissed by the chancery court in Delaware for failure to include Mr. Korda among the necessary defendants. Major differences between the two suits are the inclusion of London Film Productions and Mr. Korda as defendants and a demand for damages against UA for preventing release of the film, "The Westerner," through other distributors.

A motion for a pre-trial examination of Mr. Korda was filed Friday and the day set as next Tuesday.

Three basic charges are made by Mr. Goldwyn in his suit as grounds for considering his contract cancelled. The first claim is that UA breached its distributing agreement with the plaintiffs by sanctioning the organization and membership of the Alexander Korda Film Productions, Ltd., as an associate producer.

The second charge made is that UA failed to make a payment of $54,559 and interest under the Silverstone Plan to Mr. Goldwyn and compelled him to bring suit.

Finally, the complaint contends that UA "maliciously and wrongfully" conceived the plan of driving the plaintiffs out of business. In this respect Mr. Goldwyn set forth about 14 examples of tactics employed by UA to effect this result, such as discrimination against the plaintiffs in the distribution and advertising of their films, the issuance of unfavorable press releases and efforts to obtain resignations by Goldwyn employees.

The complaint describes frustrated attempts by Mr. Goldwyn to secure release of "The Westerner" by Paramount or Warner Brothers. After refusal by these companies to distribute the film because of threatened litigation, Mr. Golwyn failed to obtain the release by any other company and was forced to turn the film over to UA, the complaint charges.

To Build Exchange

Paramount will erect a new exchange building at Oliver Street and Garrison Avenue in St. Louis. The project will cost approximately $75,000.

"WIND" BRINGS WIDE ASSORTMENT OF READJUSTMENTS FOR SUBSEQUENTS

Unique Booking Arrangements, Long Holdovers Affecting Flow of Product in Many Situations; Others Remain Clear

"Gone with the Wind," that $5,000,000 investment of cinematic color, sound and action from which "at least" a $25,000,000 gross income is anticipated by its sponsors, this week rounded out its second month in circulation, and with it come many of the after-effects and upsets in the distribution-exhibition system that were expected from this single piece of unprecedented product.

"Jams" and Unique Arrangements

Its extended runs, its holdovers bring threats in many places of a "log-jam" of product; in others, the "jam" is at hand; in still others, there will be the normal flow of releases to theatres because of many unique arrangements in bookings, in placing.

With 400 individual theatre bookings in 368 cities now dated by MGM exchanges, the picture's long runs are beginning to create difficulties for many a subsequent run whose programs depend for new feature product on the first runs which have varying clearance over them, and which new product is awaiting dates at first runs that are continuing with "Wind" holdovers.

Subsequents in other places are relieved of such product availability difficulties because "Wind" did not get its first run in the town's first run theatre but was booked into "moveover" or other later runs.

"Seven Times an 'A' Film"

In still other situations, subsequents stand to benefit by first-run "Wind" holdovers, getting quicker clearance on product "displaced" by "Wind's" extended runs—some statistician calculating that "GWTW" is seven times an "A" picture in that it has, for example, taken the place of seven typical "A" pictures in terms of effect on playing time, at its Broadway Capitol, New York run.

One very tangible effect of "Wind" on subsequent runs in smaller places is that it is beginning to show a draining of the small town's available amusement money, where the family budget is "blown in" on "Wind," leaving nothing or little for "Wind's" competitors until the family pocketbook is replenished.

Among the most unusual situations are the bookings at subsequents as far down the clearance line as fourth runs, to avoid upsetting local clearance schedules, such as in Dallas and Houston, the pattern of readjustment necessarily being shaped according to local conditions and schedules.

Selling Away from Own

Another unusual situation finds Loew's, Inc., distributor of the production, actually selling other new and important product away from many of its own theatres, to competitors, to avoid "jamming" its Metro product at those Loew houses where "Wind" is holding forth in extended fashion.

Shifting of bookings in Kansas City gives subsequents new product of MGM, Universal and others which they would not ordinarily have if "Wind" were not playing the first run Loew's Midland. Little discommodation to the subsequents is expected in that city.

Along the Pacific Coast, over which Fox West Coast predominates, little effect is expected because FWC usually has more than one theatre in each town.

BRANDT SUGGESTS "QUALITY" CHAIN

Harry Brandt, owner of the New York circuit bearing his name and president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, who has spoken often and widely against the Neely bill, radio competition, the starring of players of doubtful office value, and other issues, on Wednesday proposed a "special circuit to be set aside for the playing of 'big' pictures". Such a circuit would have one theatre in each key city, he said; each theatre would play about four pictures a year, at top motion picture admissions. He favored this type of run for pictures like "Gone With the Wind".

Long runs of "Wind" are creating no difficulty in Seattle because of the number of theatres operated by local circuits controlling product.

In Philadelphia, however, independents are beginning to worry over a threatened product shortage because "Wind" has been playing five weeks at two first runs, causing a "piling up" of pictures by the dominating Warner Circuit, and exchange men there predict the shortage will become acute in another month.

Buffalo independents also are complaining over a "Wind" product "jam," with many turning to independent producers for programs, as in many another town. Some owners have even resorted to five-year-old reissues.

Await Shortage in Detroit

Detroit first runs appear to be "holding back" the larger new pictures, and although the subsequents have not as yet felt any pinch, a shortage is due, they feel.

St. Louis, too, is experiencing difficulties in its subsequent run field although some relief came when Loew's sold away two pictures to second runs competing with the first. Columbia also is understood to be ready to sell away some of its films from the first run, relieving the shortage at five second runs.

Cleveland is another place where Loew's placed "Wind" in a second run, at its own Stillman, allowing a steady flow to subsequents from the first run.

In another key situation, Boston, Loew's sold two new pictures away from the first run Orpheum and State. In both "Wind" has been holding forth now for five weeks, day-and-date. Loew's also sold way in New Haven, to Mullins and Pinanski, relieving any "jam" there.

New York Situation

In New York, the key first runs, the Radio City Music Hall, the Roxy, Strand, Capitol, Paramount, and Rivoli, have played only 71 pictures in 25 weeks. If these houses had changed once a week, about 150 pictures would have been used in the same period. Some Broadway theatres have used as first runs pictures which ordinarily would be second or later runs.

There have been no upsets yet in Milwaukee because of "Wind" and for a reason that holds for many another place: Anticipating an extended run in Milwaukee, as in other places, exhibitors running in competition to "Wind" gave attention to their booking schedules long before "Wind" arrived to offset the "Wind" extensions.

"Wind" in Cincinnati is at a "moveover" house, where it has rounded out its ninth week, but at Dayton other product is being held back by the Loew theatres.

A few independent houses in the Western Pennsylvania area have been thrown off dating schedule because of "Wind," but, generally, there are no difficulties, because a large number of theatres are in the Comerford Circuit.

"Wind" in Chicago is at holdover houses, but the Loop theatres continue, as they have for years, to slow up subsequents by their general policy of holdovers.

Holdovers are causing much trouble in and around Lincoln, Neb., with R. R. Livingston, of the Capitol, the chief complainant.

Eight Features Held Up

In Waterbury, Conn., eight features are being held from subsequents because of "Wind's" extension, but in New London and surrounding towns the effect is felt to a lesser degree, with closed Loew and Warner houses in Torrington, Meriden and New Britain reopened to relieve the product jam for subsequents.

RKO's circuit of 100-odd theatres are experiencing no difficulties in a supply of product because of "Wind's" extensions, John J. O'Connor, circuit chief, said Wednesday, but he did disclose that the holdovers are starting to cause "plenty of congestion elsewhere," no names given.

Speaking for independents, as an independent circuit operator and as head of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, Harry Brandt said Wednesday that while "'Wind' holdovers haven't affected us yet, there's no telling how they'll affect us later."

Loew's circuit executive, Joe Vogel, admitted that "releases are late," but held that they're not running much more than two weeks behind. "To alleviate the 'jam'—and it's not so much of a 'jam' now that we're doing it—we've sold pictures to our opposition, in about 15 cities, including 'Strictly Dishonorable' in many places; 'Ninotchka'; 'Chump at Oxford,' with Laurel and Hardy; 'Balalaika,' as in Boston, a typical situation; and, 'I Take This Woman,' in Providence and about 20 other places."

Slow-up for Subsequents

For the 30 New York-and-New Jersey independent theatres of Fabian, a home office spokesman, in New York, said that "while our houses have not had any product difficulty common sense will tell you that four and five week runs will slow things up for the subsequents."

George P. Skouras, president of the 62 Skouras Theatres in the east, declared: "The extended runs and holdovers on 'Gone With the Wind' are bound to cause a product jam. And the industry is bound to suffer. It is good for that picture, but bad for the industry. I do not believe in raising admission prices and charging every last penny possible. The practice of holding over pictures too long can be a destructive force in the industry."

New York home office spokesmen for Universal, Columbia, United Artists, Warners, declared that their distribution and releasing is experiencing no important trouble in getting playdates at this time.

Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, recognized a "jamming-up" of the normal flow of product be-

Sees Business Up In London Houses

Neighborhood motion picture theatres in London are doing satisfactory business, but the big theatres in the fashionable West End are still hard hit by the war, according to Richard Ford of Odeon Theatres, Ltd., the Oscar Deutsch circuit. Mr. Ford, who arrived in New York last Thursday to study the television and motion picture situations, said the British legitimate theatre was enjoying an excellent year.

$2,000,000 Lost in Week

"The English motion picture industry lost 500,000 pounds (about $2,000,000) when the Government ordered all theatres closed during the first week of war," Mr. Ford said, because the first week of September, when the war broke out, customarily starts the fall season.

The product jam now has been adjusted, Mr. Ford said, and all product booked has been shown.

"The most preposterous regulations against air raids have been relaxed," Mr. Ford said. He cited two examples. In Derby, when theatres first were allowed to open, only alternate rows could be occupied. A North London theatre was taken over as an air raid shelter, yet theatres generally were closed as unsafe in raids.

In addition, precautions have cost theatres considerable expense, including wiring over all glass fixtures, he added.

Bus Service Curtailed

Theatres now are in full operation except for closing hours, according to Mr. Ford. Gasoline conservation has reduced motor bus service, and so affects attendance. The theatres in the West End were the latest to reopen. Leicester Square section has been particularly affected because there are 10,000 seats in this locality but no place to go in an air raid.

"In the event of warning of an air raid," Mr. Ford said, "the show goes on. The theatre manager goes to the stage and explains that the people may go if they wish. In one typical audience of 500, only six persons left. I believe the proportion leaving is about 1 per cent. Of course, the percentage would rise if there were actual raids."

Blackout regulations, he said, are more severely enforced than in Paris or Berlin, "but the neighborhood cinemas are doing good business if they have the right films."

"Musicals and other light entertainment and dramas are liked, if they are good." British comedies are drawing very well, he added, and to the British patron star value is important.

British Exhibitors Skeptical of Plan

Following last week's interview with the Board of Trade, British exhibitors remain doubtful whether the forthcoming legislation will assure a sufficiency of product. They believe the Government plans for a monetary quota are irreconcilable with the retention of the exhibitors quota on a footage basis.

It is expected that the twelve and a half per cent quota will be retained for exhibitors and that a maximum of 30 American sponsored films will be allowed annually. The Government will introduce the new bill in April, possibly bridging the interim period by an order in council.

Einfeld Leaves for Coast

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers was to leave Friday for the coast. He has been in New York since January 12th.

Industry Stocks In British Plan

Great Britain on Monday enforced the second stage of her wartime conscription of wealth, taking control of individual British holdings in 60 securities on the United States market. Included were three amusement stocks, Loew's, Inc., Paramount Pictures and Radio Corporation of America.

The first step in the program for calling up dollars for war duty was the registration of capital at the beginning of the war. The conscription was interpreted in Wall Street as a logical move to insure orderly liquidation.

The New York Agency of the Bank of Montreal will act for the Bank of England in the matter of holding actual securities of the list of 60 issues as are now in this country. As securities are sent from England the agency will assume jurisdiction. As matters now stand British owners of dollar securities are free to sell their holdings, except that the proceeds must be turned over to the Bank of England, which in turn, is to pay such holders in pounds sterling.

While the order theoretically applies to all residents of the United Kingdom, a cable from London to the New York Times, says that, after repeated complaints to the British Government, Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, has succeeded in getting exemption for all citizens of the United States now living in England.

Thompson Cancels Plans

Orville Thompson, president of Retsama Film Productions, has announced the resignation of Henry Bellous as producer and director and the cancellation of plans to film the Russian novel, "Chocolate." Plans calling for Mae Murray to make two films also have been cancelled.

Would Rent His Houses To MGM

cause of holdovers and extended runs, led by "Gone With the Wind."

Ned E. Depinet, vice president for RKO Radio, said, "Eventually there will be some delay in product release, just as when 'Snow White' played for three or four weeks, instead of the usual one. But it will not be serious. Pictures will all get their normal playing time, even if delayed somewhat. This is one of those things which confuse momentarily the trend of things, but it is quickly adjusted afterwards."

Richards Offers Theatres

Reporting that "some exhibitors do not wish to pay the 70 per cent rental which we require for 'Gone With the Wind,'" a home office spokesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in New York, Wednesday, admitted that Thomas J. Connors, the company's eastern and southern sales manager is now "down South" talking a "Wind" deal with E. V. Richards, who operates many theatres in many towns in many southeastern states. The story is circulating around Broadway that when Mr. Richards heard MGM's price of "seventy per cent," he countered with an offer to rent all of his 70-odd theatres in the southeast to the distributor and let them show "Wind" as tenants.

Among the more important film-term rejections by Mr. Richards in recent years were those presented by RKO for "Snow White"—at 50 per cent rental; and, Universal's program for 1939-40. In both cases the distributors sold away from the Richards houses, to his competitors.

Western Electric Nets 16 Millions

Western Electric, parent of Electric Research Products, Inc., and a half dozen other subsidiaries, this week reported a net profit of $16,476,086 in 1939 as compared with $5,734,033 for the preceding year. Dividends were paid amounting to $12,600,000 or $2.10 per share. After charges and reserves of $3,026,000, the company's surplus at December 31st was $18,204,000, an increase for the year of $850,000.

The total investments of the company at December 31st amounted to $58,383,000, an increase of $5,550,000. These investments consist, for the most part, of the company's holdings in subsidiary and associated companies. At the end of the year Western Electric's interest in subsidiary companies was revalued to include provision for $1,271,000 further amortization of patents and good-will of the Teletype Corporation and for a reserve of $1,750,000 to cover possible losses to ERPI which may result from the European war and other contingencies.

Of the company's earnings before taxes, 34 per cent was required to meet federal, state and local taxes of $8,438,000, an increase of $2,166,000 over 1938. Taxes for 1939 were equivalent to 3.2 per cent on the average investment, and amounted to $1.41 per share of stock, or $5.26 per week per employee. Social Security taxes for Old Age Pensions and Unemployment Insurance paid by the company amounted to $2,740,000.

$1,213,976 FOR MAGAZINE FILM ADS

FOUR of the eight large motion picture companies spending more than $100,000 a year in magazine advertising paid $1,213,976 for that type of space in 1939—compared with $861,377 in 1938, $694,880 in 1937, $727,702 in 1936, and $936,239 in 1935.

The four motion picture companies—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Warner Brothers—were included in the list of 342 advertisers who spent more than $100,000 in three advertising media—magazines, radio, and farm papers—in 1939. The 342 companies spent a total of $204,361,906, which compares with $181,904,720 spent by 322 over-$100,000 advertisers in 1938. The figures were assembled for Printers' Ink.

Newspaper advertising was not included in the survey because no figures were available on total newspaper advertising linage.

Leading advertisers spent $82,055,797 in 1939 on the three national radio networks: National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System. In 1938 the figure was $69,248,927 spent by the big advertisers. For the first four years of the survey the four film companies spent nothing on radio advertising because motion picture product and personalities are given radio time free on account of the entertainment they offer on the air through star appearances; in 1939 Paramount spent $13,022 for radio advertising and Twentieth Century-Fox $13,083.

As in the case of radio network advertising, the first large expenditure of film advertising in farm papers was placed this year by MGM. The sum was $29,294.

Eastman Kodak Company, Philco Radio & Television Corporation and the Radio Corporation of America, the other advertisers listed in the table, spent a total of $1,970,663 in the three media in 1939, as against $2,529,801 in 1938. These companies have been large users of radio time and Philco and RCA both spend money each year in farm papers.

The total advertising expenditure in magazines of the four film companies listed was $1,213,976 in 1939 and $949,137 in 1938. Eastman Kodak, Philco and RCA spent $1,292,690 in magazines in 1939 and $1,528,332 in 1938.

In 1939, according to the Printers' Ink survey, MGM topped the list of film company advertisers with a total expenditure of $474,539. Twentieth Century-Fox was second with $307,233. Paramount and Warner Brothers followed with $285,556 and $208,736, respectively. In 1938 Paramount was the biggest advertiser with $369,454, considerably above the second company for that year, Twentieth Century-Fox, $174,482.

Billings of the NBC network for 1939 were listed at $45,244,354; CBS, $34,539,665, and Mutual, $3,329,782. In 1938 the respective figures were: NBC, $41,462,679; CBS, $27,345,397, and Mutual, $2,329,782.

Forty-one national advertisers spent over $1,000,000 in the three media. RCA dropped off the over-one-million dollar list to $975,429. The list is headed by Procter & Gamble Company, $11,256,212, the only company spending over ten million. Second on the list is General Foods.

STUDIOS, UNION LOCKED OVER PAY; "FOUR A'S" AID THEATRE ORGANIZING

New Meeting Awaited in Hollywood After Session Ends with Call for More Data; Other Union Moves

Deadlocked, as expected, but with negotiations merely postponed and the issue still not submitted to the American Arbitration Association, Hollywood labor leaders and producers were to meet again soon on the question whether the studio labor unions should relinquish the general 10 per cent wage increase which they wrung from the producers last fall.

Leaders met in futile session last Thursday and Friday. Representatives of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions attempted to prove that wage readjustments must be made "at the top" (among stars, directors, writers, executives, and so on) rather than among low-wage workers. The producers' representatives set forth studio costs, revenue decline, and the like, to prove that studios cannot afford to maintain the wage increases.

"More Detailed Data"

The Friday meeting ended with this statement signed by the producers' committee, headed by Y. Frank Freeman of Paramount, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association:

"The meeting adjourned until such time as both groups have prepared more detailed data for the next meeting."

The meeting followed an agreement by the unions, made at the granting of the wage increases last fall, that they would examine the producers' case for relinquishment of the raise given studio unions of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, other AFL studio unions, and those in the "Big Four" basic studio pact. The union leaders, headed by William Bioff, head of the AFL Conference, at that time declared they would not give up the increase. Last week, after the conference, Bioff remarked:

"We are listening to the producers' side of the story, and will hear them out. The union stand remains the same, and any sacrifices to be made must come from persons getting $500 weekly, and upward. The little fellow is going to keep his 10 per cent raise."

The executive council of the IATSE was meeting at the same time in Miami, Florida; and, despite rumors, it apparently took no action on Bioff, who, on Monday was extradited to Illinois on a 1922 jail term charge and faces trial on May 28th on a federal income tax indictment. Bioff, before going into the conference with the producers, had received a telegram of "support and confidence" from George Browne, IATSE president. (See page 8.)

The producers' representatives are said to have shown the labor leaders the audited reports from eight large companies, showing a decline in domestic and foreign revenues.

On Wednesday studios starting signing contracts with the Screen Publicists' Guild affecting 200 publicity department employees in 14 studios. The contracts are retroactive to October 9th.

Philadelphia Strike Action

The Philadelphia unit of the American Federation of Musicians, striking against the Warner Brothers theatres in that city, is attempting to gain the support of the federation nationally.

40,000 NOW IN IATSE RANKS

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees now has 40,000 members, in 840 studio and exhibition locals, in this country and Canada, the executive board disclosed last week, while meeting in Miami. It was reported that the board, among the things it considered in closed session, has decided upon television as the next field in which it will conduct an organizational drive; the drive will be based upon its American Federation of Labor charter, giving it authority over labor crafts in all theatrical fields. The board set June 2nd, in Minneapolis, for the Alliance biennial convention.

George E. Browne, IATSE president, attended the executive board meeting.

Detroit Installation

The Detroit projectionists Local 199 installed officers at its annual banquet Wednesday, at the Book Cadillac hotel. Officers include Frank Kinsora, president; T. J. Kirby, vice-president; Roy R. Ruben, financial secretary; James P. Murtaugh, treasurer.

Sue St. Louis Union Receivers

In St. Louis last week the Eden Theatre Company, operator of the Fox theatre, a first-run, asked permision of the circuit court to sue the receivers of projectionists Local 143 for $75,000, for damages resulting from picketing of the house by the union.

TMAT Loses in Massachusetts

The Massachusetts State Labor Relations Board, meeting at Springfield, last week dismissed a charge by the Theatrical Agents, Managers, and Treasurers Union against the Western Masachusets Theatres, Inc., operators of the Strand theatre, Holyoke.

New Jersey Amalgamation

American Federation of Labor affiliates in Bergen County, New Jersey, are forming a co-operative association to be known as the Central Labor Union of that county. Lester Clutterbuck of Local 462, of the IATSE, was elected temporary vice-president. The organization is expected to have about 35,000 members.

Providence Theatre Signs

The RKO Albee theatre, in Providence, R. I., has signed an agreement with the Local B-129 of the IATSE, for "front office" personnel. Loew's State was the first of the city's houses to sign with the union. The agreement raises salaries, and runs from Feb. 15, this year, to Nov. 1, 1941.

Theatrical Employees' Union, Local B-18, of San Francisco, an Alliance affiliate, has negotiated a new two-year contract with seven first-run theatres, covering ushers, doormen, and cashiers. The contract provides slight pay raises for doormen and cashiers, and provides for overtime wages after 42 hours weekly.

Actors' Parent Group Orders Locals to Work in Vaudeville Only with Members of Variety Artists Guild

In a new move to help organization of its newest union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' group this week directed all branches of its member unions to instruct their members to work in the vaudeville field only with paid-up members of the American Guild of Variety Artists, which the Four A's chartered last summer to succeed the expelled American Federation of Actors.

Third Executive Secretary

The guild has been in organizational difficulties. Two executive secretaries have resigned; and, last week, another, Hoyt S. Haddock, assumed office. Mr. Haddock is a labor consultant, with experience in other fields. He announced that the guild would not have to borrow more money from other Four A's unions, that it had about $18,000 in the treasury, that it would proceed to corral all the estimated 15,000 variety performers; that it would organize outdoor performers; that it had obtained agreements with 350 outlets in California, affecting 1,000 members.

The Four A's resolution, voted last week, is expected to be particularly applicable to personal appearances of screen stars, members of the Screen Actors Guild. Thus, theatres with stage shows would be affected.

The variety artists' guild code of fair practices, tentatively proposed to theatre circuits several months ago, is in abeyance.

The guild was to start negotiations with the management of the Roxy Theatre, New York, on Friday. The theatre has a large stage show.

Officer Slate Is Set

The guild will hold its first election Sunday afternoon at the Piccadilly Hotel, New York. Nominees for office are unopposed. They are Phil Irving, for president; Dave Fox, first vice-president; Peter Wells, second vice-president; Hazen Scott, third vice-president; Michael Lewis, fourth vice-president; Helen Sanford, fifth vice-president; Billy Glason, recording secretary; Sam Kramer, treasurer.

The meeting will also adopt a constitution.

Present will be Lawrence Tibbett, president of the American Guild of Musical Artists, John J. Sullivan, secretary of the New York Hotel Trades Council, and Michael Garriga, vice-president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance.

Ed Harrison, former press contact for the American Federation of Actors, has been appointed the variety artists' guild publicity head.

In Hollywood, the Four A's organizational benefit, "Gambol of the Stars," was postponed from February 22nd to March 14th. Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors' Guild, is chairman.

Hollywood agents have affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Walter Trask is president of the newly chartered union, the Amusement Agencies Employes Union, Local 22202. Other officers are Al Wager, vice-president; Lloyd Skeels, executive secretary; and Norman Marsh, treasurer.

The Sign, Scenic, and Painters Union, Local 831, of Hollywood, is joining the AFL, it was reported.

U.S. GETS MAJORS' TRUST ANSWERS; NEW SUIT FILED, ANOTHER THREATENS

Replies Are Rushed to Washington Where Legal Corps Is Preparing for Opening of Trial on May 1st

Four of the large company defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution—RKO, United Artists, Warner Brothers, and Columbia—filed their first 24 answers last week, in federal court, New York, to the Justice Department's 59 interrogatories. The answers, not held confidential though revealing financial figures of some of the companies for the first time, were immediately rushed to the Justice Department's Washington office, where a legal corps is preparing for the May 1st opening of the long delayed trial.

Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox submitted their answers Wednesday. Universal's answers were served Monday with the request that they be withheld from public knowledge until March 1st.

Seven RKO Companies File

Seven RKO companies and Radio Keith-Orpheum, the parent corporation, filed answers to the Government's first 24 queries. These companies were RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Pathe News, Inc., Van Beuren Corporation, RKO Proctor, RKO Midwest and Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

The RKO answers revealed, among other things, the gross and net profits for Radio-Keith-Orpheum for the following years: 1935: gross $1,212,389, net profit $3,154; 1936: gross $2,234,423, net profit $1,161,168; 1937: gross $1,679,437, net profit $771,878; 1938: gross $1,402,602, net profit $273,49.

United Artists' answers declared that 20,000 out of an authorized issuance of 32,000 shares are held by five companies and individuals equally. It revealed that its gross income from 1935 through 1938 was as follows: 1935, $10,554,521; 1936, $9,707,990; 1937, $12,909,149; 1938, $11,746,985.

The company set forth an itemized statement of the 19 films distributed by it during the 1936-37 season, with the number of exhibitions of each picture, and the amount grossed.

Interest in Wanger Productions

There is no outstanding fixed indebtedness, no current loans against it, United Artists revealed. It reported that the only company in which it has any ownership interest is Walter Wanger Productions. In this holding, UA holds 12,500 out of 15,000 shares of preferred stock, and 1,200 Class B common shares.

Warner Brothers and Columbia answered a group of questions covering their financial setup, the names of creditors and stockholders, and their ownership interests. Several questions referring to creditors' names, gross and net profits, and stockholders' lists, were not filed, but were expected to be given to the Government for confidential use.

Columbia stated that its fixed indebtedness was $1,125,000; Warner Brothers regarded the question as confidential.

Warner Brothers listed 38 companies in which it had an interest. It was stated that the only company which holds any stock in it is Jules Brulatour, Inc., with 50 shares.

Columbia listed parties, in production, who had an interest in it, thus: Celebrity Productions, Inc., 100 shares; Frank R. Capra, 15 shares, as voting trust; David Loew, 18 shares, as a voting trust; Louis B. Mayer, 422 shares, as a voting trust.

Paramount treated 11 questions as confidential. In the others it revealed three companies who as creditors have placd directors on the Paramount board. These are the Manufacturers Trust Company, Allied Owners Corp. and Adams Express Co. Fox's financial figures revealed a complete list of its stockholders, the largest being the Chase National Bank and General Theatres Equipment Corp.

On Monday, upon receipt of the answers of RKO, Columbia, Warner Brothers and United Artists, to almost half of the Government's 59 interrogatories, William P. Farnsworth, head of the New York anti-trust division of the Justice Department, carried them to Washington.

It was understood Government statisticians would compare the figures revealed by the companies with those gathered by the Department.

Even as the Department of Justice case proceeded, observers in Washington reported that it was considering the recent Department of Commerce report, which contains a plan for amicability between the industry and the Government.

March 1st Is Deadline

Though the majors have answered 24 of the Government's 59 interrogatories, they must answer all by March 1st, under their agreement with the Government, it was disclosed last week. The answers were to be "staggered" thus: 15 more answers to be due on Saturday, and the final 20 on March 1st.

Confidential answers in these groups were to be served on the Government separately.

The Government's answers to the major's interrogatories are also due on March 1st.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, who will hear the case, lectured the Government attorneys, two weeks ago, on their "arbitrary" actions and lack of cooperation.

Latest in the procession of major company defendant executives to undergo pre-trial examination in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution, was Cliff Work, Universal studio head, who was questioned on Tuesday in New York Federal Court. He testified for two hours on Universal talent loans, on the company's production planning, and on deals with independent producers.

The last witness last week, testifying last Thursday, William Scully, Universal sales chief, declared that his company was not at a disadvantage in selling product to major-affiliated theatres, even though Universal could not offer the same advantages that the others presumably could.

Major company theatre affiliates purchase product on quality alone, he testified, in five hours of questioning.

For the 36 key cities named by the Government, Mr. Scully detailed the houses entitled to first run on Universal product.

He was questioned closely on first run showings in Brooklyn's Albee and Loew's Metropolitan theatres.

CRICK ELECTED SYDNEY MAYOR

Stanley Crick, formerly managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox in Australia, has been elected Lord Mayor of Sydney. Mr. Crick, who was succeeded by Clay Hake, has film interests in Australia.

$279,000 Action Against Large Companies Launched in New Jersey; Defense Loses Plea in Pittsburgh Case

The independents were one up this week in their continued anti-trust suit attacks on the large companies. New Jersey owners sued the distributors and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. In Nebraska, another action was threatened by the independent Frank Hollingsworth.

The majors also lost ground in Pennsylvania, where a petition for dismissal of a pending action was denied.

$279,000 Sought in New Jersey

Suit was brought Monday against the eight companies and against the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and Will H. Hays, its president, in United States District Court at Newark by two West Orange corporations, which alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws and the Clayton act and sought damages of $279,000.

The plaintiffs are the Westor Theatres, Inc., which operated the Windsor Theatre in West Orange until 1939, and the Janbert Amusement Corporation, present operator of the theatre. They charged that they were forced to accept block booking and that it damaged the first-named corporation by $78,000 and the latter by $15,000. Triple damages were asked.

The company defendants are Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Paramount Pictures, United Artists, Columbia Pictures Corporation, R.K.O. Radio Pictures, Loew's, Inc., and Universal Corporation.

Nebraska Threat

Nebraska's second anti-trust suit against the majors, which the complaining exhibitor indicates will be filed in a few days, will be based on Frank Hollingsworth's action against Fox Midwest circuit in Beatrice, a situation where he declares the F.M. Rivoli is contracted to play 359 films in one house each year, while his two theatres haven't enough film to run. The other anti-trust suit is Ralph Goldberg's against Par-Tri-States in Omaha.

Majors Lose Plea

In Pittsburgh, United States District Judge R. M. Gibson denied a motion of the defendants asking for dismissal of the $150,000 anti-trust suit against the eight major companies and others by United Exhibitors, Inc., Penn State Theatre Corporation and others. The court ruled defense answers must be filed within 15 days.

New Jersey Case Trial

Trial of the Vineland, N. J., anti-trust case writ decision which was reversed last week by the United States circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia, will get under way next month.

The case is considered important, inasmuch as a decree granting a temporary injunction against the distributors was reversed upon the appeal of the defendants. The Vineland theatre charged that it was unable to get first-run product and named Warner Brothers Theatres and major distributors in its complaint. Judge Kirkpatrick ordered the injunction based on evidence in affidavits only. The United States circuit court has ordered the case now to be heard on its merits.

ALLIED PICKS CHICAGO FOR NATIONAL MEET

Max Cohen's New York Group Reorganizing; Pacific Northwest Exhibitors Convene

The national Allied States Association will hold its 1940 convention in Chicago, the date to be determined by Jack Kirsch, president of the Illinois Allied. A statement from the national association's Washington offices called Chicago "the ideal convention city" and predicted a record gathering.

At the National Allied directors' meeting in Washington, several weeks ago, Detroit had been selected, but Michigan Allied subsequently yielded to the argument that a greater attendance could be expected at Chicago.

The Illinois Allied is expected to hold its annual convention early in March.

Reorganize Albany Allied

The committee is to meet with Albany members in March, to elect new officers.

Mitchell Conery, of Ravenna, former Albany vice-president, and several others broke from the New York Allied several weeks ago, over opposition to the Neely Bill.

Mr. Souhami said this week that the Albany unit still had more than 40 members.

The former Allied Albany members this week deprecated possibility of "reorganization" by asserting that they represented virtually the total membership of the former Albany suit.

New York Allied will hold a statewide meeting on May 22nd and 23rd in Syracuse, and Mr. Cohen will be guest at a testimonial dinner closing the convention.

Northwest Exhibitors Meet

Exhibitors of the Pacific Northwest met Tuesday in Seattle to discuss affiliation of the newly formed Allied Exhibitors group with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners. Mr. Hone, executive secretary of the unit, presided. He will be in charge at a conference of Eastern Washington exhibitors in Spokane next Tuesday.

Ohio ITO Annual Meeting

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, meeting in annual session at Columbus next Wednesday and Thursday, will discuss cancellation, preferred playing time, and the newly formed Advertising Accessories corporation, which centralizes distribution of posters and accessories. The questions to be discussed were phrased thus in a notice to exhibitors:

"Are the film distributing companies living up to their cancellation promises?"

"Do you know that preferred playing time is not so generally demanded as it is in Ohio?"

"Will the new National Screen Accessories set-up benefit or harm exhibitors?"

Connecticut Bingo Law

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, on Tuesday in New Haven, discussed a plan to test the constitutionality of the state Bingo law, which allows others than theatres to use the game. Reporting for the Bingo committee was Adolph Johnson, and the budget committee Harry F. Shaw.

Executive Secretary Herman M. Levy reported on the power of the postal department to prevent exhibitors from placing circulars in home mail boxes.

Connecticut Allied Gains

Enrollment of 90 per cent of the state's independent exhibitors was claimed by E. Thornton Kelly, former field secretary of the Connecticut Allied, at a New Haven meeting last week.

The unit is to meet again next Tuesday, with A. M. Schuman presiding. Mr. Kelly is in Philadelphia as field man for Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania.

The Connecticut unit last week appointed a new grievance committee, on which are Joseph Reed, William Hoyt and Jack Schwartz.

Orders Educational Creditors To Meet

Referee John E. Joyce this week ordered a first meeting of creditors of Educational Pictures, Inc., for next Thursday in New York. Under terms of the order, creditors will elect a trustee, present their claims and examine company officials at that meeting.

E. W. Hammons, former president of Grand National Pictures and president of Educational; Bruno Weyers, vice-president; John R. Munn, director, and Walter Duke, attorney, were examined this week by the attorney for the trustee of Grand National.

Mr. Duke and Mr. Munn both defended a transaction under which Educational Pictures received 1,100,000 shares from Grand National, its subsidiary, in return for Educational assets. Mr. Hammons testified to a series of transactions through which Jeremiah D. McGuire, a creditor, received an assignment of Grand National rights to 10 films now being distributed to Twentieth Century-Fox.

Kline Heads Bookers

Harold Kline of the Cocalis Circuit has been elected president of the Motion Picture Bookers Club of New York. Mr. Arnswalder of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was named vice-president, Edward Susse, MGM, financial secretary; Ben Levine, United Artists, treasurer; Dora Fried, Producers Distributing Corporation, recording secretary, and Herb Richek, UA, sergeant-at-arms. Bernie Brooks, of the Rosenblatt-Welt theaters, and Dan Ponticelle, Warners, were voted trustees. Ed Richter and Harry Margolies of MGM, Max Fried of Warners and Henry Suchman were named to the board of directors. Dinner and the installation of officers will be held February 5th.

Handle Palestine Films

Distribution of the product of the Palestine Film Corporation, newly-formed producing company in Palestine, will be handled in this country by Roman Rebush and Al Geist. The first release is tentatively titled "On Guard."

"DOLLAR CLUB" RETURNS PROFITS

In the past year, the Loew's circuit "Dollar Club" idea is credited with $46,000 extra business through special ticket selling efforts by managers for regular shows. The 1938 total was $16,000. In the New York metropolitan circuit, 69 out of 70 managers participated in the extra effort which entitled them to special "dollar" certificates.

Mexican Academy Selects Awards

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

Mexico's new Academy of Cinematographic Arts and Sciences has made its first awards for what it judged to be the best made-in-Mexico picture, male and female player, director, scenarist and adapter of 1939. Trophies, statuettes and gold and silver medals, were awarded the winners. They are:

Picture, "La Noche de Los Mayas" (The Night of the Mayas); director, Fernando de Fuentes; female star, Isabela Corona; male star, Fernando Soler; female support, Emma Roldan; male support, Joaquin Pardave; scenarist, Fernando del Corral; adaptation, Juan Bustillo Oro; photography, Gabriel Figuaroa; sound, Roberto Rodriguez; settings, Jose Rodriguez Granada; music, Silvestre Revueltas, and Production, Gomez Muriel.

Religious Films Banned

The old government principle that pictures of a religious theme are strictly out for Mexico has been revived by the new board of censors that was appointed in place of the government's publicity department. The board upset the approval its predecessors gave for exhibitions of the French film, "St. Theresa of the Child Jesus". The censors held that this picture is religious propaganda.

Mexico's first private company for financing film producers has been founded in Mexico City by H. F. Wallenstein. The company has a capital of $65,000 and is to start functions in March.

Antonio Moreno, producer-director of the first talking picture made here, some 10 years ago, is in Mexico City for the reported purpose of organizing a producing company with American capital.

Active Mexico City cinemas have been increased in number to 71 with the opening of the Cine America, an 850 seat de luxe neighborhood theatre by the H. Echevarria circuit.

Complete Expensive Film

Mexico's most expensive picture, "Tiempos de Don Porfirio" (Don Porfirio's Days), which cost $40,000, has been completed and will be released in March. It concerns what many call the golden age of Mexico, 1880 to 1910.

A membership of 2,000 is announced by the National Cinematographic Workers Union. The members, says the union, enjoy a minimum daily wage of $1.35, twice that of most workers.

China, which is apparently looking to Mexico as an outlet for her films, has had exhibitions here of a film, the first, which is in Chinese and concerning Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

"WIND" STARTS RE-DATING; "PASSAGE" OPENS; WARNERS SET "VIRGINIA CITY"

Premiere at Boise Climaxes "Northwest Passage Days" Celebration; Double Opening at Reno and Virginia City

Field days on "big pictures were confined this week to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Northwest Passage," ushered in with parades and proclamations in Boise, Idaho, although new attention was given to many other productions already in the field.

Warner Brothers announced that "Virginia City" will have a double premiere at Reno and Virginia City, Nevada, on March 16th, and Columbia said that an intensive advertising campaign would precede the national release, on March 21st, of "Too Many Husbands." Among the pictures already playing pre-release engagements "Grapes of Wrath" has been set for 220 special engagements; "Gone With the Wind" is re-dated and many new dates announced as it continues to break records; "Pinocchio's" second week tops the first and "Of Mice and Men" receives a big advertising campaign. News this week of other pictures included a publicity project on the Paramount release, "Sidewalks of London," and Warner Brothers set New York and Hollywood openings of "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet."

The unprecedented number of extended runs and holdovers being received by an unusually large group of "big" pictures now showing is starting to bring exhibitor complaints from the field because of the delay of the availability dates for subsequent runs.

"Passage" Opens in Boise

"Northwest Passage," starring Spencer Tracy, had its world premiere Tuesday night in Boise, Idaho. The opening climaxed "Northwest Passage Days," which had been proclaimed by Governor C. A. Bottolfsen.

The opening was attended by Ilona Massey and Nat Pendleton, Isabel Jewell and Truman Bradley of the film's cast. Spencer Tracy did not make the trip owing to his shooting schedule on "Edison the Man." Senator Carl Brown was chairman of the premiere committee. He was assisted by state and city officials and editors of Boise's daily newspapers. The opening was broadcast from the lobby by station KIDO over a western network.

The day's celebration began when Mayor J. L. Straight and the Premiere Committee met a special Union Pacific train bearing the stars who came for the opening. A breakfast was held at the Owyhee Hotel. The stars then met the Governor and other officials. At noon a luncheon was held by the Governor at the Boise Hotel and was followed by a parade of high school students, dressed in costumes of the period of the picture.

To Open in 125 Cities

"Northwest Passage" opens in 125 cities this weekend. Following the premiere of the film, based on the Kenneth Roberts novel, at the Pinney theatre, Boise, the film began a day and date engagement at the State and Chinese theatres in Los Angeles on Wednesday.

Other key city holiday openings included: Poli, New Haven; Colonial, Reading; State and Orpheum, Boston; Poli, Hartford; Regent, Harrisburg; Poli, Worcester; Ohio, Columbus; Poli, Bridgeport; Loew's, Canton; Poli, Springfield; State, Louisville; Fox, San Francisco and Palace, Albany. On Friday the picture opens at the State, Minneapolis and Paramount, St. Paul., on Saturday at the Paramount, Salt Lake City and Poli, Waterbury.

FILMS EXEMPTED IN NEW CLIPPER RULES

An exception for all copyrighted material, including films, is made in the Government's newest interpretation of the neutrality act. Under new regulations no "articles or materials" can be sent via trans-Atlantic Clipper planes to belligerent countries.

Warner Brothers has set the world premiere of "Virginia City" at Reno and Virginia City, Nevada, for March 16th. Highlights of the celebration are to include a reception by Governor E. P. Carville to the 250 stars, correspondents and executives who are to arrive at Reno by special train from Los Angeles. The guests will take part in a Western parade to Virginia City, 22 miles away and there attend the opening in the town's single theatre, the Virginia City which seats 214. The premiere celebration will conclude with the "Virginia City Comstock Ball" to be held in the State House Auditorium in Reno.

The stars who are planning to attend the premiere include Errol Flynn, Ann Sheridan, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Alan Hale, Eddie Albert, Randolph Scott and Jean Parker. The film which co-stars Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins will be released March 23rd.

301 Dates for "Grapes"

A record total of 301 pre-release dates has been set for "Grapes of Wrath" by Twentieth Century-Fox. The picture will be shown in three theatres, day and date, in Los Angeles and will have double theatre engagements in the following cities: Des Moines, Roosevelt and Des Moines theatres; Miami, Surf and Lincoln theatres; Richmond, Va., State and Boyd and Kansas City, Uptown and Esquire.

Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, said that the advance showings will be backed by the largest cooperative advertising campaign ever undertaken. 350,000 lines of cooperative advertising have been set and 6,000 twenty-four sheet boards are to be used to supplement the newspaper advertising. This advertising is to be in addition to the increased space each theatre has guaranteed to take on the picture. The company said "Grapes of Wrath" is the most widely advertised production ever released by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Prices Increased

The film's mid-western premiere was held at the RKO Capitol in Cincinnati, February 21st. The price scale was 42c and 60c, which compares with regular prices of 35c and 42c. The picture followed a nine week run of "Gone With the Wind" which broke all Cincinnati records. George A. Delis, district manager of the Inter-State Theatres, Inc., which is headed by A. G. Constant of Steubenville said that "Grapes of Wrath" would open on March 1st at the Palace in Canton. He said there would be no reserved seats but the picture would play at advanced prices and an extended time had been guaranteed.

Columbia has announced a magazine advertising campaign to precede the national release on March 21st of "Too Many Husbands," starring Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas. The campaign is to open February 25th and run through March 15th. Advertisements on the picture are to appear in 21 fan and national magazines to reach an estimated 20,000,000 audience. The ads will feature a reproduction of a painting of the three stars by Bradshaw Crandall.

"Too Many Husbands" is based on Somerset Maugham's stage play and was directed by Wesley Ruggles from the screen play by Claude Binyon.

"Wind" Dates and Records

"Gone With the Wind" will begin return dates on March 2nd, the first engagement of this kind being at the downtown Majestic, Boston. The picture ran simultaneously at the State and Orpheum in Boston. Neighborhood runs are to begin late in March. March 8th "Wind" will play a return engagement in Harrisburg, at the Senate theatre. The picture also is to have a return at the Park, Reading.

MGM has decided not to start neighborhood runs until Easter, March 23rd or one week later. About 30 Loew houses in the New York area which were originally scheduled to play the film late in January now will start the picture at Eastertime. It is understood that Balaban & Katz is interested in arranging a deal for neighborhood runs in Chicago.

The Selznick International production continues to break records. On the basis of a gross at the box office of over $9,000,000 the picture has already made the negative cost of about $4,000,000 and has begun to roll up profit. The film is now playing in over 200 theatres in the United States and Canada. In the first eight weeks on Broadway "Wind" took in almost $800,000. The Astor has been averaging about $22,000 a week and the Capitol more than $70,000.

"Wind" dates in addition to those already published include:

March 24—State, Winona, Minn.

Total bookings now scheduled are 400 in 368 cities.

It was reported that someone conceived the idea of selling the rights to "Gone With the Wind" for a 39-week or 52-week radio serial for $1,000,000. MGM and Selznick International are said to be not interested in the idea, holding that radio broadcasts on the picture might interfere with its gross at the box office. Jock Whitney is reported to have been against selling the radio rights for $100,000 before the picture was released.

"PINOCCHIO" GAINS IN SECOND WEEK

Ann R. Montgomery, administrator of the estate of Susan Lawrence Davis who died last year, has filed a petition in the Birmingham, Ala., U. S. District Court for an injunction to restrain the Ritz theatre from showing "Gone With the Wind." The film began its run at that theatre on January 31st. The petition claims that copyrighted material from "An Authentic History of the Klu Klux Klan—1865-1877" written by Susan Davis and published in 1924 was used in the film without authorization.

The Capitol theatre in New York announced that "Wind" in the first eight weeks played to about 700,000 at that theatre and that in the same period about 175,000 saw the feature at the Astor. The film completed this week its ten week run at the Loew's Grand in Atlanta. Gross is reported to be about $250,000.

"Wind" will leave the Capitol on March 6th, after an 11 week run. The total gross for the entire engagement is estimated at $700,000.

RKO's 38 exchange headquarters in the United Other wind grosses include the following: Loew's, Akron, first week, $44,000; Fabian's Palace, Albany, first week, $39,000; Loew's Midland, Kansas City, two weeks, about $100,000; Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, first week, $30,000, second week, $28,000. Record runs include: Loew's Louisville, 45,500 persons, the first week and about 30,000 the second. The management said that a noticeable number of persons are seeing the film for the second time. The film closed at the RKO Capitol, Cincinnati, after a ten week run in which all house records were broken. The management of the Tampa, Tampa, Florida, said that the number of people who attended the performances during the run of "Wind" exceeds the entire white population of the city which would indicate that about 100,000 attended.

Long engagements of "Wind" have caused product difficulties in several cities. For example the McVickers theatre in Chicago has adopted the policy of playing one first run and one second run film each week instead of two second runs. The reason for the change is reported to be that the long run of "Wind" at the Oriental which is also operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer has made it necessary to find another outlet for first-run pictures. In Philadelphia the long engagements of the Selznick picture has caused a number of shifts in the usual theatre bookings. With all first-run houses downtown operated by Warners, independents and even the circuit subsequent run houses are facing a serious shortage of film.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been booked by Sam Bendheim, Jr., general manager of Neighborhood theatres in Richmond into the first-run Capitol. The picture ran simultaneously with "Gone With the Wind" at Loew's.

"Pinocchio's" Second Week

John Kenneth Hyatt, manager of the Center theatre, announced that the second week's gross of "Pinocchio" beat the first week. The gross Friday was bigger than any other weekday run of the cartoon, including opening day. On Saturday the theatre put on nine shows of the Disney picture. The first Saturday eight shows were given. RKO said that the box-office line throughout Saturday and Sunday varied from one to three blocks in length. "Pinocchio" was said to gross about $30,000 for the four days ending Sunday. The total gross of the first week was about $45,000. All New York theatres were hit by a snowstorm. Weekend business was at capacity. The second week ended with two days of rain which cut Broadway grosses.

"Pinocchio" is scheduled for nation release during Easter week with a large number of day and date engagements, At present the successor to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is playing only in New York and Los Angeles.

RESEARCH COUNCIL REELECTS OFFICERS

The Motion Picture Research Council, one of the two main supporters in public of the Neely Anti-Block Booking Bill, along with Allied States Association of Exhibitors, has reelected all offciers for 1940. The reelections, effected at headquarters, in San Francisco, include: Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president; Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Stephen P. Cabbot, honorary vice-presidents; Mrs. William Cavalier, executive vice-president; Mrs. Vernon Skewes-Cox, vice-president, and Allen W. Widenham, Treasurer.

A 76-page press-book on "Pinocchio" has been prepared under the supervision of S. Barrett McCormick. The manual is divided into six sections, 1,500 licensee items are listed and 113 stories are included. The advertising section lists 66 mats. Fred Schaefer and Hal Green of the press book staff worked on the manual.

The Walt Disney "Pinocchio" display at the New York Museum of Science and Industry in Radio City has been insured for $55,535.

"Of Mice and Men" Campaign

The New York advertising campaign before the opening of the Hal Roach production of "Of Mice and Men" represented an expenditure of $15,000, or more than $1,500 for each day prior to the opening of the film. The picture is playing at the Roxy, just a short distance from the Rivoli where the other current film based on a John Steinbeck book, "Grapes of Wrath" is playing.

The "Of Mice and Men" campaign opened around Christmas time with displays in national picture magazines. This was followed by radio appearances of stars in the picture. Additional publicity on the picture was centered about newspaper interviews with the film's stars. A fifteen-minute transcription radio program was used by ten New York area stations. Time was purchased on five local stations for the three days preceding the opening. Trailer-truck displays and national advertising tie-ups were also used.

Six "Dr. Cyclops" Pre-dates

Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, has announced six pre-release test engagements in as many cities for Paramount's "Dr. Cyclops." Almost one month before the national release date of April 5th the picture will open in Kansas City and Denver on March 6th, followed by openings in Hartford and Providence on March 7th; Altoona on March 8th and Nashville on March 9th.

Robert M. Gillham, advertising and publicity director, said that special advertising campaigns, 24-sheet and teaser posting and elaborate exploitation will back up each of these pre-release engagements. The following exploitation men have been sent into the field to cover the entire engagement in each city; Leon Benson of the studio staff, for Denver; Maxwell Joice for Kansas City; Tom Jefferson, Hartford and Providence; Bud Getschall, Nashville and Charles Perry, Altoona.

Civic leaders of eight of the nine American and Canadian cities called London have accepted Charles Laughton's invitation to be Paramount's guest stars on the "Professor Quiz" "Sidewalks of London" broadcast over WABC Friday night. Mr. Gillham announced that the eight would arrive in New York on Friday. The guests are Mayor Harry M. Hanson, London, Wis.; Mayor Edward P. Speasmaker, London, Ohio; Dr. O. D. Brock, Mayor of London, Ky.; Marshal King, business leader of London, Ind.; Alderman Frank Blalock, representing Mayor J. H. Vinson of London, Ark.; Ole Sola, chairman of the Town Board, London, Minn.; Alderman S. F. Cropp, representing Mayor J. Allen Johnson, Mayor of London, Ontario, and William Glenn, business leader of London, W. Va.

On February 14th 17 seventeen-year-old girls from 17 cities were guest of Paramount in California for the press preview of "Seventeen." A studio Valentine luncheon was given for the guests by Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president. Other features of the day included a tour of the studio and appearing in newsreel and still pictures. Jackie Cooper and 16 other young film actors escorted the guests to the opening.

Mr. Gillham has announced a number of radio programs will feature songs from the Bing Crosby-Dorothy Lamour-Bob Hope picture "Road to Singapore." Dorothy Lamour will appear on the Andre Kostalanetz CBS program February 26th; Bing Crosby sang selections from the picture on the Crosby-Kraft hour over NBC on Washington's Birthday and Bob Hope has been plugging the picture every broadcast of the Pepsodent-Bob Hope NBC program.

"Swiss Family" Dates

RKO announced that "Swiss Family Robinson" will play day-and-date in 100 theatres beginning on February 22nd, the national release date. Additional openings will be made this week-end. Major key-city openings following the Radio City Music Hall engagement include: Boston, Providence, Rochester, Syracuse, Chicago, Denver, Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Kansas City, New Orleans, Omaha, Sioux City, Trenton, San Francisco, Lowell, Newark, Baltimore, Washington, Buffalo, Colorado Springs, Portland, St. Louis and Salt Lake City.

Terry Kilburn, 12-year-old star of "Swiss Family Robinson," accompanied by his mother, a school teacher and Charles Levy of the RKO home office, arrived in Cincinnati last Sunday for radio interviews and other publicity demonstrations. The group left for Nashville the following day, February 19th. The picture opens at the RKO Palace in Cincinnati on March 7th.

RKO's 38 exchange headquarters in the United States and Canada have completed previews of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" which were attended by exhibitors and leading citizens in the various cities. Following the special openings the picture will first play in New York, Boston and Philadelphia and then in every part of the country.

"Magic Bullet" Openings

Warner Brothers "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" is scheduled to play day and date from February 29th at the Warner's Hollywood and Downtown theatres. The picture will be shown on a single feature policy.

Hal Wallis, executive producer for Warner Brothers, arrived in New York Monday for the premiere of the picture at the Strand on Broadway on Friday night. Mr. Wallis will confer with Major Albert Warner, Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, and Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, on forthcoming product—while in New York.

Quigley Awards In Hollywood On March 12

March 12th has been set for the presentation of the 1939 Quigley Grand Awards for showmanship to Ray Bell and Lige Brien in Hollywood. The ceremonies will follow a luncheon at the Victor Hugo restaurant to be given by Martin Quigley. Acceptances from studio executives, stars and directors are in hand.

Following the presentations, a program of entertainment, arranged by a special committee of studio publicity directors, will be staged for the winners, who will arrive on March 11, in Hollywood from their respective homes, in Washington, D. C., and Pittsburgh, as guests of Quigley Publications. Visits to the studios, sightseeing trips and other events are on the program.

Members of the welcoming committee are: Russell Birdwell, Russell Birdwell & Associates; Harry Brand, Twentieth Century-Fox; Walter Compton, Republic Pictures; J. Leroy Johnston, Wanger productions; John Joseph, Universal; Jock Lawrence, Goldwyn; Cliff Lewis, Paramount; Billy Leyser, Fine Arts; Perry Lieber, RKO; Murphy McHenry, Edward Small Productions; William Pierce, Monogram; Tom Petty, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Assn.; Lou Smith, Columbia; Howard Strickling, MGM; Frank Seltzer, Hal Roach Studios; Robert Taplinger; Warners and Al Vaughan, Principal Pictures.

Bell, publicity director Loew's Washington Theatres, and Brien, manager of Warner's Prince Theatre, Ambridge, Pa., were voted their honors at the judging for the 1939 Awards, at the Hotel Astor, New York, in February 30th. Selections were made by 35 industry heads from among the entrants in the Quigley Awards, making the best scores during the four quarters of the year, in the competitions sponsored by Motion Picture Herald and conducted by A-Mike Vogel, Chairman, Managers' Round Table.

CBS Engineers Address SMPE

A paper on "Quality in Television Pictures" was presented at the Atlantic Coast Section meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers on Wednesday by Peter C. Goldmark and John N. Dyer, Columbia Broadcasting System television engineers. The CBS engineers said that present television standards specify certain factors which determine the quality of a television picture only to a limited extent, and pointed out that other facts, such as contrast, gradation, brilliance and the shape of the scanning spot, are fully as important.

An indication was given that improvements in television are needed, for the engineers asserted that the average brilliance of a television picture probably should be about eight foot candles which the paper said is a considerable increase over what is obtained today. Mr. Goldmark and Mr. Dyer also remarked that flicker in a television picture is not produced under the present standards even under the highest illumination.

THEATRES COLLECTING THOUSANDS FOR FINNS

Benefit Showings for French War Relief; Committee of Catholic Drive Expands

The motion picture industry's drive for the Finnish Relief Fund entered its second week with thousands of theatres cooperating. The largest contribution received on the first weekend was $1,350 from the Roxy theatre in New York. Reports from other key cities indicated corresponding cooperation.

Also last week two film benefits were announced in New York for French relief.

J. J. O'Connor, chairman of the Motion Picture and Amusement Industries Committee of the 1940 Catholic Charities Drive, announced additional committeemen.

Finnish Relief Drive

The Motion Picture Division of the Finnish Relief Fund, with Major L. E. Thompson, chairman, and Vincent G. Hart director, announced that from 4,000 to 6,000 theatres had sponsored collections last weekend. California theatres postponed their drive until this Saturday and Sunday, and Kentucky and West Virginia were expected to begin the campaign at about the same time. The picture, "Finland Fights!", short subject made for the drive, is being shown in 40 states, and 400 prints already have been sent out. Calls for bookings continue to come in.

The first money received in the national headquarters was $646.06 from the Trans-Lux theatres in New York City.

Major Thompson suggested that in theatres participating "all the money be turned over to the manager who will mail it to Raymond Sawtelle, treasurer of the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City, giving, of course, the name of the theatre."

The Finnish Relief Fund drive activities in Portland, Ore., were directed by Major Philip H. Carroll. Other leaders were Bob White, Portland; George Hunt, Medford, representing independent theatre owners; Ted Gamble of the J. J. Parker theatres, and Albert Finkelstein of the Hamrick-Evergreen group. Cooperating houses also included the Laurelhurst, Egyptian, 30th Avenue, Oregon, Kenton, Yeager, Bob White, Aladdin, Walnut Park, Ames Rio, Plaza, Mt. Tabor, Alberta, Moreland, State, St. Johns, Roseway, Granada, Irvington, Crest and Colonial.

Cincinnati Finnish Relief fund activities included the showing of six reels of Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" pictures at the Music Hall, and a luncheon at the Hotel Gibson at which Mr. Ripley was guest of honor. Mr. Ripley was made an honorary member of the Cuvier Press Club.

A number of independent theatres in the Milwaukee area will sell special tickets from February 26th to March 11th with part of the proceeds going to the Finnish Relief Fund. The 27 theatres hope to raise $5,000. Theatres in the plan included the Tower, Oriental, Abby, Alamo, Aragon, Atlas, Burleigh, Climax, Colonial, Comet, Fern, Franklin, Grand, Greendale, Hollywood Library, Lyric, Mozart, Murray, Park, Pearl, Peerless, Rainbow, Roosevelt, Roxy, Tosa and Violet.

Hoffberg Productions, Inc., announced it would release "Finland Speaks," described as an official film prepared from an original negative made by the Finnish Government. The film has been edited into one reel and has a running time of nine minutes.

A preview of the French film "The Human Beast" was held Sunday evening for the benefit of the American-French War Relief, which is sponsored by a group of celebrities. The film's regular run opened Monday.

The premiere of another French film, "The Baker's Wife," will be held Monday at the World theatre in New York for the benefit of Le Paquet au Front, an organization which has sent 27,500 kit bags to the soldiers at the French front through Les Gueules Cassees (the Broken Jaws), an organization of veterans of the World War who have face wounds. The picture has English sub-titles by John Erskine.

Added to Catholic Drive

J. J. O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of RKO theatres, chairman of the Motion Picture and Amusement Industries Committee of the 1940 Catholic Charities Drive, announced the following additions to his committee: Harry Brandt, Brandt theatres; Max Cohen, Cinema Circuit; Jack Alicoate, the Film Daily; Maurice Kann, Box Office; John Kane, Columbia Pictures; John Murphy; Loew Theatres; Jack O'Connell, Republic Pictures; Phil Reisman, RKO Pictures; Herman Robbins, National Screen Service; W. F. Rodgers, MGM; George J. Schaefer, RKO; George Skouras, Skouras Theatres and W. G. Van Schmus, Radio City Music Hall.

Greater New York Fund

James G. Blaine, president of the Greater New York Fund, described the organization's first two years to 400 business, civil, labor and welfare leaders who attended the annual meeting held February 15th. Members of the various committees as well as executives and board members attended.

Mr. Blaine told the meeting that the Fund was now the largest single contributor "to such organizations as the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, the Catholic Charities, the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies, the United Hospital Fund, the Community Service Society and the Salvation Army, to mention a few." The paid subscriptions to the 1938 campaign totaled $3,785,345 and in the 1939 campaign $3,420,554 as of January 31st. Expenses were $423,064 for 1938 and $420,842 in 1939.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 Pictures

HOLLYWOOD AIMS TO RIDICULE "RED" PROBE TO PROTECT STARS, SAYS DIES

Congressman Charges Secret Agents' Confidential Committee Report on "Hollywood Situation" Is in Circulation

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Charging that the motion picture producers are determined to ridicule the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities out of existence, but giving them a clean bill of health so far as their own personal patriotism is involved, Chairman Martin Dies of Texas this week was prepared to ask his committee to make an immediate investigation of "Reds" and other subversive activities in the Hollywood film colony.

(Louis B. Mayer, MGM vice-president in Hollywood, was presented Tuesday with a special citation in recognition of his activities in promoting Americanism by the American Legion. The presentation ceremony was preceded by a parade of 100 Southern California American Legion posts and "The Flag Speaks," a patriotic two-realer, was shown. Other Hollywood producers have in recent months been singled out by patriotic organizations for their filming and other activities promoting Americanism, among them the brothers Warner.)

Mr. Dies contends that what he calls the producers' strategy of "ridicule" is in protection of the market value of certain stars of pink coloration.

Not yet fully recovered from an illness which confined him to his home in Orange, Texas, for two months, Congressman Dies returned to Washington last week determined immediately to proceed with an investigation of conditions on the West Coast. He said Hollywood is but one phase and not necessarily the most important.

"Leak" Is Charged

From the point of view of Washington newspapermen, however, the Hollywood situation overshadowed everything else in which the committee is engaged, and press reports sent out from the National Capital made much of charges that a copy of the committee's investigators secret report on the West Coast situation, the circulation of which was designed to be restricted to members of the committee, had reached Los Angeles, where it was mimeographed and distributed among the producers.

Mr. Dies said he had no proof of the charge, which was based on information that the report was in circulation on the Coast and that the producers also knew the names of the witnesses who would be called before the committee. That this information had leaked out, he said, was demonstrated by the action of a California legislative committee in subpoenaing those witnesses to appear before it.

Rift in Committee Hinted

Indications that not all is serene in the committee were seen in the chairman's repeated insistence that what he said did not represent the views of the committee, that he could not talk for the committee and that he was speaking only for himself.

Speaking for himself, he said he was prepared to recommend that the committee immediately begin hearings on the Hollywood situation. Those hearings, he added, should be held in Washington, and the committee should make its report on this phase of its investigation before the Presidential campaigns get underway in the summer.

NEWSPAPER PRAISES COMERFORD CAREER

An unusual editorial tribute was paid to the late M. E. "Mike" Comerford, founder of the New York and Pennsylvania circuit bearing his name, by the Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Tribune, recently, upon the disclosure of the provisions of Mr. Comerford's will, leaving approximately $2,000,000.

Said the editorial, in part: "This is a large amount to accumulate, starting from scratch, as he did in this city. It speaks well for his industry and ability. . . . Mr. Comerford beautified towns with impressive structures, enriched municipal treasuries, encouraged general business, gave employment to hundreds, and contributed to the progress of the community. . . . Although his holdings were extensive, he left more enduring monuments than his theatres and wealth. . . . His chief asset and reward were not in these material things, but in the friendships he made and the cheer he spread. . . ."

Mr. Dies, however, refused to commit himself when asked whether he thought producers should be called before the committee to explain how they got the report. There are a number of considerations there involved, he explained, among them whether the producers want to appear. He made it plain that he does not consider that there are any unpatriotic activities among the producers, and said he had talked with some of them and knew how they felt. He indicated, however, that the industry is fearful that the investigation will hurt the market value of some of its stars and, accordingly, was trying to undermine the committee.

That Shirley Temple Episode

Referring to the "Shirley Temple" episode, in which the child star was represented to have been designated by the committee to be one of a number of Hollywood personalities affiliated with communism, Congressman Dies voiced the expectation that "there will be every effort to discredit the committee if it goes into the Hollywood situation." Nevertheless, he added, "I think it would be a shame if the full facts were not brought to light, regardless of political pressure by the most clever crowd that we have ever had to contend with."

"They are undertaking to ridicule the investigation," he charged. "The industry has turned heaven and earth to stop us. They have the highest priced publicity service in the world; they have a lot of political influence. I think they are going to start one of the darndest campaigns of ridicule you ever saw."

Representative Dies interpreted attacks on the methods of the committee as attacks on the investigation itself. He indicated that he would oppose procedural changes advocated by Representative H. Jerry Voorhis of California, a member of the committee. Mr. Voorhis, on the floor of the House, had attacked Mr. Dies' article in Liberty magazine and his methods in the Hollywood investigation.

Although Mr. Dies offered no proof that the report of his investigators had leaked out, the Hearst newspapers last Sunday listed even the number of those stars said to be named. It was asserted that "43 film stars, some of them of major importance and 16 top-flight box office drawing cards, are either full fledged Communists or are active sympathizers or fellow-travelers." The article said these 43 stars knowingly had made large contributions to the Communist Party but the names had not been revealed to the Dies committee.

May List Film Titles

Members of the Dies committee were said to have commented last Saturday that it is likely that the investigation will reveal the titles of films into which Communistic propaganda has been subtly injected.

Mr. Dies said his committee would "fold up" its public hearings well in advance of the Presidential campaign, which would indicate that hearings on the Hollywood situation would not be very lengthy because it was made known that the investigators have about two more months' work before hearings can be called.

Mr. Dies also said that the committee would devote the time from just before the conventions until after the election to framing a legislative program to recommend to the House. The first convention, the Republicans', opens on June 24th.

The committee chairman also said he favored barring aliens unless they had near-relatives living here. He did not indicate what stand he would take on alien motion picture performers.

Hollywood Replies

Hollywood protested Mr. Dies' intimations.

"The vast majority of men and women in Hollywood are good Americans," said Samuel Goldwyn. "Congressman Dies should know that any good American is against Communism and any other ism except Americanism. As for the attitude of motion picture producers towards Communism, I should like to call Mr. Dies' attention to the fact that producers not only are strongly opposed to it but have taken great pains to show their attitude. As an example I cite the picture 'Ninotchka', in which Communism is soundly ridiculed."

Sheridan Gibney, president of the Screen Writers Guild, answered Mr. Dies' charge that some Hollywood writers are Communists by saying, "if there is Communism to any dangerous degree among the Hollywood screen writers, I don't know about it. Of course, it is true that I have made no study of Communism in Hollywood, and Congressman Dies says he has made such a study. So he perhaps is in a better position to talk about it than I am. If however, there is Communism among the writers, it is not sufficiently obivous to attract the attention of the casual observer."

Ralph Morgan, president, and Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild had no comment to make. Likewise Y. Frank Freeman, new president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, would say nothing about the assertion that a copy of the committee's confidential report and a list of witnesses had found their way into the hands of producers.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Stage Tangent

Preoccupation with matters of filming have long made Hollywood a town notably apathetic if not hostile to any new and untried venture in the field of the legitimate stage. However, the production center currently is bursting with enthusiasm in the form of paid admissions to a satirical stage revue entitled "Meet the People."

Now in its ninth week, and in a theatre larger than that in which it opened, the show has had seven of its actors tested, five signed, to film contracts. Warner Brothers has accounted for three: William Orr, Jane Clayton and Janice Chambers, with Mr. Orr promptly going over to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on a loan-out to appear in "The Mortal Storm." MGM, in addition, has signed Virginia O'Brien, and Republic has done likewise with Lois Ranson.

Produced by an organization calling itself the Hollywood Theatre Alliance, started 15 months ago, "Meet the People" is to be followed by a serious play presented by the same group. A non-stock corporation, it has as its expressed purposes the production of stage plays which "mirror and illumine the conditions of the times in which we live"; these shows "to be presented by artists and technicians belonging to film and theatrical unions and guilds."

Opening last Christmas night, the show had gone through a series of preliminary financial pangs, with cooperation eventually pledged by such members of the local film circle as John Arnold, MGM director of photography; George Bodle, attorney for the Screen Publicists Guild; J. Edward Bromberg, Groucho Marx and Helen Gahagan, of the acting fraternity; Edward Chodorov, Kenneth MacGowan and Harlan Thompson, producers; Dorothy Arzner, Garson Kanin, W. S. Van Dyke, II, George Cukor and Frank Tuttle, directors; Dashiell Hammett, Lillian Hellman, Arthur Kober, John Howard Lawson, Dorothy Parker, Sidney Buchman and Donald Ogden Stewart, writers. Musical representation was afforded by Ira Gershwin, Johnny Green and Sigmund Romberg.

Danny Dare and Mortimer Offner had been responsible from the beginning for the writing material gathered for the show. Mr. Dare, a dance director, worked on such films as "52nd Street" and "Start Cheering." Mr. Offner, a writer, last evolved "The Family Next Door." The musical side of the show was put into shape by Jay Gorney, film composer and writer, and Henry Myers, co-author of the screen play of "Destry Rides Again."

Contributing their services were film composers George Bassman, Harry Akst and Frank Loesser; writers, Edward Eliscu, who last collaborated on "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," and Ray Golden, who contributed sequences to "The Road to Singapore."

Week's Production Shows Rise

Hollywood production took an upward spurt this week. Eight pictures were finished, twice as many as last week. While only seven were started, against the ten of the week before, 20 were being prepared, four more than in the previous period.

Shooting were 33 films, while 65 were being edited, in each case just one less than in the corresponding categories of last week.

RKO Radio and Universal each wound up work on two pictures. Radio completed "My Favorite Wife" and "Curtain Call", Universal "Alias the Deacon" and "Ma! He's Making Eyes at Me". Monogram completed "Midnight Limited", Republic "Forgotten Girl", Twentieth Century-Fox "Sailor's Lady" and Warner Brothers "'Til We Meet Again".

Started were "The Man Who Would Not Die", Columbia; "Susan and God" and "Twenty Mule Team", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Ghost Valley", Republic; "South of Pago Pago", Edward Small, for United Artists release; "On Their Own", Twentieth Century-Fox, and "If I Had My Way", Universal.

MGM continued to lead in the number of pictures shooting, with "Forty Little Mothers", "Two Girls on Broadway", "Dr. Kildare's Girl", "Edison, the Man", "Waterloo Bridge", "Pride and Prejudice", "And One Was Beautiful" and "The Mortal Storm".

Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners each accounted for four. "Earthbound", "Star Dust", "Lillian Russell" and "Charlie Chan's Cruise" were shooting at the Twentieth Century-Fox studio, and "Sea Hawk', "All This and Heaven, Too", "An Angel from Texas" and "Torrid Zone" at Warners. Columbia had "The Doctor Takes a Wife", Paramount "Destiny" and "The Ghost Breakers", Principal Productions for United Artists release "Our Town", RKO "The Romantic Mr. Hinklin" and "The Saint Takes Over", Republic "Rancho Grande" and "The Dark Command", and Universal "It's a Date" and "Sandy Is a Lady".

DE VRY BUILDING MILLION DOLLAR 16mm. CIRCUIT OF 500 IN CHINA

De Vry Project Calls for Supplying Chinese Theatre Owners with Equipment in Exchange for Percentage of Gross

War or no war, and with the outcome of the "incident" still uncertain, China is set for one of the biggest 16 millimeter theatre circuits in the world. The one exception is the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, where a large proportion of the 30,000 theatres consist of traveling 16 mm. units.

The De Vry Corporation, of Chicago, one of the early leaders in 16 mm. projection and in the production of 16 mm. sound and silent equipment, has opened offices in Shanghai, for the inauguration of a circuit of more than 500 theatres throughout China, a circuit in which the basic investment will approximate $1,000,000.

Invites Chinese Business Men

Plans of the corporation, to give more theatres to China (where, with a population of about 400,000,000, there are only approximately 300 theatres, one house for every 1,330,000 persons), were given prominence, recently, in the Shanghai press. The corporation has enlisted the financial support of Chinese business men.

Ventures of the same sort, in this country, have been the goal of the De Vry Corporation for many years. Herman De Vry, independently and with others, from his Chicago office has tried long to prove the practicability of extensive 16 mm. circuits, traveling or stationary, in this country, circuits which would draw from 16 mm. libraries and feature 16 mm. newsreels, these including much footage filmed in a theatre's locality.

One factor ascribed for non-acceptance of the idea in this country is the unfriendly attitude of union projectionists, who foresee the use of one man in a projection room instead of the generally accepted two, and see, also, the use of automatic 16 mm. projectors.

Sixteen millimeter projection has been used by the local exhibitor chiefly for local news events: Baby parades, inaugural ceremonies, prominent weddings, and the like.

Cooperative Venture

De Vry's venture in China is being managed by Nat Nathanson, foreign representative of the company, in cooperation with T. T. Chang, former De Vry agent, and his associate, Thomas S. Woo, owner of the International Booksellers, of Shanghai. The Chinese corporation will be known as De Vry Chang, Inc.

Chinese theatre owners or entrepreneurs will not have to pay, at once or directly, for their equipment, Mr. Nathanson has said. De Vry is providing them with projection equipment, and film programs, for a percentage of the gross income. The cooperative basis of the venture is expected to result in wide acceptance.

The De Vry sound projector being used is "The Interpreter," and is called "fool-proof" by the De Vry representative.

The film programs will be drawn from the De Vry library, from the 16 mm. pictures which the concern possibly will make in China, from Chinese pictures transcribed to 16 mm., and from the major company releases to which De Vry has the 16 mm. rights.

Mr. Nathanson, in an interview in Shanghai lately, emphasized the economy of 16 mm.

"By comparison to the 35 mm. film, its economy is not overstressed by saying that it affords a saving of about 350 per cent. in actual film stock," he said. "It also has the additional advantage of making film programs much easier to be transported or shipped by parcel post."

The 16 mm. theatres which De Vry intends to set up will be located in the interior of China, Mr. Nathanson emphasized, in denying that the circuit would compete with China's established houses in larger cities. He also noted that the development of the 16 mm. circuit in places where picture theatres never have existed was not limited to China; if successful, it will be spread to Japan, the Philippines, Malaya, and India, it was said.

De Vry also is dealing with Shanghai night clubs for projectors and 16 mm. musical "fillers," not to supplant orchestras but to provide sight and sound dance entertainment while orchestras rest, Mr. Nathanson revealed.

Chinese schools, too, are envisioned by De Vry to be an outlet for 16 mm. films. It is proposed to supply these places at a price approximating $2.50 per week. The films used would be educational, drawn from De Vry's 3,000,000 feet of educational film, he said.

The American company in Shanghai also will organize its own newsreel service, according to Mr. Nathanson. The newsreel company will photograph important events there, for showing on screens of theatres and night clubs using De Vry equipment.

RCA HAS NEW 16MM SOUND PROJECTOR

RCA Photophone has announced a new 16 mm. sound projector designed especially for industrial and educational use. Priced at $300, the machine is said to feature ease and simplicity of operation together with brilliant projection and high quality of sound.

The projector has an f. 1.65 optical system with a standard 750 watt lamp; RCA Photophone sound with push pull amplification supplying 10 watts rated output; simplified threading with threading line on projector casting, and efficient cooling of projection lamp. A feature is the separate motor for take-up and rewind. There is provision for sound and silent film speeds and the amplifier has microphone and turntable input jacks. An electrodynamic speaker is mounted in a separate case.

Chodorov Returns to Writing

Edward Chodorov has returned to the writing ranks at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at his own request after a producer berth on "Man from Dakota."

Son Killed in War His Father Filmed

After several months' filming of riots, military actions, and political upheavals in Slovakia, Poland, Bohemia, Ruthenia, and the Polish Ukraine, Kalenik Lissiuk, Ukrainian-American motion picture cameraman and formerly a member of the Ukrainian nationalist forces, is in New York to market the films, independently and otherwise.

Son Killed While Filming

Mr. Lissiuk went to Czechoslovakia last Spring, with his son, Peter, who subsequently was killed while filming the fighting in Ruthenia. He himself was imprisoned and saved from death by the intervention of the American consul at Budapest.

Released, he went to Budapest, thence to Slovakia, now a protectorate of Germany. He became newsreel cameraman for Slovakia. His films, brought back now, but first shown as official Slovakian newsreels in that country's theatres, show the revived life of the country: offices filled by Slovaks instead of Czechs, a newly outfitted army, the riots in the capital, Bratislava, against the Czechs, speeches by Father Josef Tiso, head of the Government, and others, interviews with Sano-Mach, Ferdinand Durciansky, Carol Sidor, Tito Gaspar, and other officials and notables of the small country, funerals of Slovak "martyrs," life in the fields, factories, schools, and villages of the country.

Mr. Lissiuk returned to Slovakia in August, forewarned by Slovakian officials that war, a war which the Polish Government apparently did not expect so soon, was coming, shortly. He accompanied the Slovak troops in mobilization and saw German planes and troops on the move four days before the invasion of Poland. He moved, with Slovakian troops, into that part of Poland taken from Slovakia the previous year and accompanied the German army into Lvov, and other cities of the Polish Ukraine.

Mr. Lissiuk was aided by a German officer, he said. Much of his footage was taken from him but he claims to have secreted about 20 feet of every 100 from the officer and censors.

50 FEATURES WILL GET STUDY-GUIDE ATTENTION IN SCHOOLS THIS YEAR

Increase in Number of Guides Published for Classroom Use Attributed to Improvement in Films Produced

Fifty different film guides will be distributed this year, for the large companies, to motion picture appreciation classes in 10,000 schools, colleges and libraries. The movement has grown steadily over the last five years with more pictures each year being treated for class room study, from the average half-dozen formerly treated annually. At present two organizations serve this field: Photoplay Studies and Group Discussion Guide are published by Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., and Film Guide prepared by Harold Turney. Thousands of exhibitors get extra box office attention in local school tieups.

Cites Film Improvements

William Lewin, chairman of the motion picture committee of the National Educational Association's department of secondary education, and managing editor of the Photoplay Studies, pointed out that the increase in the number of guides published for classroom use indicates the improvement in motion pictures made within the last few years. Before 1935 only a few pictures were considered worthy of classroom treatment, according to Mr. Lewin. In 1935 nine pictures were recommended by these guides. Mr. Lewin has set this year's goal at 30 or one for each week of the schoolyear.

Film Guide, edited by Harold Turney, has between ten and twenty issues each year. Mr. Turney is chairman of the department of drama in the Los Angeles City College. An occasional issue of the Film Guide is devoted to general studio and picture news. Included among the current issues of that publication are the following: "Swanee River," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Geronimo," Paramount; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," RKO; "Swiss Family Robinson," RKO.

The film studies and guides are intended primarily for use in schools, and according to Arthur de Bra, assistant secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, over 6,000 high schools are using these booklets in motion picture appreciation classes. Miss Helen Colton of the Educational and Recreational Guides said that most schools use both film studies for their motion picture courses and discussions.

By Approval or Examination

The pictures on which guides are published are selected in two ways, either by approval of a committee of educators after the picture has been completed or after an examination of the script by a special group. The latter method is used more frequently because the schools like to have the booklets well in advance of the showing of the picture. It was said that a month or so in advance was the usual custom.

The motion picture companies cooperate with the organizations editing the guides by supplying scripts, stills and other material and having their research departments give what assistance they can. The film companies send copies to exhibitors and urge them to have the local schools cooperate. From time to time copies of the guides and studies are sent directly to school principals, teachers and other officials. The companies also aid in other ways distribution of the educational studies on their pictures. Some exhibitors distribute the guides to local schools.

WEIGHS FILMS AS CLASSROOM AIDS

Frank P. Graves, New York State commissioner of education, has authorized a series of conferences between school principals and supervisors and members of the state education department, under the direction of Dr. Ward C. Bowen, chief of the state bureau of Radio and Visual Aids, to secure cooperation leading toward the more effective use of motion pictures, radio and related teaching aids.

At the first meeting, which was held in the newly finished projection room in the State Education Building, Albany, three classroom films were shown, dealing with radio broadcasting, television and the effects of lightning.

Paul Edwards, director of visual education of the Chicago Public Schools and Dr. W. C. Reavis, of the University of Chicago, are in charge of the program and exposition, to be arranged for the second annual Visual Education Forum, April 5-6, at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago.

Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager of RKO, said, "These guides foster the study of photoplay appreciation in schools. And with the children of today being the adults of tomorrow, better pictures are assured more success through interest aroused by these guides." At one time RKO had five men on the road working on school cooperation.

Impetus in 1933

Impetus to the study of pictures in schools was given by William Lewin's thesis on "Photoplay Appreciation in American High Schools," published in 1933. The motion picture committee of the NEA department of secondary teachers has set forth recommendation for classroom studies in a ten-point program. One of the first study guides was prepared in connection with MGM's "Sequoia" in 1934. A Sequoia essay contest was held in cooperation with the MPPDA.

Photoplay Studies for 1940 include "Hunchback of Notre Dame," RKO; "Gulliver's Travels," Fleischer-Paramount; "The Great Victor Herbert," Paramount; "The Blue Bird," Twentieth Century-Fox; "The Light That Failed," Paramount; "Swiss Family Robinson," RKO; "Harvest," French Cinema Center, and "Pinocchio," Disney-RKO. A total of 30 is planned for this year.

Gives Writers 50 Per Cent of Money Derived from All Sources, Including Motion Pictures

The new standard contract between songwriters and publishers gives the writers a "bill of rights" which, "for the first time in American song writing," establishes "a basic foundation for dignified and fair dealings," in the opinion of Irving Caesar, president of the Songwriters Protective Association.

The new contract, in process of discussion and formulation for years, gives the writers 50 per cent of the money derived from all sources, including songs in motion pictures, instead of the 33⅓ per cent accruing previously, under a contract effected in 1932.

Calls Non-Payment Solved

Charging injustices under the previous setup, John Schulman, association counsel, declared this week that these had become most obvious, for example, in cases where a publisher became bankrupt, where, under the law as expressed in the Watterson case, the writers could not get their accrued royalties or their songs. The most they could claim were the royalties that later accrued from a new publisher to whom the trustee transferred the songs. All royalties which had accumulated in the past were lost to the writers.

"Under the new contract, this problem of non-payment of royalties has for the first time been covered in a realistic and unequivocal fashion," said Mr. Schulman, adding: "Not only is the writer's share of receipts constituted a trust fund, but the writer is entitled to the return of his song if his royalties are not paid or if he is refused the opportunity to examine a publisher's books to ascertain how much is due him. In this way, a long standing grievance has been remedied. SPA felt that the writer was entitled not only to the assurance that his royalties would be paid, but also that he have some voice in the management of his property."

"Instances have arisen where such licenses have been granted for prices which the writers thought ridiculously low," continued Mr. Schulman. "There have been cases where songs have been licensed for considerations which, while they represented an advantage to the publishers, yielded no corresponding benefit to the writers. In other cases, the publishers accepted a low fee just because they did not insist on full value. It may be that in some instances a song or the use to be made of it would not be worth more than the price which is agreeable to the publisher. But regardless of the question of good faith or good business judgment on the part of the publisher, there is every reason why the writer should be notified of the terms of any proposed license for an important use, and that he be given the opportunity of objecting if he thinks that they are not satisfactory. Where a song is to be licensed for an important purpose, for example, where there is to be a disposition of its title or a license for an exclusive use, or where a dramatic version or a visual-vocal rendition is to be presented, there is no reason why the writer should not be consulted to determine whether he is satisfied with the terms. We have therefore provided for such a notice to be given.

"The writer's interest needs even greater protection in connection with newly discovered uses or new methods of exploitation of musical works. Examples are television and the proposed arrangement whereby it has been suggested that performing artists share in the licensing of songs for records. No one knows how television or other new uses or new methods will be handled. The administration may be wise or improvident. It may well be that there will arise no difference or disagreement between writers and publishers about them. The important thing, from the writer's viewpoint, is, however, that his property is involved and he has an interest in seeing to it that his song is utilized on a basis which he thinks is proper. We have therefore provided for more than mere notice in these connections. The writer's consent to licensing must first be obtained."

"As regards folios," explained Mr. Schulman, "there has been eliminated the provision for a flat fee whenever a song is published in this fashion.

Songs Not in Bulk Deals

"Much has been said about so-called bulk or block deals. In some instances agreements had been made by publishers which permitted the use of songs under a blanket contract and the writers received either less than the amount to which they were entitled or, in some instances, nothing at all. It is inconceivable that a publisher would make a bulk deal unless it were advantageous to him. However, the benefit which the publisher derives is often one in which the writer does not participate.

"Songs will not be included in any such future bulk arrangements.

Entitled to Minimum Fee

"As regards such contracts already in existence, the writer, under the new contract, will be entitled to a minimum fee, even though his percentage of the publisher's receipts would be less than that or even nothing at all.

"In addition to the terms already discussed, there are some additional clarifications necessary. One is the specific provision that the writer does not share in the money received by the publisher from ASCAP (the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) or other performing rights societies. I should have thought that there was no question on this score, since the writers received their share of the money direct from the society. However, at the request of the publishers this has been definitely stated.

"Another provision relates to fees paid by some publishers to MPPA for clearing of rights. There was a dispute whether this expense should be deducted in determining royalties—in other words, whether the writer was to pay a share of the commission. SPA claimed that this was an expense of the publisher, just as any other business expense, and therefore that no part of it should be charged to the writer. In view of concessions made by the publishers in other provisions of the contract, SPA yielded on this point."

Retroactive to June 1, 1937

The SPA management this week said that contracts had been effected with almost the entire music publishing business. The new contracts are retroactive and apply to all songs placed by SPA members since June 1, 1937.

The 50 per cent minimum to be paid to the songwriter by the publisher applies to receipts from synchronization rights, electrical transcription rights, sale of piano copies, orchestrations in foreign countries, and from all receipts which the publisher may receive from any source now known, including motion pictures, television, etc., or any new sources which may come into existence. If a song is not published within a specified time, the writer is entitled to the return of his composition and all copyrights.

The publisher may not grant licenses for any use of a composition where that use was not commercially established before June 1, 1939.

The songwriter hereafter will get "proper notice" before the publisher can grant any license for a visual vocal use, for the use of a title of the song, or for domestic use, or for any exclusive use. If one or more of the writers involved objects within 72 hours after receiving notice, the license cannot be granted.

The writers' portions of the songs' earnings are held in trust by the publisher, so that the writers' ownership of the money cannot be questioned in case of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the publisher, thus eliminating the necessity of expensive lawsuits in connection with the collection of back royalties.

The writers, or their representatives, without any names being disclosed, can, through SPA, appoint a certified public accountant at any time to inspect all records of the publisher relating to a song; this includes the right to inspect the books of any agents, trustees or administrators appointed by the publisher for the granting of mechanical licenses.

If a publisher refuses to allow his books and records to be examined, or fails to pay royalties, the writer may terminate the contract and recapture his song, under the new contract.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

We don't know enough about the "old South" to argue, so we will just have to take Dr. Beaumont Breustle's word for it—he's of Temple University, Philadelphia, and should know—that the scene in "Gone With the Wind" that gives "the most vivid impression" of the old South is the one where the pretty and shapely young ladies at the "Twelve Oaks" barbecue retire to their rooms in daylight, remove their frilly afternoon frocks and take beauty naps, in their underthings, in preparation for the grand ball in the evening, the while darkie slave girls fan them.

Fifteen years ago, Samuel Strausberg bought a piece of property on Brooklyn's Myrtle Avenue, on which he aimed to build a movie to add to his growing string of Interboro Theatres. He never did get around to building. Anticipated property developments didn't develop, and the years wore on, 'till Hitler, Stalin, and a few other European war babies started to jeopardize the peace of the world, causing the U. S. to rearm, causing the U. S. Navy to expand, which brought big doings to Brooklyn's Navy Yard, which is right where M. Strausberg has his unoccupied property, which now will be completed with the theatre that he was going to build 15 years ago.

Recommended to the urgent attention of Congressman Dies, who says he's so concerned about "subversive activities" in Hollywood's film colony, and elsewhere, this extreme case of Nazi penetration reported in the Trenton Sunday Times-Advertiser:

During a New York private demonstration of television the image showed a couple of fencing-masters slashing at each other with sabers, while an umpire called out "Touche," "En Garde" and similar duelists' chit-chat. The display moved the child wife and a girl friend to babble excitedly. Suddenly the fencing umpire cried "Quiet!" And both women stopped talking instantly. It certainly looks as if television is going to be very revolutionary.

"WITH A GRAIN OF SALT"

Bob Livingston, Capitol, Lincoln, Neb., introduces a new wrinkle in necessary desk equipment for exhibitors. Near his fountain-pen stand on his desk sits an ordinary salt shaker and a bottle of water with a sprinkler attachment. He says he uses it for every letter sent to film companies asking for film rental reductions. He signs his name, sprinkles some salt and then some water.

It gives all the appearance of crying real tears, defies chemical analysis as bogus, isn't hard on the eyes, is economical and, most important, gets results.

With the European war being fought by radio as well as by planes, guns and ships, the belligerents' broadcasts frequently make interesting listening. Last Sunday evening, between 7:45 and 8:00 P. M. (EST) London, was giving the "news" for the benefit of America and the Colonies. In the midst of denouncing the Germans for propaganda in claiming that a British ship had been sunk off Spain—when it had reached Lisbon safely—the commentator sneezed loudly. At that the microphone picked up the voice of a studio technician who was saying "gesundheit." The commentator continued with his attacks on Nazi propaganda without probably any thought that it was strange that his health had just been wished in German while he was speaking against that country.

Editor and Publisher notes that at Philadelphia's Pen and Pencil Club, they're still telling this one on Joseph Breen, Hollywood Production Code Administrator, who once was a reporter for the Philadelphia Record:

"Breen's regular beat was the down-town police stations. Not caring too much for the grind of walking from station to station, however, and gleaning nothing but an occasional fist-fight for the rewrite men to work on, he developed the pleasant system of taking in shows on passes supplied by the drama critic. Between acts he would cover the district via telephone while still in the theatre.

"One wintry night an oil refinery on the southern edge of the city caught fire. Several blocks of Philadelphia homes were burned. Meanwhile, Breen enjoyed a new musical comedy, oblivious to what was going on outside. No one on his paper could locate him.

"Two hours later, when virtually the entire Record staff had been working on the story, city editor Harry Wilson's phone rang and this is what Wilson heard:

"'Breen, downtown, speaking. As usual, nothing doing.'"

"And oh, by the way," she continued, "what is a hardy rose?"

"A hardy rose, madam," replied the salesman, slowly, "is one that will allow you to dig it up every morning and night, and twice in the afternoon, to see if it is taking root."

Myer P. Beck, of Broadway, is out these days ballyhooing a new dance "craze" which he is pleased to call the "Too Many Husbands" dance. It is danced by two men and a girl. They started doing it Sunday night at New York's Stork Club, where, according to Myer Beck, it is the "answer to the debutante's stag-line problem, the way out for a girl with two men on her hands, the solution to the situation of ladies accompanied by two or more of their ex-husbands."

By way of identifying Myer Beck, he is the press agent in the east for one Wesley Ruggles, of Hollywood, who just completed a feature for one Columbia Pictures, entitled "Too Many Husbands." It is just possible that the picture has some slight connection with the "new dance craze."

Comedy plus Songs

The best box office news of the preview week is that Paramount has in Bing Crosby and Bob Hope the most successful pairing of comedy talents brought forth upon the screen since Hollywood memory runneth not to the contrary. All the other extreme variants of the adjective "good" apply directly and redoubled to the slapbang entertainment delivered by these equally lighthearted gentlemen, in two of the most congenially harmonized performances caught by a camera in recent years.

They had the preview theatre in a constant uproar throughout the whole of a madcap comedy which asks for nothing but laughs and gets them in torrents.

So startlingly effective is the pairing of Crosby and Hope as comedians, splitting footage, dialogue, even songs, on a fifty-fifty basis, that audience attention is diverted, somewhat unjustly, from a better Dorothy Lamour performance than any she has turned in. Submerged likewise are potent acting stints by Jerry Colonna, Anthony Quinn, Charles Coburn, Judith Barret and others.

The film opens with Crosby and Hope on the brink of their first fistic attack upon persons who would apply a brake to their earnestly cherished vagabondage, and from there on to the final fistic foray with which the picture ends it's a runaway triumph for the two.

A studio story has it that the pairing of Crosby and Hope was decided upon following a golf match in which they, director Victor Schertzinger and producer Harlan Thompson laughed themselves into the idea of prolonging the foursôme into a production. If so, golf is herewith prescribed for all professionals in parallel capacities, for the picture that came out of this round nets more than enough credit to carry each and all of the four into a virtually obligatory return match. Director Schertzinger rates an additional share of glory for going on to write the music for two of the five songs sung in the picture, James V. Monaco accounting for the other three and Johnny Burke for the lyrics of all.

The story which manages to get told while the amusement is being copiously provided is about the usual rich man's son who doesn't want to settle down and marry the right girl, but it is not usual beyond that point. The young man runs away to a tropical island accompanied by another young man, and they meet a girl, and innumerable unpredictable and unimportant but immensely diverting incidents occur. The screen play by Don Hartman and Frank Butler, from a story by Harry Hervey, is a fine exhibition of straight comedy writing.

Western with Songs

Tex Ritter, seventh ranking western box office star in the annual Herald-Fame combined poll of independent and circuit theatres, has never been seen to better advantage than in this story of raids, rustlers and roundups.

Photographed against some of the most striking scenery to be seen in an outdoor picture, the screenplay by Robert Emmett and the direction of Spencer Bennett stress basic action, with the result that the film starts off at a gallop and keeps right on going at the same pace.

Primarily concerned with an attempted stagecoach robbery, the Edward Finney production has a cast which in addition to Ritter includes Nelson McDowell, Muriel Evans, Nolan Willis, Steve Clark and Tom London.—Walter Selden.

Women without Names

(Paramount)

Prison Melodrama

The title of this Eugene Zukor production refers to those women whose lives, in whole or part, are spent in prison, where identities tend to become obliterated although personalities may emerge.

The story, however, is concerned primarily with a young man and a girl, recently married, who are convicted on circumstantial evidence, of a murder committed by the girl's divorced husband. A confession frees them, after the kidnaping of an assistant district attorney who cares more for making his conviction stick than for justice.

A well rounded cast has Ellen Drew and Robert Paige as the principals, Judith Barrett the girl who confesses, John McGuire the murderer, John Miljan the assistant district attorney interested only in becoming district attorney, and Louise Beavers a motherly inmate of the prison.

Based on a play by Ernest Booth, with screenplay by William R. Lipman and Horace McCoy, the picture's director, Robert Florey, has emphasized the time-tried elements of action, best illustrated by an automobile chase as exciting as any Hollywood has produced.

Seventeen

(Paramount)

Streamlined Tarkington

Booth Tarkington's beloved story of adolescence, "Seventeen," comes to the screen again, this time in a streamlined version with up-to-date background. Its initial charm has not diminished through the transposition, and the leads, played by Jackie Cooper, in the role of "Willie Baxter," and Betty Field as the enchanting visitor to the little Indiana town, are admirably in the spirit of the Tarkington story. Supporting them are Otto Kruger and Ann Shoemaker, "Mr. and Mrs. Baxter;" Norma Nelson, as "Willie's" spying little sister; Betty Moran, Thomas Ross, Peter Hayes, Buddy Pepper, Richard Denning, Jody S. Gilbert, Paul E. Burns, Hal Clements, Edward Earle, Stanley Price, Joey Ray, Snowflake and Hattie Noel.

Louis King directed with a fine hand the screen play by Agnes Christine Johnston and Stuart Palmer, whose dialogue makes the film sparkle. The Tarkington story and the play by Stuart Walker, Hugh Stanislaus Strange and Stanford Mears were the sources. Walker, long a stage producer, and writer as well as screen artist, added much.

The new production has the same qualities of widespread appeal its previous forms had.

Knights of the Range

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western, with Songs

Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range" is one of the western "specials" Harry Sherman has produced for Paramount this season. A story of the west following the Civil War, it is the embodiment of action, romance and music. For its top role, it has Russell Hayden, the "Lucky" of the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" series, as the rustler who joins forces with the ranchers and reforms.

Supporting him are Victor Jory, Jean Parker, Morris Ankrum, Britt Wood, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Wales, Rad Robinson, Raphael Bennett, and The King's Men, singers.

With an eye toward what the outdoor action fans want, Lesley Selander directed the terse screenplay of Norman Houston to achieve one of the better western pictures. Five songs are interspersed without impeding the movement.

Previewed at a studio projection room in Hollywood.—V. K.

Ultimatum

(Hoffberg)

Pre-War Melodrama

"Ultimatum" in many respects is similar to the prize winning French production of 1938, "Grand Illusion." In both pictures Erich von Stroheim and Dita Parlo portray in feature roles the maimed army officer and the girl that was left behind. Both pictures show the effects of war on persons who come in contact with it. And both pictures emphasize the individual ability of the players, with the World War motif secondary to the story of their lives.

Directed by the late Robert Wiene, director of "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" and many others, and released in the United States by J. H. Hoffberg, "Ultimatum," with the aid of English sub-titles, is an engrossing and swiftly paced spy story. The excellent cast has Bernard Lancret in addition to Von Stroheim and Miss Parlo.

The locale is the Serbian-Austrian frontier at the time Archduke Francis Ferdinand was assassinated directly precipitating the World War.

"Commandant Stanko Salic" is sent to the border by "General Simovic" of the Serbian army to perform a secret mission pending the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum. "Selic" is captured and jailed as a spy. "General Simovic" suspects the Austrian-born "Anna Salic," and she is held in jail until "Burgstaller," an Austrian spy but an old friend of the "Salics," arranges with the General for her release. "Anna" reaches her husband's bedside in an Austrian prison just as the first battle of the war starts. "Stanko" dies from wounds, the initial Serbian casualty.

Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse in New York, where an early afternoon audience showed its interest.—George Spires.

East Side Kids

(Monogram)

Melodrama

"East Side Kids" is another of the juvenile melodramas that tells of the toughness of a group of youngsters reared in a New York tenement district, and the efforts of a policeman, out of the same district, to rehabilitate them. The rehabilitating process is complicated by a gang of counterfeiters operating in the neighborhood, who dupe the boys into distributing bogus money so that the police suspect that the civic minded cop is a member of the gang. The policeman becomes a fugitive to track the crooks, and exonerate the boys.

Leon Ames, Dennis Moore, Joyce Bryant are the principal adult members of the cast. The "East Side Kids" are Hally Chester, Harris Berger, Frankie Burke, Donald Haines and David Durand. The film was directed by Bob Hill from an original screen play by Robert Lively.

Honeymoon Deferred

(Universal)

Comedy and Mystery

Suave detectives have tried to take over the cinema in the last few weeks. In this Universal comedy-melodrama Edmund Lowe is the top-hatted and white-tie sleuth (Adam Farradine), and here his honeymoon is deferred while he ferrets out a criminal. A suicide and attempted murder set the stage.

He generally gets "in the hair" of the police and in this he is abetted by his wife of a day, played by Margaret Lindsay. Miss Lindsay and Joyce Compton, who plays the detective's secretary, follow a trend, too, in a sequence of hair-pulling, runs-in-stockings and black eyes. Other players include Elisabeth Risdon, Chick Chandler, Anne Gwynne, Jerry Marlowe, Cliff Clark and Julie Stevens. The film was directed by Lew Landers from a screenplay by Roy Chanslor and Eliot Gibbons.

Lowe as "Adam Farradene," a private investigator for a large insurance firm, about ready to sail on a honeymoon trip, is notified of the death of the wealthy "Stephen Blades." The police call it suicide but "Adam," in attempting to protect his company, insists it's murder. The scent narrows down to "Blades'" three adopted children, now adults, and his sister-in-law. The climax is reached in the usual dramatic fashion with "Adam" and "Janet."

Reviewed at the Palace theatre, New York. An afternoon audience appeared to be enjoying the picture, especially the comedy, of which there is a-plenty.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Associate producer, Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Lew Landers. Original story by Roy Chanslor. Screenplay by Roy Chanslor and Eliot Gibbons. Photography by Elwood Bredell. P. C. A. Certificate No. 5976. Running time, 59 minutes. Release date, February 16, 1940. General audience classification.

The Invisible Killer

(Producers Pictures Corp.)

Usual Murder Mystery

Joseph O'Donnell's adaptation of Carter Wayne's novel, "Murder for Millions," is constructed around a feud between a girl reporter and a police lieutenant of the homicide squad. The picture, produced by Ben Judell and released by Producers Pictures Corporation, strives for swift action.

Grace Bradley, whose screen roles in the last half dozen years have been many, portrays "Sue Walker," the girl reporter; Roland Drew and William Newell enact the roles of the two police officers. Alex Callam, Frank Coletti, Sydney Grayler, Boyd Irwin and Jeanne Kelly are in support.

Three murders committed in exactly the same manner baffle the police. "Sue Walker," in an effort to save her reportorial job, starts an investigation of her own. With the aid of "Jerry Brown" (Roland Drew) and his assistant "Pat" (Newell) she apprehends the murderer.

Sherman Scott directed.

Reviewed at the Central theatre on Broadway, New York, at a showing to a mid-afternoon audience.—George Spires.

Produced and distributed by Producers Pictures Corp. Ben Judell, producer. Directed by Sherman Scott. Adapted for the screen by Joseph O'Donnell from an original story by Carter Wayne. Waggon" is in its film version—music, back-chat, deliberately ancient gags, the same stars and the same catch phrases, and if the kitchen stove is missing there is makeweight, (accent on the second syllable), in the form of a Nazi spy element.

Askey is an irresistible personality, diminutive and dynamic, with an individual brand of comedy, mercurial in movement and speech, and with a peculiarly funny line in songs about insects and birds. His foil, Richard ("Stinker") Murdoch, debonair and handsome, is another artist of versatility and charm. Jack Hylton and his band play personal roles as well as swing, with Freddy Schweitzer and the Northerner, Patricia Kirkwood, adding appeal. Radio personalities Michael Standing, creator of a Saturday night outside broadcast, and C. H. Middleton, whose gardening talks are, because of his microphone personality, peak hours in British radio, are dragged in merely to flavour the whole. London journalists Paul Holt and Jonah Barrington of the Daily "Express" are seen inconsequentially and unnecessarily for two flashes. . . . Only that kitchen stove is missing.

There is a trifling story about Askey and Stinker discovering a television plot in a Manor taken over by Nazi spies.

Wally Patch as a Cockney janitor and Peter Cawthorne help to savour the concoction with a vein of character.

Shown to a trade audience at the Cambridge the film's screening was marked by an unceasing ripple of laughter which developed to gusts of tempestuous variety at moments. Though criticism of the raggedness and irrelevance of the film were by no means absent, there were no two views about its popular appeal.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Skeleton on Horseback

(C. L. Import Corp.)

Pacifistic Preachment

Said to be the last work of the famous European penman, Karel Capek, as well as the final film made in Czechoslovakia, this importation, preaching anti-war sentiments, becomes doubly tragic. Furthermore, Fannie Hurst, who has supplied English titles, says in a foreword that some of the persons concerned with the production are living in exile, others in concentration camps.

In back of the distributing company designation C. L. Import Corporation is the name of Carl Laemmle, one-time head of Universal. Mr. Laemmle had become connected with the film just prior to his death in September of 1939.

Inadequate technical facilities, understandable in the light of the circumstances under which the picture was filmed, mar the full appreciation of the picture's message. Acting is adequate, although the dictator borders on burlesque.

In the story, a mysterious disease is ravishing a country; the cure is the secret of one man, a humanitarian-scientist, "Dr. Galen." The "Marshal," stricken with the malady agrees to call off the war in return for treatments. A "patriotic" mob kills the doctor for voicing his pacifistic doctrine. The leader is left to his fate, a "skeleton on horseback."

Exhibition of the work has been forbidden in totalitarian countries.

The audience at an afternoon performance at the Belmont theatre in New York City was small and undemonstrative.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Flash Gordon Conquers The Universe

(Universal)

Serial

Based on the newspaper cartoon, Universal brings back for the third time the adventures of "Flash Gordon," played by Larry "Buster" Crabbe. In a chapterplay, of fifteen episodes search the stratosphere for a mysterious death and "Professor Zarkov" (Frank Shannon) search the stratosphere for a mysterious death powder that is terrorizing the earth. They discover that it is the work of "Emperor Ming the Merciless" (Charles Middleton). But that is only the beginning, For fans who enjoyed the other fantastic serials on "Flash Gordon" this one should be interesting. Each chapter runs 21 minutes.

Park Your Baby

(Columbia)

Fable Cartoon

Animated by Harry Love and Louie Lilly, with a musical background by Joe De Nat, the latest in Columbia's Scrappy cartoons deals with a nursery in a department store. "Scrappy" is the guardian. A tough father leaves his tougher twin sons in "Scrappy's" care. The kids nearly ruin everything. "Scrappy" finally puts the twins in the "Bad-Boy Pacifier" and when the father returns he doesn't recognize his sons.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Dave Apollon and His Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Melody Master Offering

The pixie personality of Dave Apollon is exploited in this number from the Melody Master bandstands. Between orchestral numbers Maestro Apollon offers his peculiar line of accented dialogue, good for a laugh or two. Besides the band numbers there are interludes for a feminine singer and a dancer to do their turns. The musicale is light and frothy, and should slightly sweeten any general run of program.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Mechanix Illustrated, No. 3

(Vitaphone)

Interesting Color Parade

The contents for this interesting and educational brief on things mechanical include a study of a new chemical process in manufacturing a substance that resembles silk, a consideration of the matter of cold light and its various uses, the inspection of some sides of the salmon canning industry and the preparation expended in the erection of a giant sized electric sign. The matter is of particular appeal for scientific and school groups, but the explanatory commentary makes the exposes understandable to general audiences—Running time, 10 minutes.

Top Notch Tennis

Sports Review

Champions of the tennis world demonstrate, while Ed Thorgersen explains, the art of tennis. With the slow motion camera the audience is able to analyze for itself the forms and techniques of Bobby Riggs, Jack Bromwich, Adrian Quist, Jack Crawford, Kay Stammers, Dorothy Bundy and May Sutton. The subject should be enjoyed by those who appreciate muscular grace and coordination as well as by those interested in the sport.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Nothing But Pleasure

(Columbia)

Keaton Comedy

Two reels of dead-pan, flat-footed comedy is brought to the screen by Columbia in "Nothing But Pleasure" starring Buster Keaton and Dorothy Appleby. Buster, buying a new car, decides to save money by going to the factory for it. Returning home Buster loses more money in repair bills as a consequence of accidents than he had hoped to save. Finally, in an attempt to aid the police in capturing bank bandits, he wrecks his car completely. It's an interesting comedy in the Keaton manner.—Running time, 17½ minutes.

Thank You, Mr. Silkworm

(Renown - British)

Crafts Interest

Here is a study, with a certain flavour of antiquity and grace in its setting, of the cultivation of the silkworm and the translation of his silk into modern wearing apparel. The silkworm is bred and nurtured in a venerable English castle, by a titled Lady, and the background is attractive. The manufacturing process has interest, and is competently recorded. The pseudonym of the commentator covers one of the finest speaking voices in England, that of a wellknown BBC announcer. Toby Carpenter is the producer.—Running time, 15 minutes.

Smart Footwork

(Renown-Palfreeman)

Bright Commentary

In this production by Toby Carpenter, about the craft of shoemaking by hand, the processes are covered from the dressing of the skins through factory and workshop to the finished article. A bright commentary adds its interest.—Running time, 15 minutes.

Popular Science—J9-4

(Paramount)

Color Subject

Paramount's "Popular Science" subjects are always well made, educational and entertaining, and this number is no exception, this time concerning scientific poultry farming in midtown Chicago, the discovery of aniline dyes, and the migration of salmon by elevators past Grand Coulee and other Columbia River dams to hatcheries where artificial propagation insures the nation's salmon supply. Then there's "Professor Oakes," who has invented a bedside lamp extinguisher operating on snore power. The subject has been filmed in color.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Where Turf Meets Surf

(MGM)

Comedy at Del Mar

Sally Payne and Mary Treen are the two comediennes of this MGM Miniature, which has the Del Mar race track for its setting and Nat Pendleton for fun. The two girls arrive at the track with little money and a large taxi bill, so they bet on the horses. Their hunches are good, but Pendleton, guest handicapper for the day, has other ideas and horses which always just lose. Film stars present at the races include Bing Crosby, Pat O'Brien, Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Stuart Erwin, Virginia Bruce and Edmund Lowe. It makes for enjoyable comedy.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Edgar Runs Again

(20th Century-Fox)

Terry-Toon

The one-time famous race horse, "Edgar," is routed from the park bench by the arm of the law. As he runs away from a glue factory, motorcycle cops chase him but he is saved by a junkman. When the blare of the bugle at a race track comes to his ears, "Edgar" speeds to the track and beats all horses to the finish for the prize money. A likeable cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

You Nazty Spy

(Columbia)

Three Stooges

A fast moving burlesque on dictatorships is staged by the Three Stooges, with Moe as a dictator the public will have little difficulty in recognizing. A group of munition makers makes Moe dictator of Moronica, with Curly field marshal and Larry minister of propaganda. The comedy should make many new fans for the Three Stooges.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Stone Age Cartoon

(Paramount)

Fleischer Subject

The first of a new series by Max Fleischer for Paramount release, this cartoon pokes fun at the eternal triangle, the word eternal having special significance for this is set in the Stone Age. The characters are "I. M. Stonebrooke," his wife and his stenographer. "Stonebrooke," who operates a rock company, hires a new stenographer. He takes her to the "Cave Inn" night club but "Stonebrooke's" wife finds out and comes a-running. The cartoon has some good comedy sequences, one in particular having to do with dictation of a letter which the stenographer chisels speedily on a rock. Directed by Dave Fleischer.—Running time, seven minutes.

Kitten's Mittens

(Universal)

Lantz Cartune

Another in the series of Walter Lantz Cartunes in color brings to the screen the story of the three little kittens who lost their mittens. To get their pie they say a robber stole them. At a police lineup the kittens accuse an orphan kitten. When they fear that he will be hanged they confess.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Jimmy Dorsey & His Orchestra

(Paramount)

Headliner

This is classified as one of the Headliner series and is an orchestra subject featuring Jimmy Dorsey and his boys and a girl singer, Helen O'Connell. Orchestra subjects are no novelty any more but Paramount has inserted a novelty touch in the introduction here of Dorsey, Miss O'Donnell and Bob Eberly, also a vocalist, shown first in other pursuits, and then performing. Played and sung are such songs as "Bebe," "My Wubba Dolly," "Only a Rose" and "John Silver," all in the manner known as swing. Directed by Leslie Roush.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Paragraphic—V9-6

(Paramount)

Pilots and Hats

Two widely diversified subjects are offered in this Paragraphic which has been filmed in color. In the first the cameraman follows a youthful pilot on his first solo flight. The second subjects concerns hats, men's hats, from the first operation in the making of felt to the finished product. It is an extremely interesting process entertainingly presented. Narrated by Tom Shirley.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Country Fair

(Central Films)

Country Life on Display

Following "Chinook's Children" and "Zoo in Manhattan," Philip M. Brown's latest offering is Country Fair. Here is a comprehensive camera study of the Danbury Fair, held each year at Danbury, Conn. Starting with the food exhibits the camera takes the audience through the amusement area and winds up with shots of the hoopla and honky tonk of the side shows.

The highlights are the oxen pulling contest and the display of the prize winning cattle. This is a subject that should be interesting to metropolitan dwellers as well as rural.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Little Lambkin

(Paramount)

Fleischer Cartoon

A Max Fleischer "Color Classic" cartoon, "Little Lambkin" tells the story of a little boy who lived in the country and had as his playmates a rabbit and a squirrel. The boy's parents decide to live in the city but the boy has other ideas. He switches the electrical connections in their new apartment so that the radio starts shooting ice cubes and the ice box turns into an oven. So the family moves back to the country.—Running time, seven minutes.

Walker Favors Limited New York Film Production

Former Mayor James J. Walker said he was supporting Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's plans to revive production in the East, but held that not more than 10 per cent, and probably less, of the industry's total production can be centered in New York. Mr. Walker said: "We cannot expect a 200 million dollar industry to move bodily from Hollywood to New York. But a small part of it can be set up here, and I believe it will."

The former mayor, who has been renewing contacts in the film business, said he believes "it is feasible to create a strong national organization of exhibitors, such as we had years ago." Mr. Walker was general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in the organization's early days.

20 MILLION NICKELS FROM CONCESSIONS

Confection Sales Increase 40% in Chicago Area, Pay Rent of Some Small Houses

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH in Chicago

Nickels, nickels, nickels. About 20,000,000 of them are spent every year in theatres for candy, popcorn and other refreshments in the Chicago territory alone.

This gigantic business in small purchases brings about $1,000,000 a year into the coffers of those who handle the confection concessions in some 300 to 400 theatres in this territory. Candy and popcorn by the carload are needed to keep the vending machines and counters filled.

Company Services 250 Theatres

The Confection Cabinet Company, a national confection concern, services 250 to 300 theatres in the Chicago film territory. This area extends from Bloomington, Ill., on the south to Rockford and Freeport on the north and northwest. Ft. Wayne, Indiana, is the eastern boundary of the area. Theatre circuits which deal with the Confection Cabinet Company include the Paramount-Publix Great States theatres; Warner Bros. theatres, Essaness circuit, RKO theatres, and many independent houses. The sales in these theatres approximate $10,000 to $14,000 a week.

Accountable for bringing in this revenue are 700 candy vending machines, 100 popcorn machines and 50 candy counters which require the services of about 75 attendants. The downstate theatres show sales of 80 per cent for candy, the remaining 20 per cent practically all for popcorn sales. In the city the sales of candy are about 90 per cent of the revenue; popcorn and soft drinks make up the other 10 per cent.

In this territory there are about 100 theatres that do not have any candy vending machines or candy counters. However, one usually finds a confectionery store next door to the theatre to supply such demands.

B. & K. Has Own Department

The only large theatre group that does not deal with some confection concern is the Balaban & Katz circuit in Chicago, which operates a department of its own for this purpose. Total weekly sales of approximately $8,000 make this a profitable venture.

The B & K group owns its vending machines outright and does not lease any from other concerns. They also buy their candy from various firms; some operators make part of their supply.

To bring in this $8,000 gross from confections each week B & K has 28 candy counters operated by 60 employees, 65 vending machines, 12 soft drink services and 6 popcorn machines. B & K has the largest theatres in the territory and so its candy counters do the biggest business. Some of the counters have recorded single day sales near the $500 mark.

One of the largest Loop theatres recently sold 1,670 candy bars of one make (Milky Way), in one day.

During the past year, with the perfection of vending machines for soft drinks, this phase of the business has developed notably. Installation of machines that mix and serve soft drinks is steadily increasing according to manufacturers.

In some of the small town and subsequent run neighborhood theatres the candy business has meant the difference between profit and loss in the poorer weeks of the year. Many small town exhibitors report that candy and popcorn sales pay the rent.

In the past five years confection sales have increased almost 40 per cent in the larger theatres, more emphasis than ever before being placed on the sale of confections as exhibitors realize the great profits to be obtained. The depression days are held to have been responsible for this special atention to candy sales and the like, exhibitors being forced to use every means at their disposal to make money when theatre business alone was not up to expectations.

With the theatres putting more emphasis on candy sales, vending machine makers have kept stride by improving the machines both in design and operation.

Shows Danish Costs Are Low

An average Danish production must be viewed by 800,000 persons before the production costs are covered, a report on production costs in Denmark notes. The report was submitted to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the United States Department of Commerce, by the American Commercial Attache, Denmark.

Other salient points about Danish production, are the following:

That the average production costs between 150,000 and 160,000 kroner. This is a low figure; but the Danish producer may lose about 50,000 kroner unless the number of persons noted above, view the picture.

Danish studios employ few people, and work quickly. From 20 to 30 camera shots are made daily.

That one of the large expense items is studio rental. It takes between 50 and 60 days to complete the average picture. The salaries of the studio's sound engineer and manager are usually included in the rent.

That actors and extras are generally required to furnish their own costumes.

The average cost of producing a domestic feature is about 50 kroner per meter (3 feet).

The following table gives the approximate costs of the various items found in the budget of an average Danish production:

Item	Kroner
Studio rent	30,000
Actors' salaries	23,000

BOOK REVIEW

HOW THEY MAKE A MOTION PICTURE. By Ray Hoadley and Roman Freulich. Thomas Y. Cromwell Company, New York. $2.00.

MESSRS. Hoadley and Freulich of Universal Pictures Studios, have added a very interesting, concise text to the already large collection of books on the subject of the motion picture in its various phases.

In the first chapter of this little book of 119 pages is presented a brief history of the industry. This is followed by an analytical survey of what actually takes place in the making of a picture, from the selection of the story to the completion and distribution of the finished product.

The photographs by Mr. Freulich, comprising a major part of the book, add much to its attractiveness, as well as illustrating and explaining the subject matter. Especially is this true in the chapter dealing with the animated cartoon.

Enlightenment on many phases of production can readily be found in the book, which should make it of interest both to the general public and to members of the industry. It should, of course, have an especial appeal to students of the motion picture.—LEO BRADY.

Shipments by Air Increase in Year

The airplanes of 18 large lines, flying an average of 248,000 miles daily, over 40,787 miles of airways in the nation, carried 870,906 air express shipments in 1939, compared with 715,410 in 1938, according to the air express division of the Railway Express Agency.

Many of the air express shipments carried motion picture films, supplies, and theatre accessories.

The gain over 1938, in air shipments, is tabulated by the agency as 21.72 per cent. The gross revenue for such shipments increased over 1938 by 24.23 per cent.

OBITUARIES

Wilton Barrett of Board of Review Is Dead at Age 54

Wilton A. Barrett, 54, executive secretary of the National Board of Review since 1923, died Sunday morning of heart disease in the Presbyterian Medical Center, New York City. His wife, Frances Cahoone Barrett, and a daughter, Mrs. Rivard Smith, survive.

Mr. Barrett, born in Philadelphia and educated at Germantown Academy and the University of Pennsylvania, joined the Board shortly after it was formed in 1909 by the People's Institute. In the World War he was a member of the United States Committee on Public Information, in charge of films for soldiers, with the Commission on Training Camp Activities, and with the Public Health Service.

In the board's early days Mr. Barrett helped organize its reviewing activities, in cooperation with the motion picture industry. The board's first name was the National Board of Censorship. This was changed in 1915.

For years the Barrett home in Greenwich Village was a rendezvous of familiars and friends among the arts and artists. There Mr. Barrett built ships models, collected first editions and talked everything from pictures to racing cars with his guests. Robert Flaherty and many another adventuring and experimenting worker in screen technique found encouragement and counsel at that fireside.

It was under the attentions of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett that the first significant endeavour was made to compile and preserve the milestone attainments of the motion picture, in an assembly of historic excerpts entitled "The March of the Movies," first shown at Carnegie Hall a dozen years ago.

Mr. Barrett in recent years developed the board's weekly bulletin, classifying pictures in acceptance categories; started the board's monthly magazine; organized the committee on exceptional photoplays, and helped organize the board's junior reviewers in 1932.

Mr. Barrett wrote many of the board magazine reviews. He also was an author and poet in other fields.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Riverside Memorial Chapel in New York. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery.

Hugh Wright Dead

Hugh E. Wright, 60, actor, dramatist and song writer, died in Windsor, England, February 12th.

C. B. Blake

Colonel Cincinnatus B. Blake, 67, who owned and operated the Savoy theatre in Louisville, Ky., for nearly 20 years, died February 16th at the U. S. Veterans Hospital in Hines, Ill. He was a colonel of infantry in the World War.

WILTON A. BARRETT

Michael Wilkes Dies in Canada

Michael Harris Wilkes, 55, Canadian exploitation representative for United Artists, died February 14th of a heart attack on a train en route from Toronto to Montreal. He had been with United Artists since 1932 and had handled exploitation of motion pictures since the days of "The Birth of a Nation." Funeral services were held Friday in Toronto and the body was sent to Buffalo for interment.

Mrs. Gerald Skey Dies in Singapore

Mrs. Gerald Skey, 34, the former Fanny Victoria Fisher, sister of Joe and Julius Fisher, who have been in Singapore for a number of years operating the Capitol theatre, died January 14th at the General Hospital in Singapore from peritonitis.

Ten years ago when the Capitol was being built, it is the largest house in Singapore, Mrs. Skey acted as secretary to her brother, Joe Fisher, managing director of the theatre. In his company she visited London, New York and Hollywood in the course of business.

Gerson Shalita

Gerson Shalita, 40, manager of the Warner Brothers' Bromley theatre in Philadelphia, died February 16th in Philadelphia. He was a cousin of Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the Warner Brothers theatres, and is survived by his wife, Hortense.

Mrs. Mark Ostrer

Mrs. Mark Ostrer, actress, known as Karen Peterson and wife of Mark Ostrer, head of Gaumont-British, died in London February 16th of gastric influenza. She had been appearing in the road show of "The Women."

Jack Ginsberg

Jack Ginsberg, 46, manager of the Majestic theatre in Paterson, N. J., died February 18th. Mr. Ginsberg is the son of Max Ginsberg, who operates the Majestic and the Beacon in Beacon, N. Y.

Harry Tate

Harry Tate, 67, English vaudeville and screen comedian, died February 14th, from injuries suffered in one of the earliest German raids of the war over the Scottish coast.

IN COURTS

RCA's Loan to RKO in Court

The Radio Corporation of America, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, General Electric Company and 24 officers of these companies were named defendants Monday in a stockholder's suit filed in federal court in New York by J. Webster Manning, holder of 1,000 shares of RCA common stock. Waste and mismanagement are responsible for losses of approximately $270,000,000, it is charged.

The second of two clauses in the complaint charges that RCA loaned $11,600,000 to RKO in November, 1931, secured by a 10-year debenture issued at a time when RCA directors, it is claimed, knew or should have known that RKO was about to file reorganization proceedings. A consolidated stockholders' suit is now pending in the New York supreme court.

The first clause charges RCA officers with transferring 6,500,000 shares of RCA common stock to General Electric and Westinghouse in return for the, it is claimed, illegal transfer to it of rights to manufacture and sell certain radio apparatus.

Vocafilm Anti-trust Case Is Dismissed

The anti-trust suit of Vocafilm Corporation of America against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., for $65,000,000 damages was dismissed Saturday in federal court in New York by Judge Henry W. Goddard with prejudice on stipulation of the parties. The plaintiff had charged the three defendants with driving it out of the business of manufacturing and selling motion picture accessories.

Clarifies Wisconsin Statute

The Wisconsin supreme court this week ruled that part time employees can be compensated in case of injury only on the basis of the time they are actually employed. The ruling was on a test case carried to the state's high court by the State Industrial Commission after an adverse decision in the Dane County circuit court. The ruling clarifies the full time employment term in the workmen's compensation law.

Decision Reserved

Decision was reserved following the ending of the trial in federal court in New York this week on the $100,000 plagiarism suit brought by Edward A. Lynch against Warner Brothers, First National and Joe E. Brown. The plaintiff charged infringement of his book, "When Homer Comes Marching Home," in the film, "The Son of a Sailor."

Consolidated Films Sued

A stockholder's suit against Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., Republic Pictures Corporation of Delaware, Setay Company, Inc., and 20 officers and directors of Consolidated was filed this week in New York supreme court by Beatrice Tunick, holder of 10 shares of Consolidated. The suit claims waste and mismanagement totalling approximately $1,000,000. At the same time, answers were filed by all defendants which denied all claims made in the complaint.

Columbia

BEWARE SPOOKS!: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—Personally thought this one of Joe E.'s poorest, but the crowd seemed to disagree with me from the laughs anyway. House in an uproar all the time and business was above average so I guess it's OK even if I didn't like it. OK for weekend family bill. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 25-27.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

BLIND ALLEY: Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy—Here is a gangster picture that is different. Good acting by Morris and Bellamy. Did the usual Friday business but fell down Saturday. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simms—These Blondie pictures never fail to bring a crowd and are one of the best bets I have under contract and this one was no exception. Everyone satisfied 100 per cent and all waiting for the next one to be released. Running time. 68 minutes. Played January 16-17.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—Excellent picture which for some unkown reason failed to draw. Pleased those who came 100 per cent. Is a picture every American citizen should be compelled to see as it really puts over a good lesson on what goes on in official Washington. Step on it as it should go over if properly handled. Running time, 128 minutes. Played February 4-5.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—This is the kind that makes you glad you are an exhibitor. It is a pleasure to see the expressions on patrons' faces as they leave the theatre. No players in pictures today could done more finished jobs than the four leading players in this grand production. Running time, 130 minutes. Played January 28-30. —Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—Cast great. Just the stars that draw with our patrons. Advertising on radio, newspaper and magazines was not misleading. Running time, 130 minutes. Played December 3-7.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—We doubled this with an Autry, "Rovin' Tumbleweeds," and packed 'em in. I don't know whether they came to see Tony or Gene or both, but this one is a better than average programmer that will appeal especially to young people and music lovers who don't like their music too snooty. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 28-29. —Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

TWO FISTED RANGERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Absolutely the best western of its class we have ever played. Starrett really gives action in his pictures and that is what our western fans want. When a shot is fired they like to see 'em fall. With the exception of one or two other series they fire a thousand rounds and the total result is a shoulder wound. When will the producers realize that western fans do not want to see the desperados captured? They want to see them dead and nothing less. The photography and direction of this picture is outstanding. There is just enough good music by the Sons of the Pioneers to make for real entertainment. The fights are really impressive. You have never seen better. Running time. 62 minutes. Played February 3.—Don Kelsey, Mount Theatre, Rocky Mount, Va. Small town and country patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Good picture. Drew well. But what a terrible print. Full of patches and scratches. My operator worked all morning to put it in condition to run. There is no fun in running a picture with dialogue missing due to patches. Running time, 88 minutes. Played January 28-29.—C. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Thanks, Warners, for this one. One of the finest pictures I have ever had the pleasure of either seeing or exhibiting and one that makes you feel proud you are in show business. If every picture was just half as good as this one we would have nothing to worry about. Audience reaction was terrific. By all means play this one on your best days as it will go over and give 100 per cent satisfaction to your patrons. Hats off to Warners for this show! Running time, 88 minutes. Played January 21-22.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Dick Foran, May Robson—Warners are trying too hard. This picture wasn't one-two-three with their other "Daughters" and didn't draw nearly as as well. Priscilla Lane should have lighter, gayer roles. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 3-5.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran —not much to this one. Good for double bill or bargain night only. Running time, 55 minutes. Played January 18-20.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Here is a dandy. Business off due to bad weather but it clicked like a million with those who came. Ought to be a cinch on a repeat in three or four months. Powell is as good as ever. Running time, 102 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—Personally I was disappointed in this picture. I must have been reading the ballyhoo too carefully and expected too much. Of course, it was very good and some of the scenes are excellent; but there are spots that could be left out, too. Without Mickey Rooney, it wouldn't have been much. Now I can give you the box office report and I must say that it was good. No records broken but no complaints either. I guess I just didn't feel good these days. Of course, you'll play it if you haven't already. Don't give the impression that it is a kid's picture as they are apt to squirm quite a good deal of the time. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 9-10.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kibbee—A good picture. The best box office gross we have had since "Boys Town." Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 4-6.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald Lew Ayres—Very disappointing and did not draw. MGM seems to have made a mistake in splitting up the team of Eddy and MacDonald, for the fans simply turned the cold shoulder to this picture and stayed at home. Running time, 113 minutes. Played February 2-3.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Leon Errol, Roscoe Karns, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—Very good picture with Lana Turner and Richard Carlson giving a very satisfactory performance in the leading roles, but the real stars are Leon Errol and Roscoe Karns. Artie Shaw and his band add a great deal to this production. As I struck bad weather and bad roads cannot say how it would go over under good conditions. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—Good little program picture. Played this on Pal night to nice box office. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—Excellent entertainment. Stewart turns in his usual likeable acting, well supported by Colbert. This picture shows two people impossibly dumb. Perhaps that's the appeal. At any rate, it's first rate entertainment. Running time, 86 minutes.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Lewis Stone, Ann Sothern, William Gargan, Walter Brennan—Did not get many favorable comments on this picture. Too much "cut backs" which made it seem disjointed. Sothern is always good, as was the balance of the cast, but the story was poorly put together. Running time, 69 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: William Gargan, Ann Sothern, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan—Here is a new slant on a story for us common (or country if you like) people. They never laughed big but it was a continuous giggle or snicker. In other words it clicked. Good for Family Night in any small town. Running time 70 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur Ill. Small patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Good picture; fair business. The Hardy Family don't pull like it used to. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 7-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—How can Metro do it. One hit after another. Year after year. What more can be said. Business good. A swell picture. Everybody liked it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 4-5.– R. N. Goodall, Opera-house Theatre, Versailles, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Hardys are taking a decline at box office. Patrons are getting tired of seeing all of these Family series. Take from first Hardy picture to the last is a 60 per cent drop. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker, Eve Arden, Margaret Dumont—The best Marx Brothers picture. Personally I consider the Marx Brothers zero minus in entertainment but the cash customers like them. Some very good circus acts help out but I agree with "Peerless Pauline" that singing does not go with a horse act. Eve Arden as "Peerless Pauline" is very good and Margaret Dumont gives a fine performance. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NICK CARTER, MASTER DETECTIVE: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—The first of a series that have all of the earmarks of a good series. Plenty of action. Played on Bank Night. Good entertainment. Running time. 69 minutes. Played February 6-7.—R. N. Goodall, Opera-house Theatre, Versailles, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina

Claire—Place the crown of versatility on the fair, blonde brow of the only Garbo! Greta, who has had a strict diet of drama all these years plus the cross of having to hear her famous "Ay tank ay go home" remark repeated by the nation's dimwits, has been given a champagne cocktail. And does she glow! This approximates the perfect picture because of its unity, excellent characterizations, and the Lubitsch touch for comedy which I'll take as readily as Capra's. Melvyn Douglas also pitches smoothly, making each line an over-the-fence hit. No bitter satire, this picture kids the life out of Communism. Fire-breathing Martin Dies should take time out from his witch's party to attend. Typical line (by Douglas): "Your Russia fascinates me. I've been closely watching your Five Year Plan for the last fifteen years." Satisfying box office. Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 16-17.—Don Logan, Del Rio Theatre, Los Banos, Cal. Small town, rural and farming patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Barson, Lew Ayres—A fairly entertaining little picture, containing an abundance of laughs but no one in it that really means anything at the box office. Business very poor. Played February 7-8.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER?: Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Greer Garson, the grand performer in "Chips," scandalously miscast in a trivial, goofy picture that had no excuse for having been made in the first place. Business very poor. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—Sorriest Wallace Beery picture I ever saw. Terrible to waste such a star on such a poor story.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

6,000 ENEMIES: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—An excellent program crime picture. Well directed. Held audience in suspense. Good humor. Realistic. Doubled with "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus." Played January 25-27.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Rita Johnson, Tom Neal—A good prison picture, showing the good side of prisons instead of the bad. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Henry C. Anderson, Vogue Theatre, Arcadia, Wis. General patronage.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: Craig Reynolds, John King, Ruth Reece—Just as good if not better than a western produced by major companies. Receipts increasing on Monogram. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 1-3.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane—Weather favorable these days. This type of picture was liked by patrons. This time it made no difference who produced it. Just as good as Metro or Warners could have done. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 14-17.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

Paramount

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—Nice picture but no good for small towns. Smallest Sunday crowd in over two years. Farmer trade simply will not go for this type of musical. Played February 11.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

SIX SHOWMEN JOIN CONTRIBUTOR CORPS

Six more showmen this week enter the constantly lengthening ranks of contributors to the department, "What the Picture Did for Me". They are:

M. BARNEY, Barney's Theatre, Petersburg, Va.

WILLIAM G. CLARK, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark.

R. N. GOODALL, Opera-House Theatre, Versailles, Ohio.

DON LOGAN, Del Rio Theatre, Los Banos, Calif.

JOHN E. MOORE, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta.

ROBERT NERO, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio.

Read the reports of these showmen in this issue.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—The novelty's gone—and, necessarily compared to Disney's "Snow White," this second-of-its-kind (colored feature-length cartoon) by veteran animator Max Fleischer suffers considerably. Disney's magic is in his charming whimsicality; Fleischer's hand is heavier, tending almost consistently to the slapstick so that one gets the impression of viewing a blown-up cartoon. However, in certain Gulliver sequences Max tops Walt in bold, imaginative treatment. Box office only fair; audience reception so-so. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 4-5.—Don Logan, Del Rio Theatre, Los Banos, Cal. Small town, rural and farming patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Good picture that failed to draw. I think it might have been because it was factual rather than entertaining. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Lionel Stander, John Howard—Fair picture, small business. Guess I played it too late and everyone had already seen it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—One of the best small town pictures ever released. Would have done big business if it hadn't have been for the extremely cold weather. Had some back the second and third nights to see this one. Give it a little advertising on a week-end date and watch it go to town. Let's have another one from Weaver Brothers, Republic. Music, comedy, action; just what the doctor ordered for my town. Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 18-20.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

KANSAS TERRORS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo), Jacqueline Wells—Different type western which seemed to please the action fans. Running time, 57 minutes. Played January 25-27.—Don Bloxham, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Edward Ellis, Anita Louise—Very good mid-week show. Business was good and many favorable comments. Edward Ellis is as fine an actor as there is in the business, and you can always bet his pictures will please. Don't be afraid of this one as it's a dandy. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 23-24.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—We gambled on Gene on a Sunday and won. From now on, all Autry pictures will play our theatres on Sunday, if they keep on being as good as they are now. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 28-29.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

THREE TEXAXS STEERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Carole Landis—These three stars are slipping fast. Too much riding and shooting. No story. Very poor weekend attendance. Running time, 58 minutes. Played January 12-13.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE, THE: Lulu Belle and Scotty, the Kidoodlers, Richard Cromwell, Doris Day—Swell picture for small town; business good. This features the radio stars from a well-known National Barn Dance program on the radio and the hillbilly music and comedy is great. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WALL STREET COWBOY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Raymond Hatton—The best Rogers to date. Good story, good acting by "Gabby" Hayes and Raymond Hatton. Give us more like this one. Didn't do average Friday but came back on Saturday. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

RKO Radio

PECK'S BAD BOY WITH THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Edgar Kennedy, Spanky MacFarland, Ann Gillis—Doubled with "6,000 Enemies." Is good juvenile attraction. Played January 25-27.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Lucille Ball, Edward Everett Horton, May Robson, Adolphe Menjou—We played this picture during the worst snow storm in years but considering the weather it did very well. Personally I didn't think the picture was great but it does have its share of entertainment values. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 14-15.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—This is plenty weak. No public appeal. A few exciting moments of shooting by Chinese bandits but you can get that in a western. Business was better than a bank night but I reached in the sock for running expense. OK for Bargain Night or Cash Night if you have any. Running time, 71 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town patronage.

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—Fairly good picture but failed to draw at BO. Jane is losing her popularity and probably will go on a dual bill but will not stand alone. Our advice is to play her on Friday and Saturday but not on Sunday. Running time, 68 minutes. Played January 14.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari, Harold Huber—The poorest Chan ever made and one of the worst pictures on record. Played February 9-10.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Boy, if I get in the tight spots that Power gets into in this picture, I hope to vanish. Believe me, boys, this picture is good for plenty of wellknown belly laughs. Don't be afraid to blow this to the sky. It's really ripe. Good business despite bad weather. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—A fair picture. People came out to see Sonja Henie skate. There was one scene in the picture. Did a good business. A good Friday and Saturday picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 2-3.—R. N. Goodall, Opera-house Theatre, Versailles, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE: Jean Rogers, Glenn Ford—Terrible. They must have made this one in an afternoon, from the looks of it. Audience reaction was very poor and they were certainly glad when the comedy came on and this feature ended. Cancel this one if you can. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—Something slipped here and it must have been Fox. Don't see why they made this one as it had no box office appeal and very little audience appeal for my patrons. One of the poorest Sunday crowds for a long time. May be OK midweek but use your best time for something else. One good thing about it; the Keystone Cop sequences were the funniest my patrons had ever seen and they went wild over it, but the rest of the picture did not register with them at all. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 14-15.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Patric Knowles—Just average little programmer.—Played February 9-10.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—The Ritz Brothers are terrible and should never be cast in another picture. As for Jane, if they keep on giving her this kind of material, she will be a has-been in no time at all. Barely made expenses on this one and it didn't seem to please the few who did venture in. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—The flood and earthquake scenes are excellent but something is just not as it should be in the rest of it. It moves too slowly, I guess. However, it had excellent drawing power and surprised us all. Maybe it was because it was Leap-Year Week in the college and the co-eds wanted to show how generous they could be. No matter what caused it, we had a houseful. The sepia film helped the mood, as it always does. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 8.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari—A complete washout at BO. Pass this one. Enough said. Running time, 62 minutes. Played January 25.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—A real picture. Good acting and the kind of music our people enjoy. The color was good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 11-12.—R. N. Goodall, Opera-house Theatre, Versailles, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Loretta Young—Super flop. Just about made film rental. What does the public care about Bell Telephone Co? Pass this one. Weather cold. Running time, 96 minutes. Played January 17-18.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, John Clements—The best English picture ever made. Story, action, color, cast are splendid. Filmed in London and Egypt. Made the mistake of doubling this. Should draw by itself. Running time, 115 minutes.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: John Hubbard, Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—This show has the punch necessary for a good comedy many of UA pictures lack. Patrons ate this one up. Good draw. Played February 4-5.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—United Artists picture, with very few exceptions, are quality productions that have everything it takes to make them top-notch attractions except the abiliy to make money. This one is a grand picture that pleased the very few who came to see it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 10-11.—Mrs. Dennett Barrett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish—Here is a good entertainment. Ann Sheridan displays her acting in this one. Did fair on Sunday but fell flat on Monday. It's the type of a picture to play on Sunday. Lots of comedy. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 28-29.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish—Very misleading title. The audience came expecting to see winter sports and left very disappointed when all they saw was a very weak and juvenile love story. An excellent picture to leave out of your bookings. If you must play it, put it on a double bill. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 22-23.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Geraldine Fitzgerald, David Niven, Flora Robson—Should win the Academy Award for 1939. Played it twice. "Nuf sed."—M. Barney, Barney's Theatre, Petersburg, Va. General patronage.

Universal

BIG GUY, THE: Jackie Cooper, Victor McLaglen—An excellent picture that did no business for us. Heavy and dramatic but no draw. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Gentlemen, here is a little offering from Universal that will really surprise your box office. Not much to the picture but it brings them in, so why complain? Just a good show from the receipts and deserves the best playing time you can give it. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DESPERATE TRAILS, THE: Johnny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Frances Robinson, Fuzzy Knight—This is a fair western that failed to draw at BO. Bob Baker and Fuzzy Knight do not act much in this one. Running time, 58 minutes. Played January 19-20.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

RIO: Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Victor McLaglen, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo—This picture did not live up to usual standard of Universal productions. One of the poorest pictures I have ever seen. Shakespeare wrote a play called "Much Ado about Nothing," which should have been the title of this one. Poor draw even though it played on a bargain night. Running time, 78 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Mrs. Dennett Barrnett, Princeton and Montello Theatres, Princeton and Montello, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Eddie Albert, Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan, Jane Wyman—Good picture; good business. This should please any day in the week. Plenty of laughs and the baby is cute and clever. Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, "Dead End Kids," Stanley Fields—Here is a picture that they go out raving about. "Dead End Kids" acting outstanding. Drew good at BO and supporting cast very good, especially Stanley Fields. Step on this one and you will get good results. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 21-22.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield—Here is a great picture from picture standpoint but it failed at BO. They don't want costume pictures here. Acting by Muni outstanding but it just didn't bring them in. Running time, 127 minutes. Played January 29-February 1.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Our opinion is that Cagney is miscast in the picture. The picture was good but it failed to draw at BO. Didn't do average business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 23-24.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Charles Bickford—Although this is an old picture, it has not lost any of its appeal. Did very nice business in this town. Well worth picking up if you have not played it. Some of the old Vitagraph productions draw better than their new product and this picture is one of them. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 29-30.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—Excellent for those who like their Stooge Comedies. These all do well for us. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

children, also grownups. For Friday and Saturday. Running time, 18 minutes.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

MOUSE EXTERMINATOR, THE: Phantasies Cartoons—There are no good black and white cartoons made and this one is no exception. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 2—This shows how animals enter into the movie world and how they are trained. This would be appropriate with a "Blondie" picture as "Daisy" is featured as an example of excellent training. Your audience will enjoy this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—Small college town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DAY OF REST, THE: Robert Benchley—Good comedy by Benchley. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—An outstanding short that must not be shoved around any place but used when you need something exceptional to build up a program. That is just how good it is. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: If you will just leave horse racing out of your news, it will be fine. Give us baseball, football and other sports. If you haven't a bet on a nag, then all the races look exactly alike. Don't they?—Don Kelsey, Mount Theatre, Rocky Mount, Va. Small town and country patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: Cartoons—There is no doubt about it. Here is the best cartoon of the year. Don't wait for next Christmas; play it now. The war angle is more dominant than the Christmas angle. Of course, this isn't funny so make your other shorts humorous. Unusually appreciative applause followed this. Running time, nine minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

QUAINT ST. AUGUSTINE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—A grand travel talk. As I spent two vacations there I perhaps enjoyed it more than my patrons. Coloring and descriptions fine but think I would have omitted the Flagler hotel, which is, after all, just a hotel, and spent more time on the interesting sights, more of the narrow streets, the beautiful flowers, orange groves, the old Spanish cemetery and Anastasia Island. Hope you will forgive me, Mr. FitzPatrick, as this is the first criticism I have ever made of your excellent travel talks. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialties—Advertise at the bowling clubs and at better class of bowling leagues. Running time, 10 minutes.—Robert Nero, Barberton Theatre Co., Barberton, Ohio. Small town patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley. Average Benchley comedy. These are too subtle for small town people. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town partonage.

TIME OUT FOR LESSONS: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

AQUA RHYTHM: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Fair short on swimming. Not as good as most of this series. Running time, nine minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—Let's have more like this one. Just about the best short of the year. Pleased everyone and many stayed to see it over again. Play it on days when you have a lot of kids, as they will go wild over the antics of the three bears. Don't pass this one up. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

DOG IS BORN, A: Grantland Rice Sportlights—One of the best of this series. If your patrons like dogs—and who doesn't?—they will surely go for this fine subject. Give it best time. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

FAREWELL VIENNA: Paragraphics—National Philharmonic Orchestra. Very good symphony. Personally liked this but the average person is not educated to it. Small towns don't play this.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

FRESH VEGETABLE MYSTERY, THE: Color Classics—Very clever and different cartoon in color. Lots of good comedy in this one.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

HELLO, HOW AM I?: Popeye the Sailor—Just another cartoon. Popeye is surely slipping of late. Running time, six minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

MOMENTS OF CHARM OF 1940: Phil Spitalny and All Girl Orchestra—Very good musical reel in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Ohio. Small town patronage.

MOMENTS OF CHARM OF 1940: Phil Spitalny and All Girl Orchestra—Very good band act in color. Enjoyed by all. Give it your best time. Running time, 11 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

MUTINY AIN'T NICE: Popeye the Sailor—Good Popeye. A favorite with our double feature patrons. There is more humor to this than any series we run.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

TED FIO RITO AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Swell band act which went over big with my patrons. Give it a plug in your ads; it merits it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

TOUCHDOWN REVIEW: Paragraphics—Very good football subject.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: No. 2—Good single reel which pleased. This series is very entertaining and educational and are usually enjoyed by all. Running time, 11 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BEACH PICNIC: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another swell Disney cartoon. One of the best of this great series. Running time, eight minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

CUPID RIDES THE RANGE: Ray Whitley Comedies—Good musical western which seemed to please. Used in place of second feature with an unusually long feature on my double feature nights. Running time, 17 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

FIVE TIMES FIVE: Dionne Quintuplets—Very good two-reeler which pleased all. If you haven't played it, do so, as the public is always interested in what the Quints are doing. Running time, 19 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 2—This one has more humor than the first one. I can use these reels as often as they want to make them. I think I can draw a few extra customers by advertising this series. Nothing I run outside of a cartoon gets as close attention as an "Information, Please." The sound is much better as compared to number one. This is one way the radio can help your business so don't miss the chance. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: Battle Fleets of England—Very good coverage of English Fleet. I've advertised every issue played but can't get any extra business. Many walkouts on these subjects.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

MICKEY'S PARROT: Walt Disney Cartoon—Fair. Disney is not getting the humor in his cartoons he had a few years back.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

PRACTICAL PIG, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—This one, while clever, didn't go over so big. Have seen much better from Walt. Running time, eight minutes.—Don Bloxham. Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO PATHE SPORTSCOPES: All shorts, leaving out Pathe Scopes, some cartoons, are no good.—M. Barney, Barney's Theatre, Petersburg, Va. General patronage.

SEA SCOUTS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good Disney cartoon. Had the house in an uproar. Running time, eight minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

WRONG ROOM, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—Here is a very good comedy, if you don't mind Errol's type of drunkenness. The scene where he tries to go to bed on a davenport is very funny. There are no slow moments in this from beginning to end. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BIG GAME FISHING: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—You have run a lot of these and this is nothing very different. If your crowd liked the other fishing reels, they'll like this one too. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

HITCH-HIKER, THE: Terry-Toons—Just another cartoon as are all the rest of this series. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

ONE MOUSE IN A MILLION: Terry-Toons—Nothing to write home about in this one. Just filler. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

WICKY-WACKY ROMANCE, A: Terry-Toons—Just a fair cartoon in color. Terry-Toons seem to lack something that the other cartoon series have. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

RHUMBA LAND: Two-Reel Musicals—Too much is too much. A little of such goes a long way and the audience was glad when it was over. Too much rhumba. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Swell reel and the band gets really hot. Play it quick. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BELIEVE IT OR ELSE: Merrie Melodies—This is another of Schlesinger's, made up of a lot of little episodes in color. In general, this isn't as good as others of the series but don't let that stop you from booking it. The imitation of Ripley's voice is fine. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This one is 4706 of last year's release and is it a honey? Just a swell number, but be certain you get a good print. Ours is not so hot. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FILM FAN, THE: Looney Tunes—Best Porky the Pig cartoon we have had in months.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRESH FISH: Merrie Melodies—A very good color cartoon which was enjoyed by all. This series of cartoons are the best on the market. Don't pass them up. Running time, eight minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—Fair cartoon in color. Poorest in this series for a long time. Running time, seven minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

HARE-UM SCAR-UM: Merrie Melodies—This is a screwball type of cartoon that managed to get a good number of laughs. They'll like it. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RIDE, COWBOY, RIDE: Dennis Morgan—Tops in the short field. Can easily pass as a western feature. Well liked by my Sunday crowds. The music is fine and this boy Morgan is really going to go places. Running time, 16 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

SCREWBALL FOOTBALL: Merrie Melodies—Just what the name implies and it is plenty screwy. Lots of laughs and a good cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING STYLES: Melody Masters—Execptionally good band subjects.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

WORLD'S FAIR JUNIOR: Broadway Brevities—Lots of favorable comment on this one. The kid acts were great. Don't waste it. Many stayed to see it the second time. Running time, 20 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

Serial

FLAMING FRONTIERS: Johnny Mack Brown—Fair western serial. Usual Indians and western fighting, shooting. If any company has made a really good serial the past two years, I would like the name of same.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. Suburban patronage.

Warner Sales Shifts

Rud Lohrenz, district manager for Warner Brothers in Kansas City since May, has been transferred back to Chicago, where he will occupy the same post. James Winn, branch manager in Kansas City becomes district manager for the prairie district, which includes Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Louis and Memphis. O. W. Williamson, Jr., branch manager at Memphis, succeeds Mr. Winn in Kansas City. Henry Herbel, district manager at Chicago, replaces W. E. Callaway as west coast district manager. Mr. Callaway becomes Los Angeles branch manager.

Matzen in Peru Post

Charles Matzen, assistant to J. C. Bavetta, managing director in Brazil for Twentieth Century-Fox, has been named manager for Peru. S. Chiesa, Peruvian manager, is being transferred to another post in a similar capacity.

Alan Gundelfinger continues as secretary-treasurer. Jack Durst, Peter Mole, K. F. Morgan, Hollis Myse, H. W. Remershied and Wesley Miller are section managers.

Plan "Cavalcade" at Fair

The New York World's Fair is planning to present a stage show entitled "American Cavalcade" in a new 12,000-seat theatre at the Fair this year. The show is inspired by the film "Land of Liberty," a compilation of scenes from many pictures under the direction of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and which was the outstanding film presented at the Fair last year.

Buys Adjoining Property And Plans New Theatre

W. B. Braswell, proprietor of the Star theatre, Savannah, Ga., has purchased property adjoining the theatre and plans to build a modernized fireproof house on the site. The proposed theatre, Mr. Braswell said, will be a memorial to the people of Savannah in appreciation of the support and cooperation given him since he acquired the theatre last June.

Increasing Capitalization

Co-operative Theatres of Michigan is increasing capitalization from $50,000 to $60,000. Fred DeLodder president, said that the action was being taken in order to act on new applications for membership, as all the older stock had been issued to present members. Minimum stock for each member is one share, at $100, Mr. DeLodder said.

Plan Three Houses

Buffalo Theatres (Shea circuit) is planning three new houses, to be constructed in 1940. V. R. McFaul, head of Buffalo Theatres, has contracted with RCA Photophone for High Fidelity sound reproducing equipment for all three. T. F. McCleary, Photophone salesman, negotiated the deal.

Renews with Altec

Theatrical Managers, Inc., has renewed contracts for Altec service for 14 theatres and has added the Strand in Muncie, Ind., to the service contract. F. C. Dickely and E. C. Shriver negotiated for Altec.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

ABOUT SPRING

From our lofty perch, at this writing, the city roofs are blanketed with snow. The Eastern seaboard is neck-high in blizzards. Ski trains crisscross the countryside as ants after sugar. So let's talk of Spring.

It won't be long, now. It never is. Easter is nigh upon us. So what to do about prying the hibernators away from radiator and fireplace when icy winds depart. And what to do about keeping the ticket-machine churning when the vernal season lures customer to flowering hillside and bosky dell.

Much can be done. And much has been done by Round Tablers already deep in plans for style shows, egg-rollings and other seasonal devices.

The theatreman prepared well in advance for changes that can be turned to boxoffice profit is a long step ahead of the lad who only starts thinking of tomorrow the day before.

NICE 3-TO-1 PERCENTAGE

At the Famous Players Canadian Capitol, in Guelph, Ontario, Stan Andrews booked a date on "Daytime Wife". For additional publicity, he dug up a four-column publicity fashion mat of Linda Darnell, the copy on which stressed style but mentioned no picture. So Stan planted the mat in his daily, had the paper mortise the copy panel to include the title, theatre and date. Free space topped paid lineage, three-to-one.

Any compilation of free newspaper publicity would find women's fashions topping everything else. Check the youngest weekly, the most important daily. The answer is the same. What's being worn and by whom garners the most regular reader attention. Motion picture star style stuff has done much to make it so. Theatremen are quick to realize it.

NO KIDDING ABOUT IT

Tell a manager he possesses a lightning-quick mind and the lad will probably tell you to stop kidding. Nevertheless, top theatremen without the instinct for automatic thinking are rare. Countless instances have been set down to prove it. Now another is contributed by Milt Harris, Loew's Cleveland publicity head, to the credit of Arnold Gates of the Park.

Due to a light failure in that area during the matinee, the theatre was completely dark for an hour. Rather than offer refunds, Gates in three minutes organized an emergency stage show among the personnel, ushers and stagehands combining to keep patrons at ease and entertained until the lights came on.

Only three refunds were necessary, as reported in the Plain Dealer page one two-column story of the Round Tabler's skillful handling.

Presentation of the 1939 Quigley Grand Awards to Ray Bell and Lige Brien, in Hollywood, is set for March 12th, following a luncheon at the Victor Hugo restaurant given by Martin Quigley. Winners will spend a week in Hollywood as guests of Quigley Publications. See story in this week's news section for fuller details.

A TOP SHOWMAN DEPARTS

The membership will mourn with us in the sad tidings of Earl Knight's recent passing in Fairmont, W. Va., from where the redoubtable "Fuzzy" campaigned with vigor and imagination over a stretch of years in the service of Warner Theatres. An active contributor to these pages and a valuable member of your Round Table, "Fuzzy" will long be remembered as a top exploitation hand. He was the kind of a lad it was a real pleasure to know.

Honesty makes it difficult for your Chairman to accept the praise bestowed by Mr. Ramsaye in his last week's editorial rejoinder to this department's criticism. What the editor of Motion Picture Herald generously regards as an "able technique" is nothing less, if the truth be known, than a continuing and often desperate striving, a habit of work common to all of us who serve or have served long-houred days in the theatre, and with which Mr. Ramsaye is entirely familiar.

Phonograph Record Sells "Child" Date for Kirsh

Promoted from local radio station by Dick Kirsh of the Aldine, in Wilmington for "Child Is Born" was a special phonograph record carrying cast, title, playdate, theatre name and short picture plug. Also promoting phonograph from local music store, Dick set his staff to dialing telephone subscribers and playing message for listeners.

Contest angle was covered by local newspapermen acting as judges in a "prettiest nurse" search of the city hospitals. Winner was presented with promoted gifts, stunt covered with stories and art in cooperating papers. Nurses and doctors were circularized in addition to notices being planted on all bulletin boards in hospitals, and special emergency call cards were available for these people who had been so notified in advance.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Transportation Company Aids Fitzpatrick on "Wind" Tiein

Effective tieup was arranged with officials of local bus company by Ed Fitzpatrick to sell his "Gone With the Wind" engagement at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., whereby drivers were instructed to distribute heralds on their daily runs throughout the outlying districts. Heralds carried cast, playdates, and picture copy plus order blanks for reservations. Special 40 by 60's were also planted in all city and suburban stations calling attention to the fact that special late busses were being run during the engagement.

Booking 25 midgets who had appeared at the World's Fair for a two-day engagement, Fitzpatrick arranged a broadcast over WATR, luncheon as guests of the Lions Club and tour around city in bannered cars selling their personal appearance, as they visited schools and factories.

Bell Lands Much Publicity On Handsome Iceman Quest

Arranged by Ray Bell, Loew's Capitol, Washington, was the local contest, which was the first of sectional contests to be held throughout the nation, for the purpose of choosing the country's most handsome iceman. Sponsored by the National Association of Ice Industries, each local winner receives a pair of silver tongs and the national winner a Hollywood contract. Papers were generous with stories and art work of the ice cold contestants on stage.

During the four-hour stopover of Burgess Meredith and Lon Chaney, Jr., prior to the opening of "Of Mice and Men," Bell arranged a stage appearance and two radio interviewers in addition to two radio stories following morning and several other breaks.

Morris' Double-Truck

To usher in the new year, city manager Seymour L. Morris, Schines Theatres in Lockport, N. Y., promoted a double truck ad page whereby each cooperating merchant offered prizes to the parents of the first child born in 1940. Theatre came through with guest tickets for a month. Theatre ads were prominently spotted with appropriate tiein copy.

WIRES ON LATEST DATES

Newark Boy Scouts Induct Star of "Swiss Family"

Personal appearance Terry Kilburn, juvenile star of "Swiss Family Robinson" in connection with engagement allowed for extensive tieins. Was made member of local boy organizations, including Boy Scouts and Newark Junior Police. Also received key to city and special courtesy card from Deputy Mayor Fox. Large advertising space to announce personal appearance.

Eddie Sniderman, theatre publicity head, interviewed Kilburn from stage. Interview on star's city-wide tour featured in all papers, about five columns of valuable space for buildup of date.

"Vigil" Breakfast Preview Held for Waterloo Nurses

Held special screening of "Vigil in the Night" 8:00 A. M. ahead of opening with 50 night nurses attending. Tieup with cafeteria provided breakfast for nurses and press at theatre. Waterloo Daily Courier covered preview with review of picture and two-column picture of nurses enjoying breakfast in theatre foyer run day ahead of opening. Nurses' comments on picture incorporated in press review. Teaser ad campaign, "Private Nurse Says", run four days in advance. Tieup with newsstands with special posters and libraries with bookmarks.

JOHN DOSTAL,
Manager, Orpheum, Waterloo, Iowa

Harrisburg Date on "Castle" Tied to Star's Last Picture

Publicity on Burgess Meredith featured publicity campaign on "Castle on the Hudson", account star just finishing local engagment "Of Mice and Men". Special stories Warden Lawes also headlined. Played up new romantic team Garfield and Sheridan to good results, predicting future teaming of this talented couple. Radio programs and window displays also effective.

Due to early pre-release date on picture, advertising material received shortly before date made difficult fuller campaign.

"Vigil" Tops Stage Show To Stress Cleveland Date

For "Vigil in the Night" Palace, Cleveland, featured advance screening for critics. Eight 40x60 photographic composite blowups, made in our photographic shop, shown in lobby week in advance. Specially written trailer, combined with National Screen trailer, used week ahead. Copy supplied radio columnist and used locally; newspaper stories and art breaks week in advance.

National newspaper campaign tied in and theatre used extra space in addition. Stressed picture as being by author of "The Citadel". Picture was billed over stage, which is unusual, as this stage showhouse features shows, and all critics played picture over stage show. This in itself gave picture super-importance.

"Swiss" Screened at Hospital For Children in Denver

On "Swiss Family Robinson" used the following exploitation: Fifty 24-sheet stands used two weeks prior. Screened picture for children's hospital and parent-teachers' association, newspapers giving us art for both screenings. Window displays in all book stores and several department stores. Three announcements daily two weeks in advance and during run over two radio stations. Announcements made on bulletin boards in all schools. Large newspaper campaign. Obtained stories in Denver Post every day for seven days in advance.

Sent out Western Union telegrams to all school principals. Used large lobby displays which included a revolving mechanical book. Two 15-foot banners used in front, using ten 40 x 60 blowups. Entire staff carried bannerettes four weeks in advance. Large illuminated window display obtained on the main thoroughfare. Using bookmarks in all libraries.

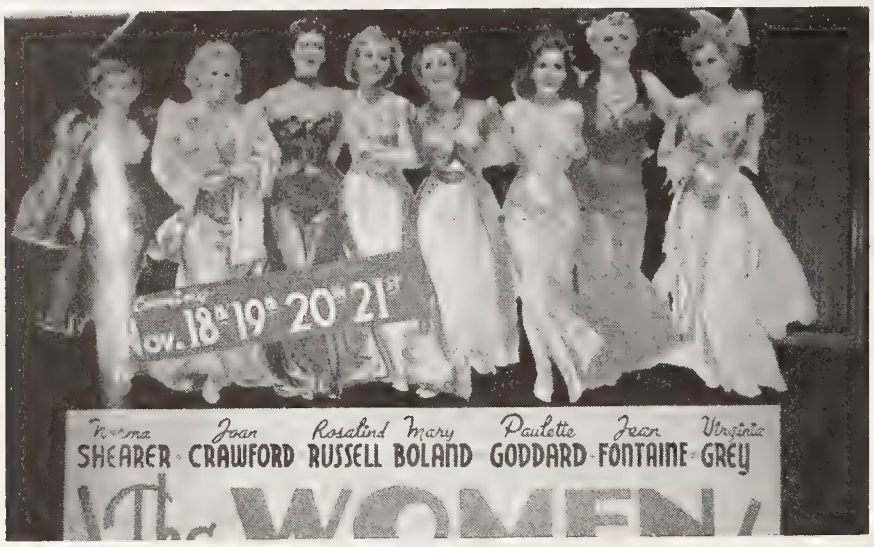
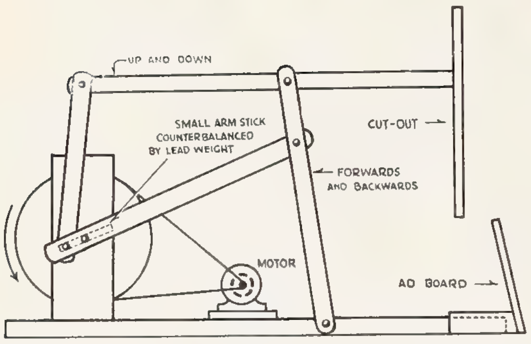
A VALLIERE ANIMATION





Plan, left, explains Paul Valliere's "Women" animation at the Capitol, Quebec, reproduced above, showing figures as though walking, moving up and forward, down and backward. Motor is belted to flywheel. Attached to wheel shaft is small arm stick counterbalanced by lead weight, causing upper bar attached to cutout to move up and down. Middle bar moves forward and backward.

Snelling's Art Experience Helps Sell "Four Daughters"

The promotion of full page co-ops is a difficult job in New Zealand, according to Doug Snelling, publicity manager for Warner Bros., in that sector who forwards a page on "Four Daughters" at the Regent, Wellington as representative of those he obtained on numerous dates for the picture.

Banner head carrying picture and theatre copy, with group shot of the four daughters, topped the page, balance of space divided into four equal parts for ads. Each ad was illustrated by half-tone of one of the daughters and merchant copy tied in to picture and title.

Snelling bases his success on his experience as a commercial artist which enabled him to layout the page so that advertisers could see what they were getting. After one paper ran the page, Doug found editors in other cities much easier to sell.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lamm's "Wives" Day

Eight column streamer across cooperative ad page promoted by Louis Lamm at Warner's Palace, Lorain, Ohio proclaimed that it was "Wives Day in Lorain" in connection with his opening on "Four Wives." Each merchant's ad contained copy tied directly to the picture, in addition to cuts of the four girls. Theatre ad in center of page included entire cast, etc. Display cards were planted in various stores, window cards in hotels, restaurants and bus terminals and a two day quiz contest featured in paper whereby guest tickets went to those correctly answering questions pertaining to the picture, the four girls' previous roles, etc., etc.

Lawton and Flynn Devise Strong Campaign for "Geste"

Giant board on main artery leading into the city carrying four 24-sheets with copy panel in center featured the extensive billing campaign on "Beau Geste" at the Prince Edward, Sydney, Australia. For street cars, Manager Mel G. Lawton and Herman E. Flynn, ad head, put out a special two-color sticker for car windows. Scene from the picture was made into a painting, 10 feet by 20, and placed on the theatre facade a month ahead.

Among window tie-ins was display in gift shop, injecting wartime note, display built around gifts for men in camp, thus linking present war to military background of pictures. Fashion tie-ins were made on styles featured by women players. Style hints in the same direction were broadcast over leading local station, as was special dramatization of the play on popular Lux hour.

Newspaper and magazine publicity was vast, in stories and art, covering angles on the filming, Susan Hayward style shots and feature stories. Also emphasized was a four-part pictorial serialization planted in numerous suburban and country papers.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Strachan-Cruciger Co-op Ad

Knox Strachan at the Laroy in Portsmouth and Dick Cruciger at the Columbia both promoted a full page of ads on "Gulliver's Travels". To give it additional reader interest, a different character from the picture appeared in each of the ads. Theatres giving guest tickets to contestants submitting the best set of figures colored by them.

Latest Flashes on Top Exploitations That Sold Tickets

Figuring that his one-day Saturday feature booking was not heavy enough to bring business, Burgess Waltmon, Lightman Theatres city manger in Columbus, Miss., built up his program at the Princess with a booking of four name band shorts. Clipping the titles and endings of each reel, Waltmon combined them with the addition of his own title and ending made up for him by National Screen, titling the combination "Band Session," and advertised under that heading.

The unique attraction was plugged 10 days ahead with lobby display, special trailer and posting in the drawing area. Teaser ads were also used in the dailies, weekly and college publications. Two days ahead, heralds were widely distributed. The booking rolled in a nice Saturday gross, according to Burgess, who intends repeating the idea shortly with another lineup of bands.

Students Sponsor Pictures

Offered as an effective promotion with high school classes is the plan used by Manager D. M. Dillenbeck, Rialto, Bushnell, Ill., wherein the students are allowed to sponsor certain pictures on a benefit basis. Dillenbeck works with the class advisor in suggesting ways and means of selling tickets, which are taken up at class meetings. The city is zoned, each student having one section to cover, house-to-house. For further school support, the Round Tabler offers a pass to every high school pupil attaining a set class grade at the end of each six-week period. Increase in the second six-week period was 35 per cent over the first.

Girl Basketball Team Successful

It's basketball by girl teams at Fabian's Ritz, Staten Island, N. Y., where Manager George Trilling sponsors games on the stage each Thursday night. Named the Ritz White Caps, the team, organized and trained by the theatreman, has taken over a lot of top girl quintets, with much added boxoffice support resulting, according to Edgar Goth, district publicity head. Contests are put on with a lot of showmanship, bally, announcer on stage delivering rapid-fire comment and play-by-play description.

Papers have gone for the idea solidly with feature stories, photos and sports column comment. Trilling has been able to obtain announcements of the games in high schools and playground basketball courts where most of the fans gather. Three-sheets and posters over a wide area and candid action shots of the games in sports stores windows have also helped in spreading the word.

Crinoline Gal Sells "Swanee"

Arriving in Holyoke, Mass., during a local Dollar Day celebration, Bill Powell inaugurated his new duties as City Manager for Western Massachusetts Theatres by turning out a "shopper" to sell "Swanee River" at the Victory. The shopper, a good-looker dressed in crinoline, was placed in an old-fashioned horse-drawn buggy, appropriately bannered. Girl made the main streets and stopped in the stores to distribute heralds.

Civic and Church Heads Cooperate on "Finland"

The combination not always attained, of building immeasurable goodwill and distinctly adding to the grosses on a campaign is reported by P. E. McCoy in conjunction with his showing of March of Time's "Republic of Finland" at the Georgia, in Athens, Ga. Sensing the picture's promotional possibilities as a means to raise funds for Finland relief, theatreman contacted his newspaper on the run. Followed, a full page of photos showing the Finns at war, center of page carrying two column notice plugging playdates and plea for donations.

On opening morning, key figures in the relief drive, reporters and radio newscasters were guests of the management at a pre-showing of the film. Cooperating paper and radio stations gave much publicity to the campaign and to the picture.

Cooperation of his local clergy highlighted the "Finland" campaign of Manager Clifford Boyd at the Paramount, in Brattleboro, Vermont, the theatreman arranging for a leading minister to address his audience on opening night. Front page stories calling attention to the talk were run ahead and day after, in all of which title, and playdates were prominently mentioned.

"Pinocchio" Press Book Covers All Situations

Bound in a colorful folder cover, the pressbook for "Pinocchio," created by Hal Horne, is broken down into five different sections, stepped for quick reference. Promotion, exploitation, publicity, newspaper features and advertising are thus departmentalized for coverage in all situations.

The promotion lists such items as tieins with over 300 key city department stores, comic strips in 175 newspapers and a half-million retail stores handling the 1,500 "Pinocchio" items.

Redmond's Valentine

Opening "His Girl Friday" on Valentine's Day, Jimmie Redmond at the Bonham in Fairbury, Neb., purchased common red drawing paper from which hearts were cut and imprinted with title, cast and playdates. Day ahead bill peddlers placed one of the hearts on every doorknob and car handle in the city.

TOBOGGAN SLIDE SELLS COX'S DATE

Head of a committee that raised funds for a 700-foot town toboggan slide, Bob Cox received dividends for his efforts by increased grosses on "69th" at the Park, Dexter, Maine. In charge of icing the newly erected slide inaugurated with a program of winter sports, Cox cut up old window cards to spell out title and date. These were placed in the chute which, iced over, froze quickly. The cutout letters stood out like a sore thumb, says Bob, in easy view of the thousands who gathered for the occasion.

THE QUIGLEY AWARDS

Complete campaigns are not necessary. The Awards are based on single ideas or promotions—the "meat" of a campaign. This may be in the form of an individual contest, tieup, display, front-page story or what have you. All that has to be done is to send along that one idea with the usual evidence.

Members who desire to send along complete campaigns are invited to do so. If meant for the Awards, please make sure the top individual ideas or promotions to be considered are clearly indicated.

Theatremen who earn Fortnight Appointments most frequently in the two-week Fortnight periods will receive more consideration from the judges in the voting for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. Thus entrants are advised to enter material in as many of the Fortnights of each Quarter as possible.

Stoltz Invites Folks To Fish in His Lobby

Conceived by Arnold Stoltz, Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., for "Rulers of the Sea" was a neat stunt arranged through the cooperation of the Pepsi-Cola people. Five thousand glass tubes were given from the stores handling the drink, in each of which was a rolled herald reading "A message from the sea." Taken out of the bottles, the herald itself read "a thousand thrills have been cast upon the shore for you to see," this was followed by plug for the picture, reverse side carried copy to the effect that each herald was numbered from one to 50 and if brought to the theatre might win a carton of drinks for the holder.

In the theatre lobby was a tank in which floated 50 half-filled bottles, so that they stayed with cap up. On the bottom of each was a number from one to 50; if the patron grabbed a bottle with number corresponding with their herald, they received six bottles of Pepsi-Cola. Entire cost of stunt was met by the drink people.

High School Choir Builds Community Sing on "Swanee"

An unexpected aid for the date on "Swanee River" at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Nebr., was obtained by Manager Ray Holtz and Jimmie Redmond, publicist, through a newly organized high school choir. Outfit, voted slightly sensational, had vetoed outside appearances until theatremen persuaded officials of the value of theatre showing in the public eye.

Choir was booked to appear day ahead and strong advance campaign plugged event as special Community Sing. Listed in the copy were all the Foster numbers in the picture which the choir was to lead. Attendance was capacity with most of the high school on hand plus proud parents and others attracted by the opportunity to join in the festivities. Heralds containing words of the songs listed and plug for the picture were distributed in the audience.

Only cost to theatre was the extra ad, with school furnishing entire stage setting, which Redmond arranged with title and playdates in cutout letters.

Gag "Ninotchka" Display Aids Date for Fretwell

Ingenious lobby display was created for "Ninotchka" by Jack Fretwell at the State in Harrisonburg, Va., in the form of cutout smiling head of Grabo showing atop large upright sign. At base was a pair of dummy legs, borrowed from dress shop, which gave the impression of the star standing behind the sign which read: "This time I don't want to be alone. When I laugh, all Harrisonburg is going to laugh with me." For street bally during snowstorm man attired in white summer clothing wore back banner with copy: "Don't laugh at me; wait till you see," etc.

Outstanding feature of his "Swanee River" campaign was float made up of two six-sheets and special art work built on automobile. Public address system consisting of record player and microphone was installed to play hit tunes from picture. For his front, Jack used special banjo hangers and large colored valance and to build up the date ministers and school principals were circularized. Martin Caracofe, assistant, aided in putting over the dates.

Cocks Gives Vaudeville Well Rounded Campaign

To acquaint Syracusians with the new stage policy in effect at Schine's Strand, Round Tabler Harvey Cocks, created a new false front with 30-inch cutout letters spelling "vaudeville" placed atop marquee. 30 by 40 frames were placed on the sidewalk carrying copy with photos and bargain prices. Exploitation included imprinted paper napkins which were planted in chain drugstores, five and tens, etc., small cards were distributed in hotel rooms, restaurants, night clubs and other spots, bulletin boards in schools and factories were covered and announcements made in the four other Schine units.

Popular girl radio commentator on Station WSYR interviews stage headliner opening day, giving the theatre's new policy a good break and another commentator from WFBL also cooperated in the same manner. Street bally included boys carrying vaudeville during peak hours and appropriately bannered sound truck also heralded the show.

VETERAN ASSOCIATIONS TIED TO "69TH" DATES

Wide Cooperation Obtained by Theatremen with Military Outfits for Top Campaigns

Continuing reports from the field on "Fighting 69th" show no let up in the large-scale promotions on this exploitation picture, in every instance the Round Tablers tying in successfully with local units of the famed regiment, American Legion and National Guard.

In Danville, Ill., a direct hookin was made with the local chapter of the Rainbow Division, the only chapter in the state, outside of Chicago, according to E. E. Crabtree, Great States city manager, who with Don Knapp, publicist, guided the campaign for the date at the Fischer. Allowed a percentage of the advance sales, the veterans did a fancy job, headed by the chapter's president, a leading Danville newspaperman. Thus, generous publicity was assured, especially since the chapter's percentage was used for markers of deceased members' graves.

Chapter Holds Reunion Dinner

The veterans planted display cards in prominent downtown spots where tickets were on sale and members contacted friends for direct purchases. Girl was employed by the chapter to make phone calls for reservations, with a boy on bicycle delivering orders made thusly. In the lobby, in advance, theatre artist, Gene Douglas, constructed a realistic dugout furnished with sandbags, machine guns, rifles, helmets and other souvenirs contributed by the vets. Uniformed sentries stood guard with an officer in trench helmet on hand to sell tickets.

Another highlight proved to be a reunion dinner of the chapter on the same night of the New York premiere, a few days ahead of the local date. Though many difficulties were encountered, since the chapter's annual reunion took place in February, Crabtree and Knapp worked it out successfully, with members coming from distant parts. Present were city officials, regiment dignitaries, among others, and featured at the gathering was the national broadcast of the New York occasion, after which the picture was screened. In attendance was a member of the regiment who had survived three wounds and 13 operations. He was engaged by the theatremen to make personal appearances a week ahead, to speak of the many regimental heroes he knew personally.

Ushers were dressed in uniforms borrowed from the National Guard, and the top laugh-getter had two ushers, also in uniform, doing K. P. duty by peeling potatoes in a downtown window, some 30 bushels stacked up for atmosphere. Card tiein copy read: "If I didn't have to do K. P. I'd go to see," etc. Prominent priest consented to speak about famed Father Duffy, regimental chaplain, at Sunday service in advance. The clergyman also praised the purposes of the benefit arrangement.

The military aspect of the picture was emphasized in the lobby and front decoration with sandbags, bursting bombs, etc. Uniformed sentries did guard duty. On opening night, campaign was climaxed with a parade of the uniformed guardsmen, Rainbow Veterans, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars to the theatre where a salute was fired to officially open the engagement.

Hensler Used Legion Mailing List

Since the American Legion, in Lexington, Ky., is prominent in civic and social affairs, Lew Hensler, tied in closely with the organization for his date, at Schine's Ben Ali, the Legion supplying names of hundreds of most active members. Cards were addressed to these, copy including an endorsement from the National Commander. In addition, the Legion in uniform paraded to the theatre with band, where a concert was held.

Hensler notified every local church of the engagement and reports a number of pulpit announcements as a result. For street attention, Lew constructed a tank mounted on a bicycle and pedalled about town, the rider enclosed within the bally measuring seven feet by five, painted a war gray and carrying special one-sheets.

In Jackson, Tenn., Manager J. R. MacEachron, planted a boy peeling potatoes in a Main Street location to plug the date at the Paramount. Poster alongside carried notice the potato-peeler was so punished for going A. W. O. L. Top publicity was a newspaper story on local resident who served as officer in the regiment during the war. The veteran made good copy and was invited to the opening. Announcements of the date were made at meetings of all local soldier outfits, commander of the National Guard unit urging attendance.

Legion Commander Golden Guest

The distinction of having Ray Kelly, National Commander of the American Legion, as the honor guest at a special screening goes to Manager Jay Golden, RKO Palace, Rochester, the showing sponsored by the county post of the Legion. Present also was Frank E. Gannett, nationally-known Rochester newspaper publisher, in addition to other Legion heads and city officials. Cocktail party following the screening was broadcast over WHAM and WREC.

Legion members paraded to the theatre on opening night, headed by a past commander and veteran of the 69th, and post drum and bugle corps which played selections out front. On stage, the veteran was presented to the audience, after which he threw the switches to start the engagement.

For date at the Paramount, Middletown, N. Y., Manager Harry C. Stowell promoted the National Guard to let him have motorized units of field equipment for display out front on opening day, with uniformed sentries on duty. In the evening the Guard paraded to the theatre, where Stowell had a man on the marquee playing a large spot on the crowds. Paraders were headed by Guard band which played out front before entering the theatre. As the guardsmen came down the aisles projectionist played floodlights over auditorium for added effect.

then ruling most of central Europe, realized that sooner or later that they would have to go to war with the Turks. Cavalry played the decisive role in war in those days, and the Turks admittedly had the best horses. Emperor Ferdinand, planning a hundred years ahead, devised a plan to breed cavalry horses superior to any others in the world.

Story of Lippizan

He imported six of the finest white Arabian stallions. And from Spain, Denmark, the Tyrol and other parts of Europe he gathered 30 of the biggest, strongest black mares to be found. His idea was to breed lightning speed with endurance and stamina. Lippiza, near Trieste, was selected for the breeding grounds. Thus the strain gets its name.

When Turkey ultimately did try to invade Austria, the Hapsburg cavalry mounted on Lippizans, was so superior, the invaders were driven out of Europe.

When Archduke Ferdinand was slain at Sarajevo and the world was embroiled in war again, the Lippizans once more galloped to battle under the Austrian flag. But when the war was over, Lippiza became part of Italy and what was left of the famous breed was moved to a stud farm in Styria.

All of this colorful history could not be squeezed within a single motion picture, and Herczeg wisely hasn't tried to.

Helen Gilbert, daughter of a Cleveland music publisher, who made her screen debut as the school teacher in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring gathered up a continental camera crew and staff in London, Paris and Vienna and started photographing the riding school exhibitions. The famous Lippizans were being photographed for the first time. When this work was completed, he turned his lens to work on background shots about the old city, photographed the breeding farm with the animals at play and then found a picturesque railroad station needed for one sequence of the filmplay.

But the Nazis had taken Austria, and a few days later Herczeg was arrested by the Gestapo, suspected of espionage. His films were seized on shipboard and taken to Berlin and his wife and non-German camera crew also were thrown into jail. Rosson, in his enthusiasm for recording local color, had taken his camera into a military area.

When Rosson finally was released after 34 days in solitary confinement, he was taken to the office of Chief Grusa, head of the Gestapo in Graz. There he saw three members of his camera crew. "I didn't know you fellows were arrested, too," he exclaimed. The "grip," "electrician" and "carpenter" merely grinned and turned back their coat lapels, revealing the badge of the Gestapo.

With the recovered films and other shots taken by a German associate, Rosson finally was ready to return to Hollywood, and Edward L. Marin, director of the picture launched the fictional production.

In addition to the screenplay for "Florian," Herczeg wrote "montage." One sequence covering the start of the World War with the assassination of Archduke Ferdi-

ROUND TABLERS PROTEST UNFAIRNESS OF REVIEWS

Newspaper Picture Criticism Gets Further "Going Over" in Round Table Discussion

Brought out into the open by Julian Tuthill's recent article on "stream-line" reviewing, the discussion in these pages, started in last week's issue, continues as other members make themselves heard. The method employed and explained by the Hartford Times drama critic, leans more to the objective in motion picture reviewing, along the lines of the style employed variously by representative papers in other sectors.

Of the two Round Tablers who now "take the floor," Vic Gauntlett, long-time advertising head of the Evergreen Theatres, Seattle, Wash., is unequivocally for the reportorial style advocated by Tuthill. While Bill Johnson, of the Opera House, Millinocket, Me., does not go so far as to favor the reporter method in its entirety, he feels that the opinion of the reviewer should be limited to a personal viewpoint, and so expressed.

Gauntlett Votes "Yes"

Here is what Gauntlett has to say about it:

"I vote 'Yes' on Julian B. Tuthill's 'stream-line' reviewing.

"I have always been a strong advocate that pictures should be reviewed by critics and not criticized. I have yet to find the critic on any newspaper who is broadminded enough to properly criticize motion pictures in a sensible, logical and legitimate manner. Whether he be a critic or an individual, he has certain likes and dislikes in entertainment.

"He may like grand opera and not comedies. He may like musical comedies and not dramas. After all, motion pictures, unlike any other form of amusement, have their appeal directly to the masses of people and not to the classes.

"When a critic finds himself in a position of not liking a picture personally, he then should resort to reviewing it from the standpoint of the reaction of the audience who are there because they like that style of picture.

Pleads for Less Publicity

"It is indeed a great injustice by critics, whether on the air or in publications, who have a large following, to tear down productions which have cost millions of dollars to make. The trouble with the motion picture business today is the fact that we have too many critics. We would be better off from an exhibitors standpoint by having less publicity instead of more.

"Right off the reel, the exhibitor is faced now with the problem of having to sell the public on an attraction which for months in advance they have been told was an attraction not worth seeing. The exhibitors already have their money invested in this attraction, and thousands of people in each city would enjoy it. Yet they don't believe the local advertising because weeks in advance they have listened to some so-called critic telling them to stay away.

"I often wonder how far newspapers would get in securing big advertising from department stores if they allowed a member of their staff to go out and criticize some merchandise that the store was advertising, saying it was not worth the money. Yet, after all, the film is a merchandise that the exhibitors are selling to the public the same as any merchandise in stores.

McKIBBIN GIVES AWAY LIVE BABY FOR "BABY"

As good as it ever was, says Russ McKibbin of the live baby giveaway stunt, used this time on "Brother Rat and a Baby" at the Royal, Guelph, Ontario. Heralds plugged gift to "some deserving couple", resulting in smash midweek grosses. Toronto papers picked up the item.

"The public today are all too critical to find little flaws in pictures. A great majority of them seem to delight in going to a motion picture just to pick flaws rather than to enjoy it. This attitude, no doubt, has been brought upon them by reading and listening to critics. They then go around telling friends to show how smart they are.

Calls for Critical Curbing

"If we only had one critic to contend with from the local newspaper, it wouldn't be so bad, but when we have hundreds of them sitting in our audience, picking to show to pieces, then it is a bad situation.

"I fully realize that motion pictures have entered into the field to such an extent that the newspapers consider it a service to their readers to notify them about the attractions, but they should do it by proper reviewing of the reaction of the attraction on the audience and not on their own personal opinion.

"Thank the Lord, in Seattle we do not have any critics in the three daily newspapers here. We have reviewers who tell their story in a straight-forward manner along the same line as suggested by Julian Tuthill. They realize that after all the critics' opinion is only one man's opinion, and I defy any motion picture company to make any attraction that all audiences will claim is great. There will always be some skeptics who will pick it to pieces.

"The worst part of these criticisms is that it places one man in the tremendous power of wielding his influenece over thousands. This is indeed a great injustice and something that, for the good of the industry, should be curbed."

Johnson Questions Ratings

Ratings by stars, bells, and suchlike by reviewers who take it upon themselves to assay a picture's values, is unfair, adds Bill Johnson in pointing out the weaknesses of such ratings by critics who, he indicates, take in too much territory in setting down their opinions.

Johnson gives his side as follows:

"I think pictures can be 'reported' objectively only to the extent of the indisputable statistics on each production—the title, cast, director, producing company, type of production, running time, etc. Certain of these, in all fairness, should be published in small type in any report on a motion picture.

"But from there on, and this is the most important part, anything said about a picture should be honestly expressed as the personal viewpoint of the reviewer and nothing more. What the reader wishes to find out is, in nearly every case, the degree to which a picture is interesting, amusing and entertaining. Since these factors depend as much on the person viewing the picture as on the picture itself, no reviewer can possibly pass arbitrary judgment on a picture. He can not say, 'This is good; that is bad.' He can only say, 'I liked this; I did not like that.'

"It all adds up to the fact that the good reviewer will write subjectively about a picture—show how it impressed him. From what he says the reader will decide for himself whether he would also like or dislike the picture.

Finds Magazine Reviews Unfair

"The rating of pictures by stars, bells, or in some similar manner is therefore unfair. The reviewer sets himself up as a judge and assigns each picture to a definite category. But in every case the basis of his judgment must be his own personal reactions, or at best those of some particular group. Rating a show as a four-bell picture means disregarding the fact that to some it is no more than a one-bell affair, and vice versa.

"One man's meat is another man's poison. The average fan looking over the reviews doesn't care particularly what the rest of the world thinks of a particular show. He wants to know whether it will prove entertaining and amusing to him or not. And the fact that some reviewer thought it was worth four-stars is no proof that it will be.

"To my way of thinking, the worst type of reviews are those such as are printed in news magazines like Time, although I will admit that they are often very effective in influencing the moving picture habits of a great many people. Time follows its usual reportorial style and thousands of its regular readers, relying on the magazine's admirable reputation for accurate reporting, takes whatever it says as an irrevocable decision from the gods.

Favors Able Reviewing

"The catch is that motion pictures, like any other form of entertainment, must appeal to the emotions as well as the intellect if they are to be successful. How powerful this appeal is to be, depends quite a lot on the personal tastes of the individual who sees it, and there are as many variations of personal taste as there are individuals in the world.

"That is why I feel that if a review is to be successful, the writer must refrain from saying, "This was the best gag," or "that situation was banal." His attitude should always be, "this is the way to looked to me . . . as such my reactions may make interesting reading . . . but it is not for me to pass judgment . . . that is something every individual must do for himself."

"In general I am in favor of reviewing pictures. When they are well done they are the surest means of informing the public on new pictures," the Round Tabler concludes.

INDEX

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

IME MARCHES ON!

THE VATICAN OF PIUS XII

GREATEST ACHIEVEMENT IN NEWSREEL HISTORY!

Scoring another first, The March of Time this month brings to your screen one of the greatest stories in newsreel history, the first complete motion pictures of the Vatican and Vatican City.

For years newsreel makers have sought to take their cameras into the Vatican because they know that hundreds of millions of people throughout the world are deeply interested in this center of Christianity.

Made with the full cooperation of the Vatican, after long months of negotiation, March of Time's "The Vatican of Pius XII" is an outstanding journalistic triumph.

Already more than 400 first-run theatres are giving feature billing to this timely and exclusive issue of the March of Time, "The Vatican of Pius XII."

Every Four Weeks

—you get from The March of Time a boxoffice story with a boxoffice title. And with each new issue, as more and more of your fans get "The March of Time habit" and audiences grow, the series adds new strength to your boxoffice.

That is why theatre managers today sell each new issue of The March of Time in their newspapers and on marquees as a feature attraction!

THE MARCH OF TIME

PRODUCED BY THE EDITORS OF TIME

LOOK WHAT'S COOKIN'. . .

• A tropical whirlwind of laughter and lilting rhythm is on the way . . . with radio's favorite funsters, Bing and Bob, battling for the love of Dorothy beneath those palpitating palms.
